Art History (ARTH)

Subject-area course lists indicate courses currently active for offering at the University of Louisville. Not all courses are scheduled in any given academic term. For class offerings in a specific semester, refer to the Schedule of Classes (https://csprd.louisville.edu/ps/ps_class/EMPLOYEE/PSFT_CS/c/COMMUNITY_ACCESS.CLASS_SEARCH./x/?state=62dab551a0d600a5e8237359c50704e59007&duo_code=sjUx20STj21bWVE-0371YDjrlmfmgv0)

500-level courses generally are included in both the undergraduate- and graduate-level course listings; however, specific course/section offerings may vary between semesters. Students are responsible for ensuring that they enroll in courses that are applicable to their particular academic programs.

Course Fees

Some courses may carry fees beyond the standard tuition costs to cover additional support or materials. Program-, subject- and course-specific fee information can be found on the Office of the Bursar website (<https://louisville.edu/bursar/tuitionfee/university-fees/>).

ARTH 501. Advanced History of Graphic Design 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): BFA Graphic Design Candidacy or faculty consent.Description: Seminar course covering the development of graphic design from 1800 to present. Topics include key movements, technologies, ethics, and general issues relating to design theory and criticism. Cross-listed with DES 501.Note: Formerly taught as Advanced History and Issues of Graphic Design.

ARTH 523. History of Performance Art 3 UnitsPrerequisite(s): ARTH 270 and ARTH 325; or permission of instructor; or graduate standing.Description: History of Performance Art is designed as an advanced upper-level seminar that investigates the international, historical developments in Performance Art after World War II. It considers the experimental strategies and ideological aims of visual artists who used their bodies as the primary vehicle of expression, information, communication, and social change. Performance Art has had the dubious distinction of being the most censored art medium, and since the 1960s artists have been continually arrested and fined for their work. This is a highly significant social fact, one that draws attention to Performance Art's particularly disruptive aesthetic codes and materials-emphasizing presentation over representation; intersubjective, human bodies over inanimate objects; and temporarily over spatiality.

ARTH 524. Installation Art 3 UnitsPrerequisite(s): ARTH 270 and ARTH 325; or permission of instructor; or graduate standing.Description: An advanced exploratory seminar that investigates a contemporary art form as well as a thorny art-historical problem: the term "installation" now functions both as a loose descriptor for a myriad of contemporary artworks (having supplanted terms such as Assemblage and Environment) independent of medium and context, as well as a general and comprehensive art-historical genre, a circumstance that has its own compelling historical development. The course is designed so that students can grapple with a central issue for contemporary art-the definition of a burgeoning critical term for art history.

ARTH 525. Representations of Trauma in the Visual Arts 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Occasionally OfferedPrerequisite(s): ARTH 270 and ARTH 325; or permission of instructor.Description: This seminar examines the changing relationships between trauma and its representation in the twentieth century. Beginning with the Holocaust, the course charts a trajectory from this most profound of collective traumas, to the refinement of clinical definitions of trauma (e.g., PTSD) in the wake of the Vietnam War, to the development of trauma studies in the humanities in the 1990s, to the recent "pictorial turn" within scholarship on trauma. This historical framework will be brought to bear upon the dynamics of how trauma and visuality have been approached by scientists, scholars, and artists.Note: Cross-listed with WGST 525.Note: May be used to satisfy the Period/Area 2 - after-1750 requirement.

AST 517. Anthropology of ChinaTerm Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): Graduate standing or permission of the instructor.

Description: It is widely acknowledged that China is a rising power in the global political economy. However, with the coexistence of tradition and modernity, the nature of Chinese culture and society remains heavily debated. This course explores a wide range of topics and issues that constitute the socio-cultural fabric of contemporary mainland Chinese society. These topics include, but are not limited to, family, gender, ethnicity, religion, education, politics, and economics. Our investigation will focus on two broad themes: 1) the unity and diversity of Chinese society, and 2) the continuity and change that took place from late traditional China to the present. The goal of this course includes learning various aspects of Chinese culture and society, studying diverse anthropological approaches to the study of China, and examining the political dimensions of representation.

Note: Cross-listed with ANTH 517.Note: Students may not receive credit for this course and ANTH 317 or AST 317.

AUDI 600. Anatomy and Physiology of Hearing3 Units

Description: Intensive study of the gross aspects of anatomy associated with normal hearing, including the peripheral and central auditory system. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

AUDI 604. Essential Techniques in Audiometry for Pediatrics and Adults3 Units

Description: The epidemiology of hearing loss. Basic tests of auditory function including pure tone audiometry, speech audiometry and immittance. Focus on both pediatric and adult aspects of testing, with additional topics related to newborn testing. Principles of masking and pathologic correlates of hearing loss discussed.

AUDI 605. Introduction to Audiological Techniques and Rehabilitation3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Description: This course provides an introduction to the evaluation, screening and habilitation/rehabilitation of adults and children with hearing impairment. Topics include tests of auditory function, effects of auditory pathology, and amplification.

Note: Cross-listed with CMDS 405.

AUDI 606. Acoustics and Speech Acoustics3 Units

Description: Study of sound and its measurement. Relationship of sound to human hearing. Speech acoustics and perception of speech.

AUDI 608. Auditory Anatomy and Physiology II3 Units

Description: Structure and function of the central auditory system with an emphasis on electrophysiologic assessment of cortical and subcortical pathways for clinical purposes.

AUDI 610. Clinical Clerkship I1 Unit*Fee: An additional $125.00 is charged for this course.Description: A two-semester sequence of directed observation in the audiology clinic. Participation in interviewing patients, eliciting a complete history, preparing written technical reports and record keeping. Includes observations during the first semester. 1 credit hour each semester.Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

AUDI 612. Pathology of the Auditory-Vestibular System3 Units*Description: Study of pathology of the auditory-vestibular system with special reference to clinical symptomatology. Etiology, epidemiology, pathogenesis, diagnosis and treatment of auditory-vestibular disease and injury.

AUDI 614. Clinical Techniques in Audiology I1 Unit*Fee: An additional $25.00 is charged for this course.Description: Part one of a two-semester sequence of directed laboratory exercises. Laboratory exercises will give students hands-on experience with clinical techniques designed to evaluate hearing.

AUDI 615. Clinical Techniques in Audiology II2 Units*Fee: An additional $25.00 is charged for this course.Description: Part two of a two-semester sequence of directed laboratory exercises. Laboratory exercises will give students hands-on experience with clinical techniques designed to evaluate hearing.

AUDI 618. Instrumentation and Electronics in Audiology2 Units*Description: Basics of electronic circuitry, especially in audiometric instrumentation and amplification systems. Includes instrumentation calibration, trouble-shooting and repair. Analog, analog-digital hybrid, and digital signal processing.

AUDI 619. Audiologic Counseling & Patient Communication1 Unit*Description: An exploration of the communication and counseling relationship between student clinician and patient. Students will have an opportunity to develop and refine effective communication and counseling via interaction with standardized patients and personal reflection.

AUDI 620. Clinical Clerkship II2 Units*Fee: An additional $125.00 is charged for this course.Description: A three-semester sequence of introductory level clinical audiometry under the aegis of an experienced clinician. Mastery of basic skills such as threshold determination for pure tones and speech stimuli, masking, auditory discrimination measurements, tympanometry, and calibration. 2 credit hours each semester.Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

AUDI 621. Audiologic Rehabilitation3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyDescription: Management strategies for hearing loss beyond the hearing aid. Topics include auditory training, speech reading, communication repair strategies, counseling, adjustment to hearing aids, assistive listening devices and cochlear implants.

AUDI 622. Electrophysiologic Techniques in Audiology3 Units*Fee: An additional $25.00 is charged for this course.Description: Principles of biological potentials, signal averaging, amplification and filtering. Clinical utility of the brainstem auditory evoked response with attention to diagnostic techniques and peripheral hearing assessment.

AUDI 623. Audiologic Electrophysiology II1 Unit*Description: Clinical acquisition of middle and late auditory evoked potentials with applications for both diagnostic and rehabilitative ideology. Equal emphasis is placed on acquisition and interpretation of those evoked responses.

AUDI 624. Amplification Technology3 Units*Fee: An additional $25.00 is charged for this course.Description: Principles of amplification electronics, electroacoustics and acoustics in audiologic (re)habilitation. Real ear measurements. ANSI specifications. Earmold acoustics. Modifying acoustical parameters.

AUDI 625. Audiologic Counseling1-2 Units*Prerequisite(s): Students in Doctor of Audiology Program.Description: Review of the complex psychosocial and emotional aspects arising within families in the presence of both pediatric and adult hearing loss. Examination of counseling approaches for "non-professional" counseling.

AUDI 626. Assessment and Management of Vestibular Disorders 3 Units

Description: Study of the contribution of the vestibular system to balance and orientation. Technologies and procedures for assessing the dizzy patient. Management of vestibular disorders.

AUDI 627. Tinnitus3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Description: The purpose of the course is to provide an overview of tinnitus applications in Audiology. Topics will include defining tinnitus and discussing theoretical foundations, tinnitus in relation to hearing impairment, psychological mechanisms involved with tinnitus, tinnitus in the various age populations, drug induced tinnitus, music's effect on tinnitus, acoustic shock, assessing and evaluating a patient's tinnitus for clinical decision making, hearing aids/cochlear implants as treatment for tinnitus, additional intervention methods, misophonia, phonophobia, management of tinnitus in patient's across the lifespan, emerging approaches to treating tinnitus, and business management considerations when treating patient's with tinnitus.

AUDI 628. Differential Diagnosis in Audiology2 Units

Description: Interpreting the audiologic test battery. Integrating audiologic test results with other diagnostic procedures (i.e., radiologic, neurologic, pathologic, etc). Advanced concepts in test construction, delivery and interpretation. Using test results to plan remediation.

AUDI 629. Cochlear Implants and other Implantable Hearing Devices4 Units

Description: Comprehensive Study of cochlear implantation, BAHA and middle ear implantation including: general anatomy, device components, patient selection and evaluation, speech coding strategies, mapping/programming, troubleshooting, and verification.

AUDI 630. Amplification Selection and Fitting3 Units

Fee: An additional $25.00 is charged for this course.

Description: Determining candidacy and benefit from amplification. Selecting appropriate amplification systems and options including assistive listening devices and implantable technologies. Review of current technologies and their clinical efficacy. Introduction to the business aspects of hearing aid dispensing.

AUDI 632. Professional Issues in Audiology2 Units

Description: Overview of the social, political, ethical, and economic climate in hearing health care delivery. Interprofessional relationships and responsibilities. Supervision of other professionals. Licensure and certification.

AUDI 634. Electrophysiologic Techniques in Audiology II 1 Unit

Description: This course introduces brain imaging techniques for cognitive brain research in Audiology with a focus on late auditory event-related potentials (ERP's). The course will focus on four main areas: 1) theory; 2) experimental design; 3) data collection, analysis, and interpretation; and 4) the use of late potentials in audiological practice. Basic tutorials on EEG and ERP software packages will include ASA and EEGLAB.

AUDI 635. Audiology Internship4 Units

Fee: An additional $125.00 is charged for this course.

Description: A three-semester sequence of supervised patient care in a variety of sites closely associated with the university. Student clinicians will assume increasing responsibility for the full range of basic and intermediate level audiologic procedures and interpretation. 4 credits each semester.

Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

AUDI 636. Pediatric Audiology3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Summer Only

Description: The purpose of this course is to provide an overview of Pediatric Audiology. Topics will include review of the Joint Committee on Infant Hearing position statement, medical evaluation and management of hearing loss in children, newborn hearing screening, hearing test protocols (BOA, VRA, CPA), evaluation of hearing loss in children with special needs, evaluation of speech perception in children, APD testing, hearing aid fitting, the role of the test assistant, communication approaches and communication bias, working with multicultural/multilingual families, counseling and collaboration with children and families, ANSD and mild/unilateral hearing loss.

AUDI 638. Educational Audiology3 Units

Description: Overview of current management options for the (re)habilitation of children with hearing loss, including: educational issues, amplification, FM systems, classroom listening systems and counseling.

AUDI 640. Special Topics in Audiology1-3 Units

Description: An elective course designed to focus on specific topics in audiology. Subject matter to be determined by the faculty and students. May be repeated to a limit of 6 credits.

AUDI 642. Gerontologic Audiology3 Units

Description: A broad study of the human aging process at the cellular, organ, system and social levels with respect to the hearing process. Study of the hearing-impaired elderly in a social context with consequences for case management.

AUDI 646. Advanced Topics in Medical Audiology4 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Description: This course will introduce students to a variety of content areas related to advanced topics in medical audiology. Topic areas include special populations and diseases in vestibular audiology, imaging, intraoperative monitoring, surgical and medical aspects of implantable devices, and inter-professional practice and education.

AUDI 648. Hearing Science I3 Units

Prerequisite(s): Permission of instructor.

Description: The first in a two-course sequence in Hearing Science. It will survey contemporary theory and research in audition, with emphasis on modern mathematical and psychological methods. Major topics will include the anatomy and physiology of the auditory system, measurement and control of sound, auditory signal analysis, and basic auditory abilities such as detection, discrimination, and masking. Note: Cross-listed with PSYC 646

AUDI 650. Research Methods3 Units

Description: Students will design a clinical research project through: a critical review of the literature, determination of appropriate research design, and a statistical review. Students will prepare an application for the Human Studies Protection Program Office.

AUDI 652. Prevention of Hearing Loss2 Units

Description: Focuses on the effect of noise on the auditory system, noise measurement and abatement, hearing conservation programming, OSHA standards, etc. The medical-legal aspects of hearing impairment.

AUDI 654. Advanced Auditory Processing3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Fee: An additional $25.00 is charged for this course.

Description: Special study of the central auditory nervous system with attention to normal and disordered auditory function past the auditory periphery (e.g., linguistic, cognitive, and suprathreshold deficit consideration). Assessment and current strategies for management of auditory processing disorders.

AUDI 656. Practice Management in Audiology4 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Description: Organizing, managing and expanding an audiologic practice. Determining costs and fees, accounts management, quality assurance, third-party reimbursement, contracting for services, demographic trends, business and professional ethics, professional liability, marketing, certification and licensure.

AUDI 660. Investigation in Audiologic Practice1-3 Units

Description: Directed course in which students investigate specific clinical problems in audiology. Will include research on a topic of clinical or professional interest. Investigation eventuates in a publishable paper. May be repeated to a maximum of 9 credits.

AUDI 670. Clinical Externship9 Units

Description: A 3-semester sequence of advanced clinical practicum under the direction of a faculty member or preceptor in an external practicum. Each externship is custom-tailored to the interests of the trainee. May involve relocation or travel.

AUDI 679. Independent Study in Audiology1-6 Units

Prerequisite(s): Requires consent of instructor in order to register.

Description: Individualized course with topics determined by student and instructor. May be repeated.

AUDI 680. Special Topics in Audiology1-3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Description: Discussion covering current ideas in audiology as they relate to clinical practice and research. An emphasis is placed on contemporary and/or advanced topics relevant for the more experienced student.

BIOC 545. Nutritional Biochemistry 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Description: Chemistry of amino acids, protein structure and function; nutrient metabolism with an emphasis on how nutrients (carbohydrates, fats and amino acids) provide the chemical building blocks and energy for living systems.

Note: Credit may not be earned in both BIOC 545 and BIOC 645.

BIOC 547. Advanced Biochemistry II 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Prerequisite(s): BIOC 545 Biochemistry of nucleotides and nucleic acids; RNA, DNA and protein biosynthesis, biomembrane phenomena, enzyme properties, kinetics, and control mechanisms; ligand binding.

Description:

Note: Credit may not be earned in both BIOC 547 and BIOC 647.

BIOC 603. Special Topics in Biochemistry 1-4 Units

Prerequisite(s): BIOC 645 and BIOC 647 (or concurrently), or consent of instructor.

Description: Arranged to fit individual needs on topics of current interest or to receive some advanced training or conduct research project.

BIOC 606. Biochemistry Seminar 1 Unit

Description: Both Fall and Spring semesters.

BIOC 611. Techniques in Biomolecular Interactions 4 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Prerequisite(s): Student must be registered in the graduate school.

Description: Biochemical, molecular, and bioinformatic techniques to understand cellular interactions, including chromatin associations that inform DNA structure, editing, and gene expression; protein-protein interactions; and protein: ligand associations that influence enzyme activity.

BIOC 613. Biochemistry Laboratory 2-4 Units

Grading Basis: Pass/Fail

Description: The course will consist of participation in the research programs of two laboratories in the department. A half-semester will be devoted to each laboratory. Pass/Fail grading.

BIOC 619. Research 1-15 Units

Grading Basis: Pass/Fail

Description: Biochemistry research.

BIOC 620. Scientific Method and Grant Writing 2 Units

Grading Basis: Pass/Fail

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Prerequisite(s): Restricted to students in the Biochemistry and Molecular Genetics graduate programs; permission of course director.

Description: This objective of this course is to introduce students to the fundamentals of grantsmanship. The topics incorporate all aspects for grant application process as well as overview of the scientific method, generation of hypotheses, and research design. Student-directed learning is a major component for this course with the summative event being completion of a grant proposal. A reiterative writing process for proposal development will be ongoing throughout the course.

Note: May be repeated once for up to 4 credits.

BIOC 630. Responsible Conduct of Research: Survival Skills and Research Ethics 1-4 Units

Grading Basis: Pass/Fail

Description: The topics covered include 11 areas of Research Compliance training mandated by the NIH for training grants and focuses on contemporary research ethics in biomedical sciences.

BIOC 640. Principles of Biochemistry 5 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Prerequisite(s): Consent of instructor.

Description: Covers general aspects of biochemistry with special emphasis given to areas applicable to dentistry. Topics include protein structure and function; chemistry and metabolism of carbohydrates, lipids, amino acids, and nucleotides; molecular genetics; nutritional biochemistry; calcification; and molecular endocrinology. Clinical conferences keyed to current lecture topics are presented by clinical faculty.

BIOC 646. Nucleic acids and information metabolism	1 Unit	BIOC 662. Biomedical Research Data Analysis Methods	1 Unit
Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring		Term Typically Offered: Summer Only
Description: This course addresses conceptual understanding of molecular biology principles with respect to cellular storage, integrity, control, and use of genetic information, with focus on nucleic acids and protein synthesis. Students must be registered in the graduate school. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)		Prerequisite(s): Currently enrolled graduate students in good standing.
		Description: A lecture and discussion course designed for graduate students desiring to learn the basic statistical methods and data presentation approaches that are used in biomedical research.
		Note: This course requires permission from the instructor.

BIOC 647. Advanced Biochemistry II	4 Units	BIOC 663. High-Throughput Sequencing Data Analysis	3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Spring Only		Term Typically Offered: Fall Only
Prerequisite(s): BIOC 545 or BIOC 645 or consent of instructor.		Prerequisite(s): Students must be registered in the graduate school and are expected to have a basic understanding of molecular biology.
Description: Biochemistry of nucleotides and nucleic acids; RNA, DNA and protein biosynthesis, biomembrane phenomena, enzyme properties, kinetics, and control mechanisms; ligand binding.		Description: Permission from the course director is needed for students not meeting these prerequisites. High-Throughput Sequencing Data Analysis will focus on current issues in bioinformatics, including: next generation sequencing; microRNA and mRNA integrative analysis; epigenetics, metagenomics, personalized genomics, and single cell sequencing.
Note: Credit may not be earned in both BIOC 547 and BIOC 647.		For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)

BIOC 649. Protein Function: from interactions to enzyme control	1 Unit	BIOC 668. Molecular Biology	3-4 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring		Term Typically Offered: Spring Only
Description: This course is focused on the conceptual understanding of biochemical principles related to protein interactions and general enzymology and enzyme function. Students must be enrolled in the graduate school.		Prerequisite(s): Student must be registered in the graduate school.
BIOC 661. Molecular Mechanisms of Toxicology	3 Units	Note: Crosslisted with BIOL 668.
Term Typically Offered: Spring Only		For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
Description: Molecular interactions of drugs and toxicants on cellular processes; including foreign compound metabolism, signal transduction, cell cycle, DNA repair/DNA replication are covered and put in context topics in molecular epidemiology.
Note: Crosslisted with PHTX 661.

BIOC 670. Biomedical Genetics and Genomics3-5 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): Students must be registered in the Graduate School.Description: This course examines the fundamental principles of genetics and genomics as they apply to biomedical research. Topics include: Mendelian, population, quantitative genetics, epigenetics, and bioinformatics. An emphasis will be on reading and critiquing current literature.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)BIOC 671. Scientific Programming in Perl, Python, and R*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): Permission from the instructor.Description: This course covers the basics of programming structures in the Perl, Python, and R programming languages. Topics include unix command line, data types, basic syntax, iterative structures, conditionals, functions, subroutines, file input and output, and development environments. An emphasis will be placed on string manipulation, plot generation, and general bioinformatics approaches.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)BIOC 674. Algorithms in Bioinformatics*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Summer OnlyPrerequisite(s): Permission from the instructor.Description: Advances in molecular biology techniques have brought forth a wealth of information waiting to be mined. Bioinformatics and Computational Biology is a multidisciplinary field bringing together experts in computer science, molecular biology, physics, mathematics, chemistry and other disciplines to form synergistic collaborations. Algorithms in Bioinformatics will focus on the current state of the art programs designed for sequence alignment, database searching, high throughput mapping and alignment approaches, and protein folding prediction. A detailed analysis of the algorithms behind each of these will be explored. The algorithmic techniques discussed will include dynamic programming, hidden Markov models, de Bruijn Graphs, Karlin-Altschul statistics and Bayesian statistics.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)BIOC 675. Cancer Biology*4 Units*Prerequisite(s): BIOC 545 or BIOC 645 or equivalents.Description: A comprehensive course on cancer biology with emphasis on molecular mechanisms and research. Topics will include: the public health impact of cancer, molecular mechanisms of carcinogenesis and metastasis, host-tumor interactions, current and future molecular therapies and prevention, apoptosis, tumor immunology, cancer genetics and genomics, prevention, metabolism in cancer cells, signal transduction, cell cycle, and oncogenes and tumor suppressor genes. There will also be clinical-based lectures.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)BIOC 676. Molecular Evolution and Phylogenetics*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): Permission from the instructor.Description: This course covers the theory, modelling, and applications of molecular sequence analysis, evolution, and phylogenetics with a specific focus on pathogens.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)BIOC 680. Biomolecular Interactions*2 Units*Prerequisite(s): BIOC 645 and BIOC 647 or equivalents.Description: This course examines techniques used to characterize biomolecules and their interactions including surface plasmon resonance, equilibrium dialysis, microcalorimetry, analytical ultracentrifugation, dynamic light scattering and absorption fluorescence and circular dichroism spectroscopies.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)BIOC 816. Bioengineering (BE)

Subject-area course lists indicate courses currently active for offering at the University of Louisville. Not all courses are scheduled in any given academic term. For class offerings in a specific semester, refer to the Schedule of Classes (https://csprd.louisville.edu/ps/ps_class/EMPLOYEE/PSFT_CS/c/COMMUNITY_ACCESS.CLASS_SEARCH.x/?state=62dab551a0d600a5e8237359c50704e59007&duo_code=sjUx20STj21bIWVEU)

500-level courses generally are included in both the undergraduate- and graduate-level course listings; however, specific course/section offerings may vary between semesters. Students are responsible for ensuring that they enroll in courses that are applicable to their particular academic programs.

Course Fees

Some courses may carry fees beyond the standard tuition costs to cover additional support or materials. Program-, subject- and course-specific fee information can be found on the Office of the Bursar website (<https://louisville.edu/bursar/tuitionfee/university-fees/>).

BE 500. Special Topics in Bioengineering3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerDescription: This course will be devoted to topics that usually are not treated in detail in the general curriculum.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

BE 522. Biomedical Acoustics Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Prerequisite(s): BE 420. Description: An introduction to the fundamental principles of physical acoustics with an emphasis on biomedical applications. Major concepts covered include acoustic wave physics, transducers, and ultrasound imaging. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	BE 542. Medical Image Computing Term Typically Offered: Fall Only Prerequisite(s): BE 340 or graduate/professional standing. Description: Fundamentals of 2-D and 3-D image computing, application of image computing algorithms to medical images, enhancement and restoration of 2-D and 3-D medical data, and fundamentals of machine vision and medical data visualization. Students will learn image restoration, computer vision and visualization techniques with applications to medical data through examples and reading papers. Students are expected to work on a team project and write technical reports. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
BE 524. LabVIEW for Bioengineers Term Typically Offered: Fall Only Prerequisite(s): BE 340 or equivalent. Description: This course will introduce students to an intermediate level of LabVIEW (Laboratory Virtual Instrument Engineering Workbench) available from National Instruments (Austin, TX). LabVIEW is the worldwide industry standard graphical programming environment for developing data acquisition, instrument control, and industrial automation software. Students will explore core programming fundamentals common to all programming languages by using LabVIEW software to develop independent programs and data acquisition solutions using a combination of LabVIEW, data acquisition hardware, and standard test instrumentation hardware. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	BE 543. Computer Tools for Medical Image Analysis Term Typically Offered: Summer Only Prerequisite(s): BE 340 or graduate/professional standing. Description: This course covers: 1) Essential computer software that can be used for handling all types of medical data, 2) advanced computer software that is used for medical image analysis, such as segmentation, registration, motion correction, etc., and 3) development of comprehensive computer-aided diagnosis systems based on these ready-to-go software packages. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
BE 530. Machine Learning in Python Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring Prerequisite(s): BE 340 or graduate/professional standing. Description: This course covers programming concepts in Python, machine learning concepts, and application of machine learning into biomedical and other problems using Python. Students will learn about the most applicable Python libraries that deal with different machine learning tools. Students are expected to work on a team project and write technical reports. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	BE 544. Artificial Intelligence Techniques in Digital Pathology Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Description: This course provides both theoretical and practical information about computer vision and AI techniques required to process and analyze microscopic images as a part of the evolving transition to digital pathology. This evolution will enable the use of AI models in pathology to aid pathologists and healthcare professionals in the management and the diagnosis of different diseases. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
BE 540. Machine Learning in Medicine Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring Prerequisite(s): BE 340 or graduate/professional standing. Description: Topics: 1) fundamentals of medical data, 2) application of machine learning models & algorithms to medicine, 3) learning from data & classification of disorders, and 4) overview of health data, collection with sensors, body area networks, brain image data and other publicly available medical applications data. Students will learn about machine learning applications to real world medical data through examples and reading papers. Students are expected to work on a team project and write technical reports. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	BE 552. Introduction to Tissue Engineering Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Prerequisite(s): CHEM 341, BE 354, BE 359, and BE 450. Description: Design, development and clinical application of tissue engineered components, including blood vessels, bone, cartilage, pancreas, liver and skin, for use in the human body. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
		BE 553. Nanoscale Bioengineering: Application and Methodology of Nanobiomaterials in Bioengineering Prerequisite(s): BE 450 or BE 453 or permission of department chair. Description: An introduction to the fundamental principles of nanoengineering with a focus on 1) synthetic methodologies of tailored nanobiomaterials (physical, chemical and electrochemical); 2) nanobiomaterial characterization using advanced analytical, microscopic and spectroscopic techniques; and 3) therapeutic and diagnostic applications. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units

BE 581. Advanced Computer-Aided Design and Manufacturing for Bioengineers 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): BE 340 or by permission of Department Chair.Description: An introduction to the engineering design and manufacturing processes for bioengineering applications with an emphasis on the use of modern computer-based analysis, design and presentation tools as well as manufacturing techniques such as casting, machining, forming and assembly for polymer and metal-based materials.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)BE 593. Independent Study in Bioengineering 1-4 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): Faculty consent.Description: A theoretical or experimental investigation of a problem area related to Bioengineering.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)BE 600. Advanced Topics in Bioengineering 1-6 UnitsPrerequisite(s): Graduate/Professional Standing in Bioengineering or Consent of Instructor.Description: An advanced course in bioengineering topics not covered by regularly scheduled courses.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)BE 601. Bioengineering Seminar 1 UnitPrerequisite(s): Admission to the MS Bioengineering program or the PhD in Interdisciplinary Studies with a Specialization in Translational Bioengineering (ISSTBE-PhD) program.Description: Current research topics in the field of transnational bioengineering will be presented and discussed. Sessions will include guest speakers, student presentations on research projects with interaction and feedback from students and faculty, and critical discussion of scientific literature.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)BE 602. Graduate Internship in Bioengineering 2 UnitsGrading Basis: Pass/FailTerm Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): Admission to Graduate Study, Permission of Department Chair, and Permission of Director of Career Services.Description: Supervised professional experience in industry at the graduate level. This course provides the structure and focus for the graduate intern field assignment to ensure that the assignment is appropriate and consistent with the intern's graduate course of study and professional development. Not to be counted towards meeting the requirements for a degree. May be repeated for credit.Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)BE 603. Bioengineering Research Ethics 2 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Fall, SpringPrerequisite(s): Admission to the PhD in Interdisciplinary Studies, specialization in Translational Bioengineering program or by permission of Department Chair.Description: Complex ethical issues facing bioengineers will be addressed, including principles of beneficence, autonomy & justice and current regulations addressing research ethics. Discussion will also cover patient rights & privacy, animal experimentation, scientific misconduct, intellectual property, authorship, safety & risk, and bioethical research and technological development.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)BE 604. Introduction to Artificial Intelligence in Bioengineering 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Fall OnlyDescription: This course covers: 1) fundamentals of artificial intelligence, 2) solving problems by searching agents, 3) concepts of knowledge, logic, reasoning, and planning in AI, 4) machine learning concepts and different forms of learning and applications, and 5) data privacy and ethics in AI. Students will learn different ways to solve problems by automated searching approaches and using learning agents in machine learning with different applications in medicine. Students are expected to work on a team project and write technical reports.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)BE 605. Tissue and Molecular Biology Techniques Laboratory 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Summer OnlyPrerequisite(s): BE 359 or equivalent.Fee: An additional $100.00 is charged for this course.Description: Introduces students to techniques used in tissue and molecular biology laboratories including cell and tissue culture, cell assays, cell and tissue imaging techniques and sterilization techniques.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)BE 611. Cardiovascular Dynamics 3 UnitsPrerequisite(s): Graduate or professional standing in Bioengineering.Description: Review of basic cardiovascular physiology. Application of basic engineering principles, including electrical and mechanical analog models to describe cardiovascular function and data acquisition and analysis techniques to develop medical devices and instrumentation.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)BE 621. Bioinstrumentation 4 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): Graduate/Professional Standing; and BE 354 and BE 423 or equivalent(s); or consent of instructor.Description: Analysis and design of Bioinstrumentation. Basic circuitry, electronics and laboratory techniques including sensors, transducers, biopotentials, amplifiers, measurement and safety.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

BE 630. Biomechanical Computer Modeling and Simulation of Human Movement 3 UnitsPrerequisite(s): Graduate/professional standing; BE 354 or equivalent.Description: Development and application of musculoskeletal computer modeling and simulation techniques to analyze human movement biomechanics.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)BE 639. Injury Biomechanics 3 Units*Prerequisite(s): ME 649 or BE 354 or equivalent, or permission of the instructor.Description: Application of mechanics to the study of human injury. Response of the human body to injurious conditions. Injury tolerance of the human body. Applications to child abuse, transportation safety and the medico-legal environment.Note: Cross-listed with ME 639.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)BE 640. Computational Methods for Medical Image Analysis 3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): BE 340 or graduate/professional standing.Description: This course covers the theory of stochastic and geometric models of medical imaging, including spatial interaction models, intensity models, and geometric shape models. The emphasis is on understanding the underlying mathematics in a practical sense. This course is restricted to Graduate Students in the Speed School of Engineering.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)BE 645. Artificial Intelligence and Radiomics 3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): Graduate/professional standing; BE 340 or equivalent course.Description: Artificial intelligence is comprehensively a bundle of cutting edge computational algorithms that basically learn the patterns in the provided data to make prediction on new unseen data. Radiomics is almost a new terminology in the radiology area which means the extraction of large number of features from different kinds of medical images. This course couples both artificial intelligence and radiomics together to extract meaningful hidden quantitative data to be used in real word medical applications. This course also presents the basic concepts and applications of artificial intelligence in the computer aided diagnostic systems.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)BE 650. Advanced Biomaterials 3 Units*Prerequisite(s): BE 450 or consent of instructor.Description: Advanced topics on the use of biomaterials, and their performance, in reconstructive surgery. Specifically skin, nerve, bone, and soft tissue regeneration utilized for burn patients, cancer patients, and trauma patients.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)BE 654. Advanced Physiology for Engineers 3 Units*Prerequisite(s): BE 354.Description: This course provides an in-depth view of the fundamental principles of how biochemistry and physiology are integrated. Emphasis is placed on the physiologic mechanisms for feedback control of physiologic function in humans.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)BE 658. Rehabilitation Engineering and Assistive Technology 3 Units*Prerequisite(s): ME 649 or BE 354 or equivalent, or permission of instructor.Description: Introduction to rehabilitation engineering and assistive technology. Medical aspects of disability, assistive technology applications and current rehabilitation research.Note: Cross-listed with ME 658.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)BE 668. Translational Bioengineering teaching Practicum 2 Units*Prerequisite(s): Admission to Translational Bioengineering PhD program and permission of course instructor.Description: A guided learning experience in inquiry-based instructional techniques and best practices in engineering education that includes field experience as a graduate instructor.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)BE 670. Cellular Mechanobiology in Cancer 3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): BE 359, BE 450.Description: This course will focus on biophysical and bioengineering aspects of mechanotransduction, the process through which living cells sense and respond to their mechanical environment. Specifically, this class will discuss the role of these mechanisms in the context of cancer tumorigenicity and spread. Students will learn how mechanical inputs to cells influence both subcellular biochemistry and whole-cell behavior. They will also study newly engineered technologies for force manipulation and measurement in living cells, and synthetic strategies to control the mechanics and chemistry of the extracellular matrix.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)BE 683. Artificial Organs 3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): Graduate/professional standing in bioengineering.Description: Bioengineering design of artificial organ replacement systems and their clinical usage. Commercially available systems analyzed for mass transfer efficiency; biomechanics and hemodynamics; and size and efficiency of the device.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

BE 685. Modeling of Biological Phenomena3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Summer OnlyPrerequisite(s): Graduate/professional standing in Bioengineering, BE 359 and BE 354 or equivalent(s).Description: Introduces basic concepts of the development, analysis, and evaluation of mathematical models of biological systems. Demonstrates how modeling related to genetic, biochemical, physiological, and/or ecological systems is performed by combining both biological and mathematical information, with the goal to apply these techniques in the field of translational bioengineering. Sessions will include critical discussion of scientific literature and student presentations on a research project with interaction and feedback from students and faculty.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)BE 691. Bioengineering Non-thesis Design/Research Project*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): Graduate/Professional standing in bioengineering.Description: Design or research project involving a literature search, project planning, design objectives, fabrication and/or experimentation, analysis, technical report writing, and oral presentation under a faculty member's guidance. Final technical report is required to be presented orally to course instructor and faculty mentor for graded evaluation.Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Master of Science Thesis in Bioengineering*1-6 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): Graduate or Professional school standing and permission of Department Chair.Description: Experimental or design-based thesis research performed as part of Master of Science degree requirements. A written thesis is required to be presented and defended orally and submitted to the faculty for approval.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)BE 699. Dissertation Research*3-15 Units*Prerequisite(s): Successful completion of the Translational Bioengineering PhD qualifying exam.Description: Original research activity in an appropriate translational bioengineering discipline, under the direction of a graduate faculty member affiliated with PhD in Interdisciplinary Studies with a Specialization in Translational Bioengineering (ISSTBE PHD).For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

Bioethics (BETH)

Subject-area course lists indicate courses currently active for offering at the University of Louisville. Not all courses are scheduled in any given academic term. For class offerings in a specific semester, refer to the Schedule of Classes (https://csprd.louisville.edu/psps/ps_class/EMPLOYEE/PSFT_CS/c/COMMUNITY_ACCESS.CLASS_SEARCH./x/?state=62dab551a0d600a5e8237359c50704e59007&duo_code=sjUx20STj21bIWVEU)

500-level courses generally are included in both the undergraduate- and graduate-level course listings; however, specific course/section offerings may vary between semesters. Students are responsible for ensuring that they enroll in courses that are applicable to their particular academic programs.

Course Fees

Some courses may carry fees beyond the standard tuition costs to cover additional support or materials. Program-, subject- and course-specific fee information can be found on the Office of the Bursar website (<https://louisville.edu/bursar/tuitionfee/university-fees/>).

BETH 601. Independent Study in Bioethics 1-3 Units

Prerequisite(s): Consent of instructor.

Description: Independent study in Bioethics.

BETH 605. Selected Topics in Bioethics 1-3 Units

Prerequisite(s): Admission to a graduate program in Applied Philosophy or Health Care Ethics, or consent of instructor.

Description: Selected topics in Bioethics (variable content). May be repeated for credit when topic changes.

BETH 621. Ethical Theory 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): For students enrolled in BETH 621/PHIL 621, admission to a graduate program in Applied Philosophy or Health Care Ethics, or consent of instructor.

Description: Recent developments in ethical theory, such as examination of the status of moral facts, moral realism, impartiality and personal attachments, or moral agency.

Note: Cross-listed with PHIL 521, PHIL 621.

BETH 636. Philosophy of Science 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Even Years

Prerequisite(s): For students enrolled in PHIL 536, junior standing or consent of instructor; for students enrolled in BETH 636, admission to a graduate program in Applied Philosophy or Health Care Ethics, or consent of instructor.

Description: This course provides an introduction to the main philosophical questions concerning scientific knowledge and methodology.

Note: Cross-listed with BETH 636.

BETH 680. Foundations of Bioethics 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall Odd Years

Prerequisite(s): For students enrolled in BETH 680/PHIL 680, admission to a graduate program in Applied Philosophy or Health Care Ethics, or consent of instructor.

Description: Grounding in the major theories and methods of bioethical decision-making, including contemporary controversies about the role of theory, principles, cases, narrative, and virtues.

Note: Cross-listed with BETH 680 and PHIL 580.

BETH 681. Current Controversies in Health Care Ethics 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall Odd Years

Prerequisite(s): For students enrolled in BETH 681/PHIL 681, admission to a graduate program in Applied Philosophy or Health Care Ethics, or consent of instructor.

Description: Topics in health care ethics currently attracting the most attention in both professional and public discussions. A variety of viewpoints on these topics will be considered.

Note: Cross-listed with BETH 681 and PHIL 581.

BETH 682. Health and Social Justice 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall Even Years

Prerequisite(s): For students enrolled in BETH 682/PHIL 682, admission to a graduate program in Applied Philosophy or Health Care Ethics, or consent of instructor.

Description: An interdisciplinary approach to a wide array of issues pertaining to health and health care that arise at the intersection of gender, race, sex, disability, class, and culture.

Note: Cross-listed with PHIL 682, WGST 682, PHIL 582, WGST 582.

BETH 683. Race, Medicine, and Health 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered

Prerequisite(s): Admission to a graduate program in Applied Philosophy or Health Care Ethics, or consent of instructor.

Description: An in-depth study of racial disparities in health outcomes and in interactions with the health care system, and an examination of initiatives within the system to advance racial equity

Note: Cross-listed with PHIL 683.

BETH 684. Clinical Ethics3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring Odd YearsPrerequisite(s): For students enrolled in PHIL 684/PHIL 684, admission to a graduate program in Applied Philosophy or Health Care Ethics, or consent of instructor; for students enrolled in PHIL 584, junior standing or consent of instructor.Description: Application of ethical principles, virtues, and cases in the context of clinical care, with a practical approach toward ethics consultation and conflict resolution. Credit may not be earned for more than one of PHIL 584, PHIL 684, and PHIL 684, except by consent of instructor and program director.Note: Cross-listed with PHIL 684 and PHIL 584.Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

BETH 685. Health Care Ethics Internship3 Units*Grading Basis: Pass/FailTerm Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): Admission to an Applied Philosophy or Health Care Ethics graduate program or consent of instructor.Description: Students will complete a community internship and present their results to their peers and program faculty.Note: Cross-listed with PHIL 685.Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

BIOL 510. Behavioral Ecology Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered Prerequisite(s): BIOL 363. Description: Evolution of behavioral adaptations for survival and reproduction; topics will include foraging, aggression, mate choice, mating strategies, and sociality. Note: Credit may not be earned for both BIOL 510 and BIOL 610.	3 Units	BIOL 519. Ichthyology Prerequisite(s): BIOL 363. Fee: An additional $40.00 is charged for this course. Description: Introduction to anatomy, physiology, ecology, distribution, economic importance, and classification of major groups and representative local species of fish. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)		BIOL 522. Aquatic Ecology Prerequisite(s): BIOL 363. Description: Ecological processes in aquatic environments with primary emphasis on lakes and reservoirs. Note: Credit may not be earned in both BIOL 522 and BIOL 622.	4 Units
BIOL 511. Behavioral Endocrinology - CUE, WR Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered Prerequisite(s): BIOL 329 or consent of instructor; BIOL 465 recommended. Description: Interactions of hormones, brain, behavior. Approved for the Arts and Sciences upper-level requirement in written communication (WR). Note: Credit may not be earned in both BIOL 511 and BIOL 611. Course Attribute(s): CUE - This course fulfills the Culminating Undergraduate Experience (CUE) requirement for certain degree programs. CUE courses are advanced-level courses intended for majors with at least 90 earned credits/senior-level status.	3 Units	For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm) BIOL 540. Metabolic Biochemistry Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered Prerequisite(s): BIOL 329 and CHEM 342. Description: An advanced study of metabolic pathways including synthesis of macromolecules (proteins, nucleic acids, lipids, carbohydrates), mechanisms of metabolic control and utilization of metabolic intermediates. Note: Credit may not be earned in both BIOL 540 and BIOL 640.	3 Units

BIOL 542. Gene Structure and Function - WR 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): BIOL 330 or equivalent, or consent of instructor.

Description: Advanced topics in genetics of prokaryotes and eukaryotes, including chromosome structure and function, and gene regulation.

Note: Approved for the Arts & Sciences upper-level requirement in written communication (WR).

Note: Credit may not be earned for both BIOL 542 and BIOL 642.

BIOL 548. Experimental Design and Analysis - CUE, WR 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): BIOL 350 or BIOL 651.

Description: Move principles of sound experimental design, analysis and presentation from recognition to active vocabulary. Students completing the course can serve as statistical consultants for moderately complex statistical designs.

Note: Approved for the Arts and Sciences upper-level requirement in written communication (WR).

Course Attribute(s): CUE - This course fulfills the Culminating Undergraduate Experience (CUE) requirement for certain degree programs. CUE courses are advanced-level courses intended for majors with at least 90 earned credits/senior-level status.

BIOL 552. Evolutionary Medicine 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered

Prerequisite(s): BIOL 240, BIOL 242, BIOL 372, or BIOL 409, or equivalents.

Description: In-depth analyses at the interface of evolutionary biology and the health sciences using readings from the primary literature. Format involves lectures, discussion, and a library-based research project.

Note: Credit may not be earned in both BIOL 552 and BIOL 652.

BIOL 553. Chronic Disease Biology 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered

Prerequisite(s): BIOL 329 and BIOL 372.

Description: The course will cover the biological bases of chronic disease, with an emphasis on the mechanisms of disease causation and the evolution of these mechanisms.

BIOL 555. Microbial Ecology 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): BIOL 357, or BIOL 485, or consent of instructor.

Description: Interrelationships between microorganisms and their environments.

Note: Credit may not be earned in both BIOL 555 and BIOL 655.

BIOL 560. Ecology of Urban and Suburban Landscapes 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Odd Years

Prerequisite(s): BIOL 363 or GEOS 365.

Description: Effects of cities and suburban sprawl on air and water chemistry, microclimate, fragmented landscapes, and responses of biotic and human communities to these conditions that degrade or promote urban resilience, adaptation and sustainability.

BIOL 562. Ecosystems Ecology 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Even Years

Prerequisite(s): BIOL 363; an advanced ecology course recommended.

Description: The transformations of matter and energy that link plant, animal and geochemical cycles. Implications for resource management also discussed.

Note: Credit may not be earned in both BIOL 562 and BIOL 662.

BIOL 563. Population and Community Ecology 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Prerequisite(s): BIOL 363.

Description: Introduction to population dynamics and species interactions in aquatic and terrestrial ecosystems. Review of underlying ecological theory and its applications for conserving biodiversity.

Note: Credit may not be earned in both BIOL 563 and BIOL 663.

BIOL 567. Conservation Biology 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Prerequisite(s): BIOL 263 or BIOL 363 or permission of instructor.

Description: This course provides an overview of theory and practice of conservation. Topics include biodiversity, habitat loss, the effects of habitat changes on populations, and the design and establishment of reserves. Among other things, students will learn: 1) key terms and concepts related to biodiversity, 2) significant threats to biodiversity and efforts to mitigate them, and 3) practical and socioeconomic elements of conservation biology.

Note: Credit may not be earned for both BIOL 567 and BIOL 667.

BIOL 569. Evolution 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): BIOL 363.

Description: Offers a comprehensive overview of evolution and provides students with a review of issues that make up this critical discipline.

Note: Credit may not be earned in both BIOL 569 and BIOL 669.

BIOL 571. Selected Topics Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered Description: Contents to be indicated in schedule of courses. Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	BIOL 601. Graduate Seminar II Prerequisite(s): Graduate status. Description: Focuses on developing presentation skills for graduate students in all fields of biology. We will also discuss how to evaluate presentations. Each student will make a presentation on research in their area of interest and will respond to audience questions. Students will provide written feedback to each other on their presentations. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	1 Unit
BIOL 572. Selected Topics-Laboratory Description: Contents to be indicated in schedule of courses. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	1-4 Units	BIOL 610. Advanced Behavioral Ecology Prerequisite(s): BIOL 363. Description: Evolution of behavioral adaptations for survival and reproduction; topics will include foraging, aggression, mate choice, mating strategies, and sociality. Note: Credit may not be earned for both BIOL 510 and BIOL 610. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	4 Units
BIOL 591. Biology for Teachers I Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered Prerequisite(s): Experience in teaching biology or biological principles in elementary, middle or secondary school. Description: Teaching pre-college biology with emphasis on curriculum content, laboratory procedures, and process skills. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	BIOL 611. Advanced Behavioral Endocrinology Prerequisite(s): Graduate standing. Description: Interactions of hormones, brain and behavior. Lecture concurrent with BIOL 511; more advanced material through requirement of independent study or research project. Note: Credit may not be earned in both BIOL 511 and BIOL 611. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	4 Units
BIOL 593. Experimental Cell Biology for Teachers Prerequisite(s): BIOL 240, BIOL 242, BIOL 244, BIOL 329, BIOL 330, and BIOL 331 or equivalent; or consent of instructor. Description: Lecture and lab activities focused on inquiry-based investigations at the cellular level suitable for secondary school classroom. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	BIOL 612. Advanced Endocrinology Prerequisite(s): BIOL 465. Description: Chemical regulation in animals, primarily mammals. Lectures concurrent with BIOL 512; more advanced material through requirement of independent study or research project. Note: Credit may not be earned in both BIOL 512 and BIOL 612. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	4 Units
BIOL 594. Experimental Botany for Teachers Prerequisite(s): BIOL 240, BIOL 242, BIOL 244, BIOL 329, BIOL 330, BIOL 331 or equivalent, or consent of instructor. Description: This course is designed for pre-service and classroom teachers of the life sciences from elementary through high school. To increase teachers' abilities to teach sciences, especially botany, using inquiry-oriented strategies. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	BIOL 614. Advanced Ornithology Prerequisite(s): Consent of instructor. Description: Evolution, morphology, diversity, ecology and behavior of birds. Lab stresses field identification of birds. Lecture concurrent with BIOL 514; more advanced material through requirement of independent study or research project. Note: Credit may not be earned in both BIOL 514 and BIOL 614. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	4 Units
BIOL 600. Graduate Seminar I Prerequisite(s): Graduate status. Description: Covers professional development for graduate students in all fields of biology. Topics include the following: time management, how to collect and record data, data management, communication with advisor and advisory committee, finding a research question, grant proposals and funding, scientific ethics, use of graphics, writing and reviewing scientific papers, and careers and interviews. Each student will write a short grant proposal, review a scientific paper, and make a short oral presentation. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	1 Unit

BIOL 615. Advanced Environmental Physiology 4 Units

Prerequisite(s): BIOL 240, BIOL 242 and BIOL 244 (or equivalent); or permission of department.

Description: Study of the physiological, morphological, behavioral and biochemical responses by eukaryotic organisms (primarily animals) to major physical and chemical factors of their environment. Lectures concurrent with BIOL 515; BIOL 615 has additional requirements (because it is a 4-credit hour class) through the completion of an independent study or research project.

Note: Credit may not be earned in both BIOL 515 and BIOL 615.

BIOL 619. Environmental Entomology 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): BIOL 382, or consent of instructor.

Description: Advanced topics in insect systematics, ecology, and applied entomology.

BIOL 622. Advanced Aquatic Ecology 5 Units

Prerequisite(s): BIOL 363.

Description: Ecological processes in aquatic environments with primary emphasis on lakes and reservoirs. Lectures concurrent with BIOL 522; more advanced material through requirement of independent study or research project.

Note: Credit may not be earned in both BIOL 522 and BIOL 622.

BIOL 633. Advanced Physiological Plant Ecology 5 Units

Prerequisite(s): BIOL 523 and BIOL 563.

Description: A study of chemical, physical, and biological processes involved in plant ecology.

BIOL 635. Advanced Chemical Ecology 4 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Description: This course will explore the remarkable world of chemical ecology. Where ecological outcomes between or among individuals are influenced or determined directly or indirectly by chemicals produced by individuals. A key focus will be the chemical ecology of plants. Though we will also explore chemical ecology in animals as well. Considerable ecological information is derived from chemicals produced by organisms both to other members of the same species or to a different species, and affect both natural and sexual selection. We will use an interactive discussion/seminar-style to interrogate the primary literature for current knowledge of how chemical cues influence a diverse array of ecological interactions. From the African savannas to galling insects in our own backyard. Students will have flexibility to choose their own research topics to pursue focused critical thinking and hypothesis generation. Discussions will span a range of disciplines including genetics, molecular biology, biochemistry, natural products, ecology, and evolution. Graduate students will be required to write a publication-quality review paper or meta analysis on a topic related to chemical ecology.

Note: Students may not receive credit for both BIOL 435 and BIOL 635.

BIOL 640. Advanced Metabolic Biochemistry 4 Units

Prerequisite(s): BIOL 329 and CHEM 342.

Description: An advanced study of methods of metabolic pathways including synthesis of macromolecules (proteins, nucleic acids, lipids, carbohydrates), mechanisms of metabolic control and utilization of metabolic intermediates.

Note: Credit may not be earned in both BIOL 540 and BIOL 640.

BIOL 641. Advanced Medicinal Plant Biochemistry 4 Units

Prerequisite(s): BIOL 640 or consent of instructor.

Fee: An additional $40.00 is charged for this course.

Description: An advanced detailed study of biosynthesis and bioactivity of specialized plant metabolites (secondary metabolites). Topics will include aspects of general plant metabolism as well as specialized metabolism pathways (alkaloids, terpenes, and phenolics) and will include a survey of approaches as they relate to discovery of bioactive plant metabolites and a review of known plant metabolites used to treat human diseases/disorders.

BIOL 642. Advanced Gene Structure and Function 4 Units

Prerequisite(s): BIOL 330 or equivalent.

Description: Advanced topics in genetics of prokaryotes and eukaryotes, including chromosome structure and function, and gene regulation. Lectures concurrent with BIOL 542; more advanced material through requirement of independent study or research project.

Note: Credit may not be earned in both BIOL 542 and BIOL 642.

BIOL 643. Advanced Developmental Biology4 Units

Description: Developmental biology is the study of how multicellular organisms process from a single cell to their adult forms. This simple statement, however, belies the incredible complexity of the process, which involves the coordinated actions and interactions of tens of thousands of genes, millions of molecular signals, and, in humans and other large mammals, tens of trillions of cells. This course highlights critical themes in animal development, including cell division; cell differentiation; and morphogenesis, and covers specific topics such as developmental anatomy; embryo development; axis formation, organ, tissue, and limb development; and cell-cell communication. The course also briefly addresses the similarities and differences in developmental strategies among animals and other multicellular organisms. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

BIOL 644. Global Change Ecology4 Units

Description: Human causes of global-scale changes in climate, air and water resources, and biodiversity, and impacts on people; approaches to addressing these problems that promote sustainable societies. Graduate students will attend lectures with undergraduates taking BIOL 440 but will be expected to attend weekly discussions of primary literature and course material. In addition, graduate students will be expected to write a literature review on a topic relevant to the course subject matter.

Note: Cross-listed with BIOL 440.

BIOL 645. Stem Cell Biology4 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall Even Years

Prerequisite(s): Graduate standing.

Description: This course provides an overview of different topics in stem cell biology. Students will learn about stem cell fundamentals, applications, and topics related to stem cells. In addition, students will be exposed to both primary and review literature and will engage in discussions and presentations throughout class.

Note: Formerly offered as BIOL 390.

BIOL 648. Advanced Experimental Design and Analysis4 Units

Prerequisite(s): BIOL 350 or BIOL 651 or permission of instructor.

Description: Move principles of sound experimental design, analysis and presentation from recognition to active vocabulary. Students completing the course can serve as statistical consultants for moderately complex statistical designs.

BIOL 650. Advanced Biostatistics4 Units

Prerequisite(s): MATH 180 or MATH 205; an introductory course in statistics; or consent of instructor.

Description: Application of statistical methods commonly used in life sciences, with emphasis on interpretation of experimental data.

BIOL 651. Advanced Biostatistics II3 Units

Prerequisite(s): BIOL 650.

Description: Advanced biostatistics involves interpretation of experimental data using statistical software. Topics include experimental design and ANOVA, ANCOVA, MANOVA, logistic analysis, logistic regression, and log linear models.

BIOL 652. Advanced Evolutionary Medicine4 Units

Description: In-depth analyses at the interface of evolutionary biology and the health sciences using readings from the primary literature.

Format involves lectures, discussion, and a library-based research project. Lecture concurrent with BIOL 552; more advanced material through requirement of independent study or research project. BIOL 552 does not carry graduate credit.

Note: Credit may not be earned in both BIOL 552 and BIOL 652.

BIOL 653. Advanced Chronic Disease Biology4 Units

Description: The course will cover the biological bases of chronic disease, with an emphasis on the mechanisms of disease causation and the evolution of these mechanisms.

BIOL 655. Advanced Microbial Ecology4 Units

Prerequisite(s): BIOL 357 or BIOL 485 or consent of instructor.

Description: Interrelationships between microorganisms and their environments. Lecture concurrent with BIOL 555; more advanced material through requirement of independent study or research project for students enrolling in BIOL 655.

Note: Credit may not be earned in both BIOL 555 and BIOL 655.

BIOL 660. Advanced Ecology of Urban and Suburban Landscapes4 Units

Description: Effects of cities and suburban sprawl on air and water chemistry, microclimate, fragmented landscapes, and responses of biotic and human communities to these conditions that degrade or promote urban resilience, adaptation and sustainability.

BIOL 662. Advanced Ecosystems Ecology 4 Units

Description: The transformations of matter and energy that link plant, animal and geochemical cycles. Lectures concurrent with BIOL 562; more advanced material through requirement of independent study or research for students enrolling in BIOL 662.

Note: Credit may not be earned in both BIOL 562 and BIOL 662.

Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

BIOL 663. Advanced Population and Community Ecology 4 Units

Description: Introduction to population dynamics and species interactions in aquatic and terrestrial ecosystems. Review of underlying ecological theory and its applications for conserving biodiversity. Lecture concurrent with BIOL 563; more advanced material through requirement of independent study or research project.

Note: Credit may not be earned in both BIOL 563 and BIOL 663.

Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

BIOL 664. Research Methods in Ecology 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): BIOL 401 and BIOL 402.

Description: Introduction to experimental design, data collection and quantitative analyses. Field and laboratory research, statistical tools and critical evaluation data.

BIOL 667. Advanced Conservation Biology 4 Units

Prerequisite(s): BIOL 363 or permission of instructor.

Description: This course provides an overview of the theory and practice of biological conservation. Topics include biodiversity, habitat loss, the effects of habitat changes on populations, and the design and establishment of reserves. Among other things, students will learn: 1) key terms and concepts related to biodiversity, 2) significant threats to biodiversity and efforts to mitigate them, 3) practical and socioeconomic elements of conservation biology.

BIOL 668. Molecular Biology 3-4 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Prerequisite(s): Student must be registered in the graduate school.

Description: Students are expected to have a basic understanding of molecular biology principles and protein structure. Best preparation for succeeding in the course is previous course in biochemistry and experience with reading scientific literature. Permission from the Course Director is needed for students not meeting these prerequisites. This course examines the fundamental principles of molecular biology as they apply to mechanisms controlling gene expression. Topics include: transcriptional and post-transcriptional regulation of gene expression; RNA and miRNA biology; and protein synthesis and regulation. An emphasis will be on student-directed learning requiring completion of pre-class reading, and in-class discussion of current literature.

Note: Crosslisted with BIOC 668.

BIOL 669. Advanced Evolution 4 Units

Prerequisite(s): BIOL 363.

Description: Offers a comprehensive overview of evolution and provides students with a review of issues that make up this critical discipline. Lecture concurrent with BIOL 569; more advanced material through requirement of independent study or research project.

Note: Credit may not be earned in both BIOL 569 and BIOL 669.

BIOL 671. Special Topics 3 Units

Description: Topics to be indicated in schedule of courses.

Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

BIOL 672. Selected Topics-Laboratory 1-4 Units

Description: Contents to be indicated in the schedule of courses.

BIOL 673. Experimental Design and Analysis 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): BIOL 651 or an equivalent.

Description: Discussion and analysis of practical issues arising in biology research, including interpretation of literature and applied exercises involving experimental design, analysis, and presentation.

BIOL 682. Advanced Entomology 4 Units

Description: Examination of morphology, physiology, behavior, evolution and ecology of the major groups of insects. A collection of common insect families is required. The laboratory will include observations on live and preserved animals and possible field trips. Students will learn to: 1) use terms and concepts that describe the diversity of insects, 2) compare and contrast major insect groups with respect to structure and function, and 3) collect and prepare museum-quality specimens for scientific study. A project involving the student's interest in a particular group of insects and formal paper are required.

BIOL 688. Evolution of Disease Seminar 1 Unit

Description: Students will be exposed to current research in Disease Evolution through discussion of papers, making presentations, and attending seminars by faculty members, students, and visiting speakers. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

BIOL 689. Seminar 1 Unit

Grading Basis: Pass/Fail

Description: Reports on personal research and on current literature, with a critique of the research and of the presentation. Attendance, but not course registration, is required of all graduate biology majors during each semester of residence.

Note: Only 2 hours of credit may be accumulated.

Note: Graded on pass-fail basis.

BIOL 690. Thesis Research 1-6 Units

Grading Basis: Pass/Fail

Prerequisite(s): Consent of major professor.

Description: Research on MS thesis project. Grade shall be deferred by the major professor until evaluation of the thesis by the student's committee.

Note: Graded on pass-fail basis by the examining committee.

Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

BIOL 691. Independent Research 1-6 Units

Prerequisite(s): Consent of instructor.

Description: Independent field or laboratory research on a problem not related to thesis or dissertation.

Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

BIOL 692. Independent Study 1-6 Units

Prerequisite(s): Consent of instructor.

Description: Independent library research on a problem not related to the thesis or dissertation.

Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

BIOL 700. Dissertation Research 1-9 Units

Grading Basis: Pass/Fail

Prerequisite(s): Consent of major professor.

Description: Research on dissertation project. Grade shall be deferred by the major professor until evaluation of the dissertation by the student's committee.

Note: Graded on a pass-fail basis by the examining committee until evaluation of the dissertation by the student's committee.

Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

Business Analytics (MSBA)

Subject-area course lists indicate courses currently active for offering at the University of Louisville. Not all courses are scheduled in any given academic term. For class offerings in a specific semester, refer to the Schedule of Classes (https://csprd.louisville.edu/ps/ps_class/EMPLOYEE/PSFT_CS/c/COMMUNITY_ACCESS.CLASS_SEARCH./x/?state=62dab551a0d600a5e8237359c50704e59007&duo_code=sjUx20STj21bIWVEU)

500-level courses generally are included in both the undergraduate- and graduate-level course listings; however, specific course/section offerings may vary between semesters. Students are responsible for ensuring that they enroll in courses that are applicable to their particular academic programs.

Course Fees

Some courses may carry fees beyond the standard tuition costs to cover additional support or materials. Program-, subject- and course-specific fee information can be found on the Office of the Bursar website (<https://louisville.edu/bursar/tuitionfee/university-fees/>).

MSBA 600. Master of Science in Business Analytics 0 Units

Description: Master of Science in Business Analytics - billing course

MSBA 605. Python for Analytics Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring Prerequisite(s): Admission to MSBA degree program. Description: This course introduces essential general programming concepts and techniques to a data analytics audience with no prior programming experience. Students will learn the aspects of programming that can support business analytics with hands on programming including accessing data, creating informative data graphics, writing functions, debugging, and organizing code. Examples are drawn from the problems and programming patterns often encountered in data analysis. It will use a common analytics programming language such as Python. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	MSBA 625. Storytelling with Data Term Typically Offered: Fall Only Prerequisite(s): Admission to MSBA degree program. Description: This course is a data visualization and business presentations course specifically designed for professionals in the field of business analytics. Throughout the semester, you will develop your ability to organize, visualize, and present data driven messages that are professional, clear, concise, and persuasive. By the end of the course, you will enhance your ability to communicate with and about data in multiple business and professional contexts: formal individual presentations, team-based presentations, and informal one-on-one and small group interactions. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	1.5 Units
MSBA 610. Data Visualization with Power BI Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring Prerequisite(s): Admission to MSBA degree program. Description: Students will become well versed in ingesting data sources and selecting the appropriate visualization to unearth the underlying story within large data sets. Students will be utilizing Data Analysis Expressions, DAX, to create various formulas to help in analyzing multiple data sources. By the end of the class, students will build a PowerBI model to be presented to the class in a professional scenario. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	1.5 Units	MSBA 630. Modern Data Management Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring Prerequisite(s): Admission to MSBA degree program. Description: This course provides an introduction to issues, principles, and technologies of modeling and using organizational data. It covers concepts and skills for developing, accessing, and administering relational databases, and formulating and executing complex queries. It also discusses the role of data management technologies and practices in an organizational setting and how such technologies and practices may impact business strategy, business processes, and organizational structure. This course has a strong hands-on component. The course will make extensive use of a leading relational database management software and structured query language (SQL). For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
MSBA 615. R for Analytics Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring Prerequisite(s): Admission to MSBA degree program. Description: This course provides an intensive, hands-on introduction to the R programming language. The student will learn the fundamental skills required to acquire, manage, transform, manipulate, and visualize data in a computing environment that fosters reproducibility. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	1.5 Units	MSBA 635. Predictive Analytics Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring Description: This course builds on the MSBA 620 course by introducing more advanced topics in analytics. This course challenges and teaches students how to use powerful statistical tools (e.g., SmartPLS, SAS, and SPAA) to handle data that come in a variety of forms and sizes in more complex, less structured business situations. Students will participate in extensive hands-on work solving realistic business problems. This course may guide students with handling advanced regression analysis that deals with real-life models and interaction variables, time series analysis, and topics such as PLS path modeling. After taking this course, students should: 1) Approach business problems data analytically; 2) think systematically whether and how data can help make better informed decisions; 3) be able to interact competently with business analytical tools; and 4) have had hands-on experience mining data. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
MSBA 620. Statistical Foundations of Business Analytics Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring Description: This course provides comprehensive understanding of analytical fundamentals. Students will learn business problems, the types of data required to address problems, and solution estimation. Students will learn how to setup and test the efficacy of a business strategy by setting up experiments, analyzing data, and making business decisions. The course will provide a basic understanding of some advanced analytical techniques. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units

MSBA 640. Decision Models3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Description: This course trains students to turn real-world problems into mathematical and spreadsheet models and to use such models to make better managerial decisions. This is a hands-on course that focuses on modeling business problems, turning them into spreadsheet models and using tools like Solver to obtain solutions to these managerial problems. The course focuses on two classes of models, optimization and simulation. The application areas are diverse and they originate from problems in finance, marketing and operations. We cover problems such as how to optimize a supply chain and how to price products when faced with demand uncertainty. Topics covered include linear and linear integer programming, nonlinear programming and evolutionary solver, simulation and optimization, multi-period linear programming and Monte Carlo simulation.

MSBA 645. Applied Machine Learning3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring

Description: Data mining draws on statistics, artificial intelligence and machine learning to discover novel, interesting and actionable relationships and patterns in large and complex data sets. This course will introduce the student to the fundamentals of data mining, including methodology, data preparation, commonly used predictive models, supervised and unsupervised learning, model comparison and evaluation, and mining of unstructured data such as text. While the emphasis is on solving realistic business problems, the course will also provide a brief background for the various models and techniques introduced in the course. The course follows a learn-by-doing approach in which the students will complete assignments using real world data sets. A leading data-mining tool such as SAS Enterprise Miner will be used extensively in this course.

MSBA 650. Advanced Analytical Tools3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring

Description: The course presents advance business analytics using R. The concepts learned in this class should help you identify opportunities in which business analytics can be used to improve performance and support important decisions. It will teach you important tools that can be used to transform data into high-impact business decisions. Lastly, it should make you alert to the ways that analytics can be used, and misused, within an organization.

MSBA 655. Special Topics: Marketing Analytics1.5 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Description: The use and analysis of data to guide marketing decisions is the focus of this course. The course will focus marketing metrics, their estimation, and use.

MSBA 680. Special Topics in Business Analytics1.5-3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Occasionally OfferedPrerequisite(s): Admitted to MSBA & achieved elective status.

Description: An advanced study of one or more selected topics or issues related to the study of business. Topics or issues could be from a single business discipline such as management or from a combination of business disciplines, such as accountancy and finance.

MSBA 685. Analytics Internship1 Unit*Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Description: The academic objective of the internship program in the Master of Science in Business Analytics program is to provide enrolled students with an opportunity for hands-on business experience where they can apply classroom knowledge in a real-world setting and bring the experiences gained during their internship employment into the classroom. The internship is expected to nominally last for 11 months.

Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

MSBA 690. Analytics Capstone3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Description: Each student assists (as a team member) an organization in the Louisville area to improve some aspects of its business analytics operations. The students develop project in conjunction with key business executive and work to investigate and then create recommended courses of action.

Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

MSBA 691. Deep Learning1.5 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring

Description: Deep learning is a branch of machine learning and AI which uses artificial neural networks to solve complex problems. Deep learning models have already become the state of the art in most text, sound, and computer vision problems. Self-driving cars, expert Go player, and even AI generated art and music are thanks to deep neural networks. These models can be supervised (predicting a labeled target), unsupervised (learning a pattern or structure), or semi-supervised (learning from labeled and unlabeled data) and often requires less pre-processing and feature engineering on the data than other machine learning models. In this class we will start by building neural networks (using Python) against well-known datasets, then we will look at a variety of specialized structures of neural networks that are suitable for different domains. Following that, we will download and use pre-trained models and apply them to our own data sets.

MSBA 692. Pipelines to Insights1.5 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring

Description: This module is project-based and designed to provide the students with applied knowledge of pipeline design in an agile context by fully immersing them in agile ceremonies in a business setting. This class will expose the students to aspects of research, design, data discovery and data extraction, transformation, and landing concepts. Using web-based data sources, the students will gain a combination of hands-on knowledge of the data pipeline process, including real world challenges with designing pipelines for machine learning algorithms. The intent of this practical approach is to help students generate portfolio pieces to show potential employers and help students understand their current strength and weaknesses with machine learning pipelines.

MSBA 693. Advanced Analytics using PySpark1.5 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring

Description: Most organizations use analytics to efficiently provide a better quality experience for their customers. This course challenges students to understand various analytical strategies by participating in extensive hands-on work solving realistic industry problems. Upon completion of this course, students should be able to: 1) understand basic concepts and terminology about Machine Learning ; 2) apply unsupervised learning concepts like clustering and association rules, and supervised learning concepts like regression, decision trees, random forests, gradient boosting for problem solving; 3) identify relevant metrics to choose the best analytics model, and also be able to explain individual member level predictions using SHAP; and 4) communicate your complex analyses and insights to non-technical audience.

MSBA 694. Natural Language Processing1.5 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring

Description: In today's data-driven world, understanding the nuances of text data is becoming increasingly critical for decision-making processes in business. This course aims to provide MSBA students with a comprehensive introduction to Natural Language Processing (NLP) and its applications in business analytics. Through a blend of theoretical and hands-on approaches, students will gain insights into how NLP can solve various challenges in business, such as text mining, sentiment analysis, predictive modeling, chatbot development, and more.

MSBA 695. Cloud Computing1.5 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring

Description: [3:20 PM] Young, Krista This course explores the knowledge and technical aspects of cloud computing solutions across various industry domains. Students will explore the impact of cloud computing in the world today, identify key cloud industries and identify common patterns, and explore the technical aspects of cloud solutions. Students will build cognitive solutions, leveraging AI and data science in cloud solutions in addition to prototyping cloud solution leveraging industry-proven concepts, technologies, and methodologies such as IBM Cloud Garage.

MSBA 696. Prompt Engineering: Unlocking the Power of AI for Business1.5 Units*Term Typically Offered: Summer Only

Description: AI is transforming every industry, and prompt engineering is a foundational skill for the future. This course introduces students to the art and science of prompt engineering?the skill of crafting effective inputs to guide AI tools like ChatGPT, Gemini, and other large language models (LLMs). In this course, students will learn how to create clear, concise, and effective prompts to get the most out of AI tools; Apply AI to Business Challenges: Use AI to solve problems in areas like market research, content creation, and process optimization; Develop Critical Thinking: Understand how to refine prompts iteratively for better results and avoid common pitfalls like bias or ambiguity; and Ethical AI Use: Explore the ethical implications of AI in business and learn to use AI responsibly. Skills students will gain include: Technical Skills: Crafting prompts for AI tools like ChatGPT, Gemini, and more; and Using AI for tasks like data summarization, idea generation, and customer interaction. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

MSBA 697. Business Insights with Large Language Models1.5 Units

Description: This course focusses on hands-on applications to solve complex business problems, enhance data-driven insights, and drive innovation. You'll gain a foundational understanding of generative AI concepts, explore its diverse applications across functions like marketing, finance, and operations, and critically assess its ethical implications. Starting with an introduction to generative AI, the course covers popular tools like ChatGPT, GitHub Copilot, and LangChain, plus advanced techniques such as prompt engineering, retrieval-augmented generation (RAG), and app development for platforms like Android. Through real-world examples, case studies, and demos, you'll gain insight into Large Language Models (LLMs) such as GPT and OpenAI's ChatGPT-4, as well as frameworks like GANs and Transformers, giving you the skills to build AI applications.

MSBA 698. AI Agent Development: Building Intelligent Business Solutions1.5 Units*Term Typically Offered: Summer Only

Description: The course focusses on serverless architecture and direct API interaction ensures students learn modern, scalable development practices. Every project will address real business problems, preparing students for careers in AI and tech-driven industries. This hands-on course teaches students how to design, build, and deploy AI agents using serverless architecture and direct API interactions. Students will learn to create intelligent systems that automate tasks, analyze data, and solve complex business problems. By the end of the course, students will have built their own AI agents from scratch, gaining practical experience in coding, integrating APIs, and deploying solutions in a serverless environment. Students will code their own AI agents from scratch, gaining practical, real-world skills.

to the Schedule of Classes (https://csprd.louisville.edu/psp/ps_class/EMPLOYEE/PSFT_CS/c/COMMUNITY_ACCESS.CLASS_SEARCH.x/?state=62dab551a0d600a5e8237359c50704e59007&duo_code=sjUx20STj21)

500-level courses generally are included in both the undergraduate- and graduate-level course listings; however, specific course/section offerings may vary between semesters. Students are responsible for ensuring that they enroll in courses that are applicable to their particular academic programs.

Course Fees

Some courses may carry fees beyond the standard tuition costs to cover additional support or materials. Program-, subject- and course-specific fee information can be found on the Office of the Bursar website (<https://louisville.edu/bursar/tuitionfee/university-fees/>).

BOHC 610. Healthcare Strategy

1.5 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Description: This course provides the tools necessary for crafting successful strategies for firms operating in the U.S. health sector. As a participant, you will be introduced to the key strategic problems facing the complete set of healthcare organizations and develop strategic frameworks that can be applied in a variety of settings. This course will explicitly cover recent healthcare changes, including COVID-19 and how those can represent both opportunities and threats for participants in a variety of markets.

BOHC 620. Healthcare Systems and Population Health

1.5 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Description: This course builds upon current knowledge and experience as both a consumer and participant in the U.S. healthcare system. This course explores the historical development of the U.S. healthcare system; engage in a comparative analysis of health systems around the world; and use leading causes of morbidity and mortality to highlight the broader system of health and health services in the U.S., including both public health and social policies, which together influence population health outcomes.

BOHC 621. Healthcare Budgeting and Finance

1.5 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Description: This introductory course provides an overview of healthcare budgeting and finance. Students will gain practical skills for budget preparation, cost control, revenue maximization, and financial decision making in healthcare organizations. The course emphasizes critical financial management skills that are essential for supervisory and management roles in healthcare administration. Upon completion, students will be prepared to apply budgeting and finance knowledge to real-world healthcare settings.

BOHC 630. Healthcare Economics

1.5 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Description: This course is designed to introduce students to the ways economists analyze topics related to the production of health and the delivery of health care. Throughout the course, we will consider the role that incentives play in the health care sector by applying economic theory and methods to current issues in health policy, with a particular focus on the U.S. health care system.

BOHC 640. Healthcare Operations

1.5 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Description: This course introduces analytical tools for improving the quality and efficiency of healthcare operations, focusing on topics such as throughput, scheduling, quality control, resource allocation, capacity planning. This course offers benefits both to healthcare employees, who understand the unique setting that healthcare organizations provide, but know less about how operations management principles apply to such settings, and also to people with experience in operations but do not understand the unique healthcare setting. The goal is to give you the tools needed to make effective, operational decisions in healthcare.

BOHC 650. Business Planning for Healthcare Initiatives

1.5 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Description: This course covers five major topics that are integrative elements for healthcare business planning applied entrepreneurially or within larger organizations. It is focused on innovative ideas with flexibility to collaboratively or in teams. Topics include business plan development, customer insights discovery, appreciative inquiry, performance measures scorecards, and lean launchpad methodology.

BOHC 660. Conflict Management and Negotiations in Healthcare

1.5 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Description: A common experience for which many health professionals are not prepared is the amount of conflict that must be managed in a health system. Health organizations are almost designed for conflict, given the competing demands for patient care and financial solvency or even profitability. Professional differences, high stress circumstances, and uncertainty can also exacerbate conflict. To help those in the health care industry exceed and thrive in spite of challenges such as these, this course teaches students how to examine causes of conflict as well as approaches for productive resolution, such as uncovering hidden agendas, finding integrative solutions, maintaining respectful relationships, active listening.

BOHC 670. Compassion Leadership in Medicine1.5 Units

Description: This course will empower the students to become the best compassionate leaders in medicine, with necessary tools, skills, and science behind how compassion improves quality care as well as increase revenue for the healthcare systems. Students will learn from practicing clinicians as well as other healthcare professionals who share passion for helping patients by leading with compassion. At the end of the course, students should be able to articulate what compassionate leadership is and why it is an integral component of great medical care.

Note: Must be accepted to either the MBA program or graduate school.

CHE 502. Biochemical Engineering3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered

Prerequisite(s): CHE 433 (or concurrent) and CHE 441 (or concurrent).

Description: Engineering principles related to operations involving biological processes, e.g., fermentation. Basic microbiology and biochemistry; biochemical reaction mechanisms, kinetics, rate processes, and separation techniques. Applications to foods, pharmaceuticals, and waste treatment, including system design.

CHE 503. Fundamentals of Engineering Examination Review2 Units

Grading Basis: Pass/Fail

Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer

Prerequisite(s): 4th-year standing.

Description: Review of topics covered on eight-hour NCEES Fundamentals of Engineering examination. Not to be counted towards meeting the requirements for a degree.

CHE 509. Environmental Processes and Systems3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer

Prerequisite(s): CEE 309 or CHE 401.

Description: This course examines scientific and engineering aspects of environmental problems, stressing important issues, existing technical solutions and new solutions. The course presents engineering approaches to natural systems and describes techniques to treat/eliminate environmental problems.

Note: Cross-listed with CEE 509.

CHE 520. Modeling and Transport Phenomena3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Prerequisite(s): CHE 433 and CHE 441.

Description: An introduction to the interrelationship of momentum, heat and mass transport focusing on the development of the equations of change through the use of shell balances and their relation to earlier courses in fluids, heat and mass transfer. Some focus will be placed on this using material in the modeling of basic chemical engineering systems.

CHE 532. Advanced Material Science3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer

Prerequisite(s): 90 or more credit hours.

Description: Advanced study of materials science. Topics may include the electronic and atomic structure of materials; properties characterized by electron motion; properties associated with atomic motion; applications and synthesis of fundamentals to several real problems; science of thin films; or other topics selected by the instructor.

CHE 533. Chemical Engineering Safety and Health3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer

Prerequisite(s): 90 or more credit hours.

Description: Overview of regulations and industrial practices, emphasizing chemical hazards, including: industrial hygiene, toxicology, controls and hazards analysis. Safety considerations in process design.

CHE 534. Industrial Waste Management3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer

Prerequisite(s): 90 or more credit hours.

Description: A survey of regulations, generation, control and management of industrial wastes and environmental hazards: airborne, aqueous, solids and hazardous wastes. Course includes guest speakers, site visits and a term project. Design of waste treatment facilities.

Note: Cross-listed with CEE 534.

CHE 535. Pollution Prevention Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): 90 or more credit hours. Description: Multimedia pollution prevention and waste minimization of hazardous and non-hazardous wastes and emissions: toxics use reduction; source reduction; reuse, reclamation and recycling; product life-cycle analysis; economic evaluation; assessments; planning and management. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	CHE 574. Techniques of Research Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): 90 or more credit hours. Description: The design, analysis, and interpretation of experimental results to obtain the desired information within reasonable constraints of time and expense. Testing predictions and making reliable decisions utilizing graphical, numerical, and statistical techniques. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
CHE 550. Kinetics of Polymer Reactions Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): CHE 441 and CHEM 341. Description: Kinetic expressions are developed for several polymer reaction mechanisms including chain, step, ionic and emulsion reactions; copolymerization; polymer reaction engineering; molecular weight distributions; structural considerations; design considerations. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	CHE 581. Chemical Vapor Deposition and Processing Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): CHE 253, CHE 441 and CHE 436 or the consent of the instructor. Description: Theoretical and experimental concepts involved with chemical vapor desposition and processing of advanced and nanomaterials. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
CHE 551. Polymer Science Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): CHEM 341. Description: Introduction to polymer science and engineering. Polymer synthesis, kinetics, structure, and properties; commercial polymers; polymer processing; equipment design. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	CHE 593. Independent Study in Chemical Engineering Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Description: Independent research conducted with the approval and supervision of a faculty member. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	1-6 Units
CHE 562. Process Control Laboratory Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): CHE 461. Description: A laboratory course demonstrating computer simulation and the characteristics of sensing and control devices and their interactions when incorporated into process control systems. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	1 Unit	CHE 594. Special Topics in Chemical Engineering Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Description: An examination of one or more specific areas of Chemical Engineering. Details announced each semester. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
CHE 572. Plant Process and Project Design - CUE Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Prerequisite(s): CHE 471. Description: The design and economic evaluation of a chemical plant, from process definition and flow sheet construction to a cash position diagram and measures of profitability. Course Attribute(s): CUE - This course fulfills the Culminating Undergraduate Experience (CUE) requirement for certain degree programs. CUE courses are advanced-level courses intended for majors with at least 90 earned credits/senior-level status., CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	CHE 595. Master of Engineering Seminar in Chemical Engineering Grading Basis: Pass/Fail Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): Fifth-year standing. Description: Presentation and/or discussion of topics of current interest. This course is available to students enrolled in the professional school, division of higher studies or the Graduate School. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	1 Unit

- CHE 602. Graduate Internship in Chemical Engineering 2 Units
Grading Basis: Pass/Fail
Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer
Prerequisite(s): Admission to Graduate Study, Permission of Department Chair, and Permission of Director of Career Services.
Description: Supervised professional experience in industry at the graduate level. This course provides the structure and focus for the graduate intern field assignment to ensure that the assignment is appropriate and consistent with the intern's graduate course of study and professional development. May be repeated for credit.
Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CHE 603. Tissue Engineering 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Graduate/Professional School standing and BIOL 329, or consent of instructor.
Description: This is an advanced elective course to satisfy the requirements for a graduate level degree in chemical engineering. This course presents an introduction to tissue engineering with an emphasis on the role of biomaterials and bioreactor design.
- CHE 610. Advanced Thermodynamics 3 Units
Description: A comprehensive study of physical and chemical equilibrium, with special emphasis on nonideality.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CHE 612. Nonequilibrium Thermodynamics 3 Units
Description: The extension of classical thermodynamics to include systems in which transport processes are taking place. Examples from the areas of engineering, chemistry, and biological systems are examined.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CHE 618. Computational Chemistry and Molecular Simulation 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Spring Only
Prerequisite(s): Senior or Graduate Standing in Engineering.
Description: Theory and applications of computational chemistry and molecular simulations. Concepts in statistical mechanics and statistical thermodynamics. Connection of electronic and molecular structure to thermodynamic and transport properties. Prediction of chemical and material properties using modern scientific software.
- CHE 620. Transport Phenomena I 3 Units
Description: An integrated study of momentum, thermal energy, and mass transport by molecular and convective mechanisms, with and without generation, for steady-state and unsteady-state conditions, in laminar, boundary-layer, or turbulent flow. Molecular theories of transport properties.
- CHE 621. Transport Phenomena II 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): CHE 620.
Description: Consideration of advanced theories and applications of transport properties as related to heat, mass, and momentum transfer.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CHE 624. Introduction to Rheology 3 Units
Description: Principles and applications of the rheology of polymeric materials. Kinematics of shear and extensional flows. Properties of polymer melts; experimental rheometry. Property predictions based on a variety of generalized Newtonian, linear viscoelastic, co-rotational, and co-deformational models.
- CHE 630. Computational Fluid Dynamics 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall Only
Prerequisite(s): Senior or Graduate Standing in Engineering.
Description: Simulate and visualize fluid flow using applied computational fluid dynamics. Mesh generation, quality check, and resolution. Solver convergence and stability for steady state and unsteady state problems; single and multi-phase systems; heat transfer; laminar and turbulent flows. Post processing and flow visualization.
- CHE 631. Homogeneous Fluid Dynamics 3 Units
Description: Advanced study of momentum transfer in homogeneous fluids. Conservation of matter, momentum, and mechanical energy; ideal flow, creeping flow, laminar flow, turbulent flow, and boundary layer approximations; non-Newtonian fluids.
- CHE 632. Heterogeneous Flow 3 Units
Description: Analysis of two-phase flows of gases, liquids, and solids. Single-particle and multiparticle systems, fluidized beds, bubble beds, drop beds; slug flow, annular flow.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CHE 633. Heat Transfer 3 Units
Description: Advanced problems in the fields of conductive and convective heat transfer.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

- CHE 637. Advanced Stagewise Processes 3 Units
Description: Methods of calculations for complex binary and multicomponent mixtures. Consideration is also given to the design of equipment for these separations.
- CHE 638. Advanced Absorption 3 Units
Description: An examination of absorption as a portion of general mass transfer phenomena. Theoretical and generalized relationships are applied to industrial problems of design.
- CHE 640. Chemical Kinetics and Catalysis 3 Units
Description: A study of catalytic reaction mechanisms and solid catalysts with applications to cracking, reforming, hydrotreatment of fuels, synthesis gas conversion and partial oxidation reactions. Design of catalysts and catalytic reactors for specific applications.
- CHE 641. Advanced Reactor Design 3 Units
Description: Reactor design and performance with emphasis on non-ideal behavior. Includes study of non-isothermal, non-ideal flow homogeneous and heterogeneous reactors. Introduction to heterogeneous catalysis and biochemical reactors. Extensive application of digital computers.
- CHE 650. Membrane Separations 3 Units
Description: Qualitative and quantitative description of membrane separation processes including reverse osmosis and ultrafiltration; membrane synthesis; industrial applications including wastewater treatment, continuous systems, liquid membranes and gas separations. Design of membranes, membrane modules and membrane separation processes.
- CHE 653. Polymer Processing 3 Units
Description: Introduction to polymer melt rheology. Simple model flows. Analysis, modeling, design and control of polymer melt processes such as extrusion, calendaring, fiber spinning, film blowing, injection molding, and blow molding.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CHE 654. Engineering Properties of Polymers 3 Units
Description: The relationships between molecular structure, measurable properties, and design requirements for polymeric materials. Molecular topology; morphology; rheology; mechanical, thermal, electrical, optical, and chemical properties; design and economic considerations in engineering applications.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CHE 655. Processing for Additive Manufacturing 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Spring Only
Prerequisite(s): Graduate Standing.
Description: This course focuses on the principal, commercially-realized AM processes and on the processing and materials science underlying them. Topics include the physics and chemistry of photopolymerization, material extrusion, polymer laser sintering and metal laser melting and the structure and properties of the materials produced by these processes.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CHE 660. Optimization in Control Systems 3 Units
Description: Theory of optimization will be studied and applied to the solution of control problems. Both steady-state and dynamic optimization topics will be considered.
- CHE 661. Control of Dynamic Processes 3 Units
Description: A combined laboratory and seminar course involving advanced process-control experiments and simulation procedures with the necessary concomitant discussion.
- CHE 662. Advanced Process Control 3 Units
Description: Advanced control system design and implementation; feed-forward, cascade, adaptive, multivariable, and constraint control systems; computer process control.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CHE 663. Distillation Dynamics and Control 3 Units
Description: Multicomponent calculations and design of distillation units. Automatic control of these units, sensitivity analysis in control strategy, and dynamic mathematical modeling and simulation of the columns and accessories, including design considerations.
- CHE 671. Bioseparation 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): ENGR 205 or Graduate/Professional school standing or consent of instructor.
Description: This course introduces the basic concept, theory, and applications of bioseparations.
- CHE 686. Chemical Engineering Analysis 3 Units
Description: Mathematical modeling of chemical engineering phenomena leading to total and partial differential equations requiring solution by use of series, transforms, and digital computer techniques. Applications to design and analysis of chemical engineering processes.

CHE 690. Master of Science Thesis in Chemical Engineering 1-6 Units

Description: Experimental and/or theoretical research to be presented in thesis for degree requirement.

Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

CHE 693. Advanced Research in Chemical Engineering 1-15 Units

Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

CHE 694. Special Topics in Chemical Engineering 1-6 Units

CHE 695. Chemical Engineering Seminar 1 Unit

Grading Basis: Pass/Fail

Prerequisite(s): Graduate standing.

Description: Presentation and/or discussion of topics of current interest.

CHE 696. Independent Study in Chemical Engineering 1-6 Units

Description: Independent research conducted with the approval and supervision of a faculty member.

CHE 697. Master of Engineering Thesis in Chemical Engineering 1-6 Units

Prerequisite(s): Graduate/Professional School standing.

Description: A candidate for the Master of Engineering degree, specializing in the field of Chemical Engineering, is required to perform a study, design, or investigation under the direction of a faculty member. A written dissertation is required to be presented and defended orally and submitted to the faculty for approval. This course must be repeated for a minimum total of 6 semester hour credits to satisfy minimum MEng requirements.

Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

CHE 698. Engineering Project Fundamentals I 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): Graduate/Professional School standing.

Description: This is the first of a two course sequence to satisfy the project requirement for the Master of Engineering degree (non-thesis option). This course sequence presents the fundamentals of research proposal writing including literature and background investigation, feasibility evaluation and written and oral communication.

CHE 699. Engineering Project Fundamentals II 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): Graduate/Professional School standing and CHE 698.

Description: This is the second of a two course sequence to satisfy the project requirement for the Master of Engineering degree (non-thesis option). This course sequence presents the fundamentals of business plan development including literature and background investigation, feasibility evaluation and written and oral communication.

Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

CHEM 501. Independent Study 1-3 Units

Prerequisite(s): Minimum GPA of 3.0 overall; minimum GPA of 3.5 in department and at least 18 semester hours credit in the department.

Description: Independent research conducted with the approval and supervision of a faculty member.

Note: Credit may not be applied to an advanced degree in Chemistry.

CHEM 503. Special Topics in Chemistry1-3 Units

Description: An examination of one or more specified areas of Chemistry. Details announced each semester.

CHEM 515. Inorganic Chemistry3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Prerequisite(s): CHEM 342; concurrent enrollment in CHEM 441 or CHEM 465.

Description: Descriptive and theoretical chemistry of the elements.

Note: Credit may not be applied to an advanced degree in Chemistry.

CHEM 527. Spectroscopic Identification of Organic Compounds - WR3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Prerequisite(s): CHEM 342 and CHEM 344.

Fee: An additional $60.00 is charged for this course.

Description: An introductory spectroscopy course designed to provide a realistic experience in organic structure determination using the principal methods of spectral characterization. Emphasis is placed on using mass spectrometry, ¹H and ¹³C nuclear magnetic resonance spectroscopy, and infrared spectroscopy to deduce the molecular structures of organic compounds.

Note: Approved for the Arts and Sciences upper-level requirement in written communication (WR).

CHEM 528. Contemporary Methods of Organic Synthesis and Analysis - CUE2 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Prerequisite(s): CHEM 342, CHEM 344, and (CHEM 425 or CHEM 527).

Fee: An additional $60.00 is charged for this course.

Description: A discovery-based approach to the solution of problems encountered in organic chemical synthesis and analysis.

Note: Credit may not be applied to an advanced degree in Chemistry.

Course Attribute(s): CUE - This course fulfills the Culminating Undergraduate Experience (CUE) requirement for certain degree programs. CUE courses are advanced-level courses intended for majors with at least 90 earned credits/senior-level status.

CHEM 529. Contemporary Methods of Inorganic Synthesis and Analysis - WR2 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Fee: An additional $60.00 is charged for this course.

Description: Prerequisites or corequisites: CHEM 515. A discovery-based approach to the solution of problems encountered in inorganic chemical synthesis and analysis.

Note: Credit may not be applied to an advanced degree in Chemistry.

CHEM 532. Chemistry Education for Secondary Teachers4 Units

Prerequisite(s): CHEM 342 In-depth examination of chemistry content for secondary teachers as aligned with national and state standards.

Description: Inquiry-based laboratory and diverse assessment of core concepts will be developed.

Note: Does not count toward a degree in Chemistry except by departmental permission.

CHEM 545. Biochemistry I3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Prerequisite(s): CHEM 342.

Description: Chemistry of amino acids, peptides, proteins, carbohydrates, nucleotides and nucleic acids; methods of analysis and laboratory synthesis; enzyme properties, kinetics, ligand binding.

Note: Credit may not be earned in both CHEM 545 and CHEM 645, or in both CHEM 545 and CHEM 445.

Note: Credit may not be applied toward an advanced degree in Chemistry.

CHEM 546. Biochemistry Laboratory2 Units

Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered

Prerequisite(s): CHEM 445 or concurrent enrollment in CHEM 545.

Fee: An additional $60.00 is charged for this course.

Description: Application of contemporary laboratory methods of biochemistry including uv/vis spectrophotometry, liquid chromatography centrifugation, gel electrophoresis, mass spectrometry, FTIR, and recombinant DNA techniques.

CHEM 547. Biochemistry II3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered

Prerequisite(s): CHEM 545.

Description: Cellular metabolism of carbohydrates, lipids, amino acids and biomembrane phenomena; RNA, DNA, and protein synthesis.

Note: Credit may not be earned in both CHEM 547 and CHEM 647, or in both CHEM 547 and CHEM 445.

Note: Credit may not be applied to an advanced degree in chemistry.

CHEM 550. Group Theory and its Chemical Applications3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered

Prerequisite(s): CHEM 441 or CHEM 465 Elementary group theory; the use of group theory to treat symmetry; application to atomic structure, molecular structure, spectroscopy, and reaction mechanisms.

CHEM 555. Theory and Application of Computational Chemistry 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): CHEM 441 or CHEM 465 or PHYS 300.

Description: Theory and Application of Computational Chemistry will be a combined elective undergraduate and graduate level course. The purpose of the course is to provide students with the necessary knowledge such that they can examine chemical problems computationally and where required, use computational tools to benefit their own research. The course will emphasize practical applications of computers in chemistry, trends that define the appropriate methods for chemical studies, and elucidation of underlying theoretical methods. As the abstract nature of the field is frequently a learning barrier to many students, the course will incorporate a series of workshops to enable students to build their own computer programs and study chemical problems computationally. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

CHEM 557. Bio-Organic Phenomena 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Spring Only
Prerequisite(s): CHEM 342 (or equivalent).

Description: Completion of CHEM 445, CHEM 545, or equivalent is strongly recommended. Special topics in the biological chemistry area: e.g., chemical carcinogenesis; diet and cancer, food chemistry and polypeptides; proteins; carbohydrates; enzymes; hormone chemistry. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

CHEM 591. Chemistry for Teachers I 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): For graduate education majors; must have experience in teaching chemistry principles in elementary, middle, or secondary schools.

Description: Teaching pre-college chemistry with emphasis on curriculum content, laboratory procedures, and process skills. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

CHEM 620. Optical Spectrochemical Methods of Analysis 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): CHEM 527.

Description: Principles, instrumentation, and applications of atomic and molecular spectroscopic techniques used in the IR, VIS, and UV spectral regions.

CHEM 621. Electroanalytical Chemistry 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): CHEM 527.

Description: Principles of modern voltammetric and potentiometric methods of chemical analysis including fundamental theory, instrumentation, and applications.

CHEM 622. Analytical Separations 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): CHEM 527.

Description: Survey of major instrumental separation methods in chemistry and biochemistry with an emphasis on modern chromatographic techniques.

CHEM 625. Advanced Analytical Chemistry 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): CHEM 527.

Description: A survey of theoretical and practical aspects of modern methods of analysis.

CHEM 626. Special Topics in Analytical Chemistry 1-3 Units
Prerequisite(s): CHEM 528 and CHEM 529, or consent of instructor.

Description: Recent developments in selected areas of Analytical Chemistry.

CHEM 628. Special Topics in Synthesis and Analysis 1 Unit
Prerequisite(s): Completion of, or coregistration in, CHEM 528, or consent of instructor.

Description: Current topics in high resolution NMR, mass spectrometry and organic synthesis.

CHEM 630. Advanced Topics in Chemical Analysis 1 Unit
Prerequisite(s): Completion of, or co-registration in, CHEM 529, or consent of instructor.

Description: A discovery-based approach to the solution of advanced problems in chemical analysis with an emphasis on separations, electrochemistry and X-ray crystallography.

CHEM 632. Chemical Education 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): BS, BA, or minor in Chemistry, or consent of instructor.

Description: In-depth examination of learning theories and chemistry content. Lesson plans, teaching philosophies, and research projects framed by learning theories will be developed.

CHEM 645. Advanced Biochemistry I 4 Units
Prerequisite(s): CHEM 342.

Description: Chemistry of amino acids, peptides, proteins, nucleotides and nucleic acids; methods of analysis and laboratory synthesis; enzyme properties, kinetics, ligand binding.

Note: Lectures concurrent with CHEM 545; one added lecture hour each week covers advanced topics.

Note: Credit may not be earned in both CHEM 545 and CHEM 645.

- CHEM 647. Advanced Biochemistry II 4 Units
Description: Cellular metabolism of carbohydrates, lipids, amino acids and nucleotides; biomembrane phenomena; RNA, DNA and protein synthesis. Lectures concurrent with CHEM 547; one added lecture hour each week covers advanced topics.
Note: Credit may not be earned in both CHEM 547 and CHEM 647.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CHEM 648. Systems Biochemistry: Principles and Practices 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): CHEM 647, BIOC 645, or consent of instructor.
Description: Integration of global metabolic functions with protein and gene-level regulations. Analytical approaches to enable such integration. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CHEM 651. Independent Study 1-3 Units
Description: Credit according to achievement; limited to 3 hours per semester
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CHEM 652. Independent Study 1-3 Units
Description: Credit according to achievement; limited to 3 hours per semester
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CHEM 653. Main Group Chemistry 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): CHEM 515.
Description: Survey of the descriptive chemistry of the main group elements and topics of current interest in main group chemistry such as bonding theories, reaction mechanisms, electronic materials, and catalytic materials.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CHEM 654. Advanced Coordination Chemistry 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): CHEM 515.
Description: Survey of structure, bonding, and reactivity of the transition metal complexes. Covers topics such as organometallic and bioinorganic chemistry, group theory, and magnetism.
- CHEM 655. Special Topics in Inorganic Chemistry 1-3 Units
Prerequisite(s): CHEM 515.
Description: Current problems in inorganic chemistry.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CHEM 656. Special Topics in Inorganic Chemistry 1-3 Units
Prerequisite(s): CHEM 515.
Description: Current problems in inorganic chemistry.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CHEM 659. Materials Chemistry and Methods 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): CHEM 515 or equivalent course in organic chemistry.
Description: Course content will include a range of characterization methods and properties of materials. The main properties of interest are structural properties, magnetism and charge transport. Basic principles as well as methods of investigation and characterization of these properties will be discussed.
- CHEM 660. Advanced Physical Chemistry 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): One year of physical chemistry, one semester of atomic and molecular physics.
Description: Introduction to quantum chemistry.
- CHEM 661. Chemical Thermodynamics 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): One year of physical chemistry.
Description: Advanced discussion of the principles of thermodynamics including an introduction to statistical thermodynamics; applications to chemical systems.
- CHEM 665. Special Topics in Physical Chemistry 1-3 Units
Description: An examination of one or more specified areas of Physical Chemistry. Topics vary; details announced each semester.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CHEM 666. Special Topics in Physical Chemistry 1-3 Units
Description: An examination of one or more specified areas of Physical Chemistry. Topics vary; details announced each semester.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CHEM 667. Reaction Kinetics 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): One year of physical chemistry.
Description: Theory of the rate of chemical reactions; methods of studying reaction rates; reaction energetics; reactions in solution; chain reactions and inference of mechanism from rate studies.
- CHEM 668. Electrochemistry 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Consent of instructor.
Description: A thermodynamic and kinetic study of electrochemical phenomena, including electrical conductivity, electrophoresis, electrode potentials, and electrode processes.

CHEM 670. Chemistry of Heterocyclic Compounds and Alkaloids 3 UnitsPrerequisite(s): One year each of organic and physical chemistry.Description: Structures, reactivities, activities, and synthesis of heterocyclic systems including natural products and their uses in medicine.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)CHEM 671. Advanced Polymer Chemistry 3 Units*Prerequisite(s): One year each of organic and physical chemistry.Description: Polymer characterization, physical properties and structure. Conformational changes, elasticity, relaxation phenomena, size and chain distributions; application of microscopy, spectroscopy, magnetic resonance, and diffraction to polymers; liquid crystals.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)CHEM 672. Quantum Chemistry 3 Units*Prerequisite(s): CHEM 561 or CHEM 660.Description: Principles of quantum theory with applications to chemistry; and advanced treatment of atomic and molecular structure including Slater-Condon methods for atoms and LCAO-MO-SCF methods for molecules; introduction to ab initio methods.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)CHEM 675. Special Topics in Organic Chemistry 1-3 Units*Prerequisite(s): One year of organic chemistry.Description: Current problems in organic chemistry; organometallic chemistry; free radical reactions; carbohydrates and nucleosides; peptides.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)CHEM 677. Mechanisms and Theory in Organic Chemistry 3 Units*Prerequisite(s): Two semesters of undergraduate organic chemistry.Description: This course focuses on the mechanism and theory of classical and contemporary organic reactions, including acid and base catalysis, pericyclic reactions, metal-mediated reactions and radical and photochemical reactions.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)CHEM 678. Advanced Organic Chemistry: General Survey 3 Units*Prerequisite(s): One year each of organic and physical chemistry.Description: First semester (CHEM 678): an introduction to advanced physical organic chemistry, linear free energy relationship, kinetics, isotope effects and spectroscopic techniques as used in the interpretation of reaction mechanisms. Second semester (CHEM 679): an introduction to advanced organic chemistry emphasizing reactions and synthesis, and including spectral applications.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)CHEM 679. Advanced Organic Synthesis 3 Units*Prerequisite(s): One year each of organic and physical chemistry.Description: An introduction to advanced organic chemistry emphasizing modern synthesis reagents, reactions and their mechanisms.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)CHEM 681. Modern Biochemistry I 3 Units*Prerequisite(s): One year each of organic and physical chemistry or consent of instructor.Description: Chemistry and physical properties of proteins, other biopolymers; enzymatic reaction mechanisms and kinetics; bioenergetics.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)CHEM 682. Modern Biochemistry II 3 Units*Prerequisite(s): CHEM 681 or consent of instructor.Description: Carbohydrate, lipid, protein, and nucleic acid metabolism; endocrine control of metabolism and physiological activities.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)CHEM 684. Biophysical Chemistry 3 Units*Prerequisite(s): CHEM 462 (or equivalent) and CHEM 545/CHEM 645, or consent of instructor.Description: Basis theory and practical applications of modern biophysical methods; spectroscopy, hydrodynamics, thermodynamics, kinetics, and computational methods applied to protein and nucleic acid systems.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)CHEM 685. Special Topics in Biochemistry 1-3 Units*Prerequisite(s): CHEM 547, or CHEM 647, or consent of instructor.Description: Recent developments in selected areas of Biochemistry.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)CHEM 687. Molecular Spectroscopy 3 Units*Prerequisite(s): CHEM 561 or CHEM 660.Description: Molecular structure and interactions as determined by spectroscopic investigation. Rotational, vibrational and electronic spectroscopy as determined by ultraviolet, visible, infrared, microwave and radio frequency methods. Fundamental theory and experimental methods.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)CHEM 688. X-Ray Crystallography and Its Application to Molecular Structure 3 Units*Prerequisite(s): CHEM 561 or CHEM 660.Description: Crystal structure analysis. Topics include: symmetry, space groups, data collection, structure solution and refinement, structural analysis and presentation of scientific results.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

CHEM 691. Research1-9 Units*Prerequisite(s): 30 semester hours of undergraduate chemistry.Description: Individual research with faculty member.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)CHEM 692. Research*1-9 Units*Prerequisite(s): 30 semester hours of undergraduate chemistry.Description: Individual research with faculty member.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)CHEM 695. Seminar*1-3 Units*Grading Basis: Pass/FailDescription: Required of all graduate students during residency. Students present one literature and one research seminar by the end of the 3rd semester; participate/attend in department seminar.Note: Maximum credit allowed is 3 semester hours.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

Fundamentals of Engineering Exam Review*2 Units*Grading Basis: Pass/FailTerm Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): 4th-year standing.Description: Review of topics covered on eight-hour NCEES Fundamentals of Engineering examination. Not to be counted towards meeting the requirements for a degree.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)CEE 520. Design of Structural Systems*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): CEE 421, CEE 422, and CEE 452.Description: Introduction to the design of structural systems. Model building codes. Material, structural system and foundation system selection. Design of connections. Economic, detailing constructability and erection issues. Preparation of engineering drawings. Review of shop drawing.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)CEE 522. Fundamentals of Prestressed Concrete*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): CEE 322 and CEE 421.Description: Introduction to pre-tensioned and post-tensioned prestressed concrete. Design of precast concrete slabs, buildings, and bridges in accordance with ACI specifications and the Prestressed Concrete Institute (PCI) recommended practices. Application of computer programs for member analysis and design.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

CEE 523. Timber Design Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): CEE 254 or consent of instructor. Description: Concepts of Structural Timber design will be taught. The properties of wood materials will be reviewed and the procedures for the design of typical timber components will be presented. In addition to course assignments, and tests, required of all students, students taking this course for graduate credit will be required to complete a group design of a simple building. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	CEE 541. Construction Equipment and Practice Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Description: This course will provide an overview of construction planning and practices rather than construction management. The emphasis will be on the Construction Depth content of Civil Engineering. The topics covered in the course will be guided by the anticipated content of fundamental construction engineering practice and will follow the various chapters of the required textbook. Note: This section is restricted to students with a major in the department. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
CEE 524. Bridge Design Term Typically Offered: Summer Only Description: This class offers detailed coverage of engineering basics for the design of short- and medium-span bridges. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	CEE 552. Earth Pressures and Retaining Structures Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): CEE 450. Description: Earth pressure calculation: theory and practice. Design techniques for retaining walls, reinforced earth and soil nailing. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
CEE 530. Construction Materials Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Prerequisite(s): CEE 254 and CEE 255. Description: Properties of construction materials such as cement, concrete, asphalt, and structural elastomers. Design of Portland cement concrete and asphaltic concrete mixes. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	CEE 553. Advanced Foundation Design Description: This course covers site investigation and subsurface exploration with the purpose of foundation design. Then, the course covers the analysis and design of single piles and group piles considering pile capacity and pile head displacement. At the end, the course covers pile driving analysis to test the integrity of the concrete. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
CEE 532. Experimental Stress Analysis Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): CEE 530. Description: Fundamentals of experimental stress analysis, brittle coating, photoelastic coating, and electrical strain gage techniques, strain measurements under static and dynamic loading. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	CEE 560. Traffic Engineering Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): CEE 460. Description: Examines characteristics of the vehicle, the driver, and the traffic stream. Highway and intersection capacity, theory of traffic flow, parking, traffic safety. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
CEE 540. Construction Management Term Typically Offered: Fall Only Description: This course discusses construction management including estimating, bidding, time/cost management, provisions, surety bonds, ownership, and project scheduling. Other topics, such as temporary erosion control and plan & print reading will also be covered. Note: This section is restricted to students with a major in the department. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	CEE 562. Geometric Design of Highways Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered Prerequisite(s): CEE 460. Description: The concepts of geometric design for rural and urban highways, utilizing proprietary design software are introduced and applied. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
		CEE 563. GPS Theory and Application Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): CEE 460. Description: This course is designed to give the student an overview of the use of Global Positioning Systems in surveying and engineering applications. Elements of coordinate systems, map projections, GPS principles of operation, mapping, boundary, and construction surveys will be covered. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units

CEE 565. GIS Applications to Transportation Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): CEE 460. Description: Introduces an overview and application of current methods of implementing GIS solutions to highway data analysis and planning studies. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	CEE 604. Interaction of Soils and Structures Prerequisite(s): CEE 421, CEE 422, and CEE 452. Description: Response of foundation materials to applied static and dynamic loads. Foundation design procedures based upon consideration of soil-structure interaction. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
CEE 570. Applied Hydraulics Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): CEE 572. Description: Application of basic principles of hydraulic engineering to analysis of flow in floodways, through bridge openings, culverts, and spillways. Analysis of stable channel design is also considered. Commonly used computer programs are utilized to design structures in floodways. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	CEE 620. Advanced Mechanics of Solids Prerequisite(s): By permission of Department Chair. Description: Analysis of stress and strain. Topics include theories of failure, unsymmetric bending, curved beams, shear center, torsion, beams on elastic foundations, beams with combined axial and lateral loads, thick-wall cylinders, rotating disc, introduction to elastic stability. Note: This class is for CEE students; students from other departments will need to get permission from CEE department chair. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
CEE 571. Applied Hydrology Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): CEE 470. Description: Introduction to hydrologic systems; modeling runoff from watersheds using lumped and distributed methods; stormwater management and design; hydrologic and hydraulic routing including kinematic wave routing; computer rainfall-runoff simulation models. A hydrologic design project will be assigned to all students; special assignments dealing with hydrologic processes will be assigned to MS degree students. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	CEE 621. Finite Element Analysis for Structural Engineers Description: Introduction to the finite element method (FEM) and its application to structural engineering. Topics include displacement and variational base one-, two-, and three-dimensional element formulation, introductory elasticity, isoparametric elements, interpolation methods, numeric integration, geometric and material nonlinearity. Emphasis on FEM program development. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
CEE 572. Open Channel Hydraulics Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): CEE 370. Description: Application of basic principles of hydraulics to open channel flow. Theory and analysis of critical, uniform and gradually varied flow and computer analysis. Select topics in rapidly varied and unsteady flow. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	CEE 623. Advanced Structural Engineering Description: Design of earthquake resistant steel, concrete, and masonry structures. Introduction to time history, modal analysis and pushover analysis. Model code seismic design provisions. Ductility concepts. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
CEE 573. Groundwater Hydrology Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered Prerequisite(s): CEE 450 and CEE 470. Description: Fundamental concepts of fluid flow and soil properties; theory of groundwater movement; mechanics of well flow; groundwater contaminant transport. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	CEE 625. Structural Dynamics Prerequisite(s): CEE 322. Description: Dynamic analysis of structural systems including dynamic response by modal superposition, step integration, response spectrum frequency analysis. Computer applications. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
CEE 590. Current Topics in Civil Engineering Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered Prerequisite(s): Consent of instructor. Description: An examination of one or more topics in Civil Engineering. Details announced each semester. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	1-4 Units	CEE 626. Masonry Design Prerequisite(s): CEE 421. Description: Concepts of masonry design will be taught. The properties of masonry materials will be reviewed and the procedures for the design of typical masonry components will be presented. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units

- CEE 627. Non-Destructive Testing 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Graduate/Professional standing.
Description: Introduce different non-destructive testing methods for quality evaluation of concrete. Penetration resistance methods, resonant frequency methods, ultra-sonic pulse velocity, maturity technique will be covered. Ground penetrating radar.
- CEE 650. Measurement of Soil Properties 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): CEE 450.
Description: Laboratory testing of soil mechanical properties; index testing; testing for permeability, compressibility, and shear strength.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CEE 652. Advanced Earth Pressure and Retaining Structures 3 Units
Description: Soil pressure-structure movement interactions. Design of anchored bulkheads. Retained excavation analysis. Design of cellular cofferdams. Introduction to culverts/tunnels.
- CEE 653. Design of Earth Structures 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): CEE 450.
Description: Seepage and internal erosion. Stability analyses. Failure mechanisms in natural slopes. Design of earth dams. Embankment construction, control and instrumentation.
- CEE 654. Rock Mechanics 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): CEE 450.
Description: Physical properties of intact rock; mechanical properties of rock masses, emphasis on practical applications. Rock blasting. Tunneling.
- CEE 656. Geotechnical Earthquake Engineering 3 Units
Description: This course is an introduction to the problems that engineers face in earthquake prone regions. It is an "interdisciplinary" course in the sense that it covers topics from geology, geophysics, structural and geotechnical engineering, and probability. Emphasis in the course is given to two main issues: (1) assessment of design motion at a site, and (2) evaluation of the effects of this motion on geotechnical/structural systems.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CEE 660. Transportation Planning and Urban Development 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): CEE 460.
Description: Focuses on the principles of transportation planning in the urban environment, including land use planning, with emphasis on the orderly development of the transportation system.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CEE 661. Environmental Analysis of Transportation Systems 3 Units
Description: An examination of the various impacts that transportation systems and projects may have on the natural and human environment. A detailed review and application of transportation noise analysis.
- CEE 662. Airport Planning & Design 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): CEE 460.
Description: The principles of location, planning, design, and evaluation of airports are examined from the engineering perspective. In addition, laws and regulations concerning airports and the aviation system are thoroughly studied.
- CEE 663. Advanced Traffic Operations 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Spring Only
Description: This course has an emphasis on capacity analysis and using computer techniques to solve traffic problems.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CEE 664. Fundamentals of Intelligent Transportation Systems 3 Units
Description: Examines the elements of traffic flow theory, incident/emergency management, dynamic route guidance, in-vehicle systems, and traffic signal systems.
- CEE 665. Pavement Design 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): CEE 450 and CEE 460.
Description: Design of flexible and rigid pavements, base courses, and subgrades. Effects of loading on pavement life. Investigation of pavement distress and rehabilitation. Introduction to pavement management systems.
- CEE 670. Advanced Hydraulics 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): CEE 370.
Description: Dimensional analysis; integral form of the equations of motion; shear stress distribution; turbulence and boundary layer theory; concepts in particle drag and settling.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CEE 671. Stochastic Processes in Hydrology 3 Units
Description: Basic concepts and classification of stochastic processes with emphasis on hydrologic systems; analysis of hydrologic time series; models for stationary hydrologic stochastic processes.

- CEE 672. Statistical Methods in Water Resources 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): ISE 360.
Description: Applications of advanced concepts of probability and statistics in hydrology and water resources including frequency analysis and regionalization; parameter estimation; analysis of variance and multiple regression techniques.
- CEE 673. Advanced Hydrology 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): CEE 470 and ISE 360.
Description: Advanced concepts for studying hydrologic processes; theory of linear hydrologic systems; conceptual models for modeling watershed rainfall-runoff response including geomorphological approaches.
- CEE 674. Water Resources Systems 3 Units
Description: Application of systems analysis techniques in the planning and design of water resources projects; mathematical optimization; simulation and risk-based decision-making.
- CEE 675. Surface Water Quality Modeling 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Consent of instructor.
Description: Modeling, design and control of water quality in river, lake, and estuary systems; dissolved oxygen and toxic substance models; and lake eutrophication.
- CEE 676. Sediment Transport and River Mechanics 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): CEE 370.
Description: Sediment transport theory; overland erosion; alluvial streams; analysis, prediction, and control of river characteristics; local scour at river structures.
- CEE 677. Groundwater Modeling 3 Units
Description: Mathematical and numerical modeling of groundwater and pollution transport.
- CEE 680. Civil Engineering Capstone Design 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Restricted to CEE Master of Engineering students (SP).
Description: A capstone Civil & Environmental Engineering course to include elements of geotechnical, structural, transportation, and water resources engineering in a comprehensive design project.
Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CEE 681. Green Engineering & Sustainable Design 3 Units
Description: Understand the origins and applicability of sustainable design and green engineering. Ultimately, be able to apply fundamental engineering concepts to these practices.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CEE 690. Master of Science Thesis in Civil Engineering 1-6 Units
Description: Experimental and/or theoretical research to be presented in thesis for degree requirement.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CEE 693. Independent Study in Civil Engineering 1-6 Units
Description: Independent study in a selected subject area with approval and supervision by a faculty member.
- CEE 694. Special Topics in Civil Engineering 1-6 Units
Description: An examination of one or more specified areas of Civil Engineering. Topics vary; details announced each semester.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CEE 697. Master of Engineering Thesis in Civil Engineering 1-6 Units
Prerequisite(s): Graduate/professional school standing.
Description: A candidate for the Master of Engineering degree, specializing in the field of civil engineering, is required to perform a study, design, or investigation under the direction of a faculty member. A written thesis is required to be presented and defended orally and submitted to the faculty for approval.
- CEE 698. Civil Engineering PhD Seminar 3 Units
Grading Basis: Pass/Fail
Prerequisite(s): Permission of the chair.
Description: Current literature in the field of civil engineering; extensive student presentations on research projects with interaction and feedback from students and faculty; guest speakers.

CEE 699. Civil Engineering PhD Research1-18 Units*Prerequisite(s): Permission of dissertation director.Description: Original research activity in an appropriate civil engineering discipline, under the direction of a Civil Engineering graduate faculty member.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

Commercial Law (CLAW)

COMM 505. Perspectives on Religion and Media - CUE, WR3 Units*Prerequisite(s): COMM 305 and 90 credit hours completed.Description: Study of the history and meaning of mediated religious communication, focusing on journalism and strategic communication.Note: Approval for the Arts & Sciences upper-level requirement in written communication (WR).Course Attribute(s): CUE - This course fulfills the Culminating Undergraduate Experience (CUE) requirement for certain degree programs. CUE courses are advanced-level courses intended for majors with at least 90 earned credits/senior-level status.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)COMM 506. Ethical Problems in Communication - CUE, WR*3 Units*Prerequisite(s): COMM 305 and 90 credit hours completed.Description: Examines the moral and ethical problems posed by communication practices. Topics include case studies in interpersonal communication, journalism, public relations, and advertising.Note: Approved for the Arts and Sciences upper-level requirement in written communication (WR).Course Attribute(s): CUE - This course fulfills the Culminating Undergraduate Experience (CUE) requirement for certain degree programs. CUE courses are advanced-level courses intended for majors with at least 90 earned credits/senior-level status.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)COMM 510. Special Topics in Communication Studies*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Occasionally OfferedDescription: Advanced study in specific areas of communication studies.Note: May be repeated under different subtitles.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

COMM 520. Computer-Mediated Communication - WR 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Occasionally OfferedDescription: Conceptual analysis and practical use of computer networks with an emphasis on the social and cultural dimensions of this type of human communication.Note: Approved for the Arts and Sciences upper-level requirement in written communication (WR).

COMM 530. Science Communication 3 UnitsDescription: The course examines the conceptual foundations and practices of science communication. It examines the institutional and intellectual contexts of science communication as well as the scientific constraints on science communication.

COMM 532. Intercultural Communication 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Occasionally OfferedDescription: Explores the influence of cultural identity on the communication practices of individuals, communities, and institutions.

COMM 538. Intimate Communication - WR 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Fall, SpringPrerequisite(s): Graduate standing.Description: Explores communication issues in intimate personal relationships.Note: Approved for the Arts and Sciences upper-level requirement in written communication (WR).

COMM 540. Public Communication Campaigns 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Occasionally OfferedDescription: Drawing upon emerging new theories and empirical studies on influencing audiences, this course examines mediated public communication campaigns.

COMM 555. Persuasive Movements 3 UnitsDescription: Seminar focuses upon the role of persuasion and rhetoric in the formation and lifespan of social movements.

COMM 565. Special Topics in Communication Service Learning - CUE 3 UnitsPrerequisite(s): Faculty consent.Description: Study of communication concepts and theories that will be applied in service learning field work.Note: May be repeated up to six hours under different subtitles.Course Attribute(s): CUE - This course fulfills the Culminating Undergraduate Experience (CUE) requirement for certain degree programs. CUE courses are advanced-level courses intended for majors with at least 90 earned credits/senior-level status.

COMM 580. Interpersonal Communication 3 UnitsDescription: Study of communication in everyday life, including casual conversation and interaction among acquaintances.

COMM 590. Health Communication 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Occasionally OfferedPrerequisite(s): Faculty permission.Description: Studies the nature, function, and importance of communication in the delivery of health care, and/or medical knowledge.

COMM 600. Practicum 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Occasionally OfferedPrerequisite(s): Instructor permission.Description: Initiating and completing a practical communication project for an organization.

COMM 601. Professional Seminar in Communication 1 UnitGrading Basis: Pass/FailPrerequisite(s): Graduate standing.Description: Overview of the communication discipline and introduction to the academic study of communication.

COMM 603. Communication Pedagogy 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Occasionally OfferedDescription: An introduction to teaching college-level in communication. Applies various theories of communication to interactions between students and teachers.

COMM 605. Communication Theory & Practice 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Occasionally OfferedDescription: Surveys a range of communication theories and traditions to equip students with tools for making sense of communication in context.

COMM 610. Problems of Public Discourse 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered Description: Surveys the relevant theories and disputes concerning public discourse, public knowledge, and decision-making. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)		COMM 650. Corporate Communication 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered Description: Study of the nature, strengths, and weaknesses of empirical research in organizational communication and application of these findings to analysis, diagnosis, and remedy or communication problems in specific organizations. Focus is primarily on case studies and in-community "practicum" consulting project. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
COMM 615. Foundations of Communication Research Design 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered Description: This course will familiarize students with the traditional (and some emerging) research methods used in communication research For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)		COMM 651. Conflict Management 3 Units Description: Uses role playing and case studies in community organizations to assist students in developing the skills needed for managing conflict. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
COMM 616. Qualitative Communication Research 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered Description: Instruction in the practical issues and conceptual debates in qualitative research in the field of communication. Methods includes interviewing, participant observation, unobstructive observation, historical/archival methods, narrative and ethnography. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)		COMM 652. Health Communication: Theory and Practice 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Fall Only Description: This course uses health communication theories and methods to design and evaluate health communication materials that capitalize on opportunities afforded by the current context. Students will learn the concepts of effective public health communication across multiple media and levels of the social ecology, considering a variety of audiences, and achieving multiple purposes. Students will also learn to critically analyze examples of communication and develop culturally responsive communication material oriented towards public health interventions. The course will emphasize the development of delivering health information in a meaningful, actionable, and accessible manner. Note: Cross-listed with PHPB 612. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
COMM 617. Quantitative Methods in Communication 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered Description: Instruction in procedures used to systematically and statistically measure differences between groups and relationships pertaining to communication outcomes. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)		COMM 653. Integrated Marketing Communication Campaigns 3 Units Description: Study of integrated advertising, public relations, and sales promotions. Course culminates with students preparing integrated marketing plans for local clients. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
COMM 620. Organizational Communication 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered Description: Theoretical and applied studies of communication within and between organizations and their publics. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)		COMM 654. Strategic Communication and Crisis Management 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered Description: Examines problems of planning and implementing public relations strategies for crisis management. The organizations studied include corporations, agencies, educational and government institutions, and non-profits. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
COMM 625. Personality and Communication 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered Description: Exploration of individual differences in communication processes, such as argumentativeness, shyness, and persuasiveness. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)		COMM 660. Selected Topics in Mass Media 3 Units Prerequisite(s): Graduate standing. Description: Examination of topics specific to the study of mass media not covered in other courses. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
COMM 640. Communication in Social Service 3 Units Description: Studies public communication campaigns, e.g., health information and policy campaigns. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)

COMM 670. Directed Readings in CommunicationTerm Typically Offered: Occasionally OfferedPrerequisite(s): Faculty Permission.Description: Faculty supervised readings on special topics in communication theory, research and practice.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)3 Units*COMM 675. Risk Communication*Term Typically Offered: Occasionally OfferedDescription: Examines the study of risk communication across various contexts (e.g., health, environmental). Focuses on the role of messages in shaping risk perception, evaluation, and behavior.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)3 Units*COMM 690. Special Topics*Description: Examination of topics not covered in regularly-scheduled courses.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)3 Units*COMM 698. Thesis*Term Typically Offered: Occasionally OfferedDescription: Students complete an independent research project (a thesis) over two semesters for a total of six credit hoursFor class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)3 Units

CMDS 563. Clinical Phonetics3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): Must be at least a Junior or Senior undergraduate student to register.Description: The International Phonetic Alphabet and other symbol systems are utilized in transcription of speech sounds. A description of speech sounds in terms of acoustics and physiologic dimensions. Special emphasis on speech disorders and dialects.Note: Cross-listed with CMDS 463.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)CMDS 564. Normal Speech and Language Development*4 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyDescription: Reviews normal development of language and speech across the lifespan including syntax, semantics, morphology, pragmatics, and phonology. An overview of dialectical, cultural, and bilingual aspects are discussed as well as basic language sampling and analysis procedures.Note: Cross-listed with CMDS 464.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)CMDS 570. Clinical Observation in Speech Pathology and Audiology*1 Unit*Grading Basis: Pass/FailTerm Typically Offered: Fall OnlyDescription: Observations in speech pathology and audiology. Additional observations may be assigned to introduce students to the variety of practicum opportunities available in the program.Note: Cross-listed with CMDS 270.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)CMDS 571. Functional Neuroanatomy*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyDescription: An overview of general neuroanatomy and neuroanatomical principles applied to communication and communicative disorders including hearing, speech, language, cognition, swallowing, and emotion.Note: Cross-listed with CMDS 471.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)CMDS 572. Anatomy and Physiology for Communication Sciences*4 Units*Prerequisite(s): Restricted to graduate students only.Fee: An additional $50.00 is charged for this course.Description: Structure and function of speech, auditory/vestibular mechanisms. Includes neuroanatomy and neurophysiology of communication. Emphasis on clinical applications. Dissection of human cadaver material.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

CMDS 574. Global Perspectives in Communicative Disorders 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Description: This course provides students with an introduction to the influence of global perspectives on language and communication. Students will examine how regional, linguistic, and societal factors shape communication practices around the world; consider the implications for professional practice in communication sciences and disorders; and develop the knowledge and skills needed to engage effectively in varied contexts.

CMDS 600. Research Methods in Speech-Language Pathology 2 Units

Description: This course will introduce speech-language pathology graduate students to the various aspects of research including: where to find journal articles, how to read journal articles, basic statistical approaches, and research design. The course will include guest speakers from clinical and basic sciences and expose students to the plethora of research careers.

CMDS 602. Advanced Speech Sound Disorders 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Prerequisite(s): CMDS 563.

Description: This course covers the study of vowel and consonant characteristics; sequence of development of phonology and articulation; and procedures for diagnosing and treating phonological and articulation disorders.

CMDS 606. CMDS Independent Study 1-5 Units

Prerequisite(s): Permission of instructor.

Description: Individualized course with topics to be determined by the instructor. May be repeated.

CMDS 610. Topics in Audiology and Aural Rehabilitation 1 Unit

Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring

Description: This course covers clinical aspects of conventional audiometry, patient management, and aural rehabilitation therapy.

CMDS 611. Practicum in Speech-Language Pathology 1-5 Units

Prerequisite(s): CMDS 563.

Corequisite(s): CMDS 564.

Description: Diagnostic and therapeutic contact with individuals who exhibit communication disorders. Practicum obligations include treatment planning, report writing and patient/parent counseling. Advanced students will be assigned to outside practicum sites with the consent of the instructor.

CMDS 612. Early Childhood Language Assessment & Intervention 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): CMDS 564.

Description: This course covers early childhood language assessment and intervention - including phonology - for infants, toddlers and preschool-aged children. Emphasis is placed on typical development as well as disordered populations.

CMDS 618. Counseling and Interviewing 3 Units

Description: An online course that reviews the speech-language pathologists' roles and responsibilities related to the techniques associated with counseling patients and their families. The course will review contemporary theories of counseling and will provide strategies for interviewing and reporting results.

CMDS 620. Motor Speech Disorders 3 Units

Corequisite(s): CMDS 572.

Description: Motor speech disorders are speech disorders resulting from neurological damage that affects the motor control of speech muscles or motor programming/planning of speech movements. The most common motor speech disorders are dysarthria and acquired apraxia of speech. This course will cover diagnosis and treatment.

CMDS 630. Aural Rehabilitation for the Speech-Language Pathologist 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Prerequisite(s): AUDI 605 and CMDS 572.

Description: This course provides an overview of the various hearing impaired habilitative/rehabilitative programs/techniques for pediatric through geriatric populations. Topics may include: speech/language development for children with impaired hearing; physiology and psychosocial impact of hearing loss in older adulthood; cochlear implants; educational management for children with impaired hearing; an overview of hearing aids; and assistive listening devices.

Note: Cross-listed with CMDS 430.

CMDS 640. Language and Literacy 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Description: This course provides foundational and advanced knowledge on the development of literacy skills in children, emphasizing the critical role of speech-language pathologists in supporting reading and writing. Students will explore the connection between early oral language development and literacy outcomes, examine the components of skilled reading (e.g., phonological awareness, decoding, comprehension), and apply assessment and intervention strategies to support children across the continuum of literacy development.

Note: Cross-listed with CMDS 480.

CMDS 641. Autism and Developmental Disabilities 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Fall Only Description: This course provides an in-depth overview of Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD) and developmental disabilities. Students will explore neurological, genetic, and behavioral characteristics and the impact of these conditions across the lifespan. Special focus is placed on the role of speech-language pathologists in screening, assessment, and intervention. Emphasis will be placed on evidence-based strategies, interdisciplinary collaboration, and family-centered care. Note: Cross-listed with CMDS 481.	CMDS 667. Aphasia 3 Units Prerequisite(s): CMDS 620. Description: Historical review of the neurological basis of language processing. Emphasis on the speech and language disorders, diagnosis and remediation of patients experiencing right and left cerebral vascular accidents. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm) CMDS 652. School-Age Language Assessment and Intervention 3 Units Prerequisite(s): CMDS 564. Description: This course covers school-age language assessment and intervention - including phonology - for school-age children and adolescents. Emphasis is placed on typical development as well as disordered populations and emphasizes phonological and pragmatic aspects of language along with semantics, morphology and syntax. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	CMDS 668. Professional Issues in Audiology and Speech Pathology 3 Units Description: Survey of social, political, business and professional issues in health care delivery related to communicative disorders. Other topics include: curriculum vitae preparation, professional interviews, professional liabilities, contracts, and funding sources, quality assurance mechanism, etc. Pass-fail grading only. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
CMDS 658. Interprofessional Education and Practice 1 Unit Term Typically Offered: Fall Only Description: Reviews the speech-language pathologist' roles/ responsibilities when collaborating with other professionals in medical and/or educational settings. The course emphasizes learning about, from, and with other professionals in order to deliver the highest quality of care across settings. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	CMDS 669. Cognitive-Communication Disorders 3 Units Prerequisite(s): CMDS 620 and CMDS 572. Description: This course focuses on the cognitive-communication disorders that may result from dementia, neurological disorders, metabolic and drug-induced delirium and traumatic brain injury. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
CMDS 663. Voice Disorders 3 Units Prerequisite(s): CMDS 572. Description: Study of abnormalities of voice production including dysphonia, psychogenic disturbance, and resonance imbalance. Incorporates laboratory demonstrations and exercises to develop skills using the following technologies: video stroboscopy, videofluoroscopy for VPI, manometry, the Visi-pitch, etc. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	CMDS 690. Dysphagia 3 Units Prerequisite(s): CMDS 572. Description: Evaluation and treatment of pediatric and adult patients with swallowing disorders. Specific emphasis on bedside dysphagia evaluations, modified barium swallow procedures, FEES, assistive devices, treatment techniques, and diet modifications. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
CMDS 665. Fluency Disorders 3 Units Description: Examines fluency disorders of children and adults. Reviews the literature on etiology and theories of dysfluency. Assessment procedures and therapeutic management are discussed. Includes a review of current technological applications. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	CMDS 691. Advanced Dysphagia 2 Units Term Typically Offered: Fall Only Prerequisite(s): CMDS 690. Description: CMDS 691 is an elective course that investigates complex clinical issues in dysphagia assessment and management; includes discussion regarding end-of-life care and ethical situations. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
	CMDS 694. Pediatric Feeding and Swallowing 3 Units Prerequisite(s): CMDS 690. Description: This course will focus on pediatric feeding and swallowing disorders from a whole body perspective. The course will cover typical feeding development, characteristics and ramifications of atypical feeding development, underlying diagnoses that may contribute to feeding problems, assessment, and treatment techniques from infancy through adolescence. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)

CSE 504. Automata Theory Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring Prerequisite(s): CSE 310. Description: Finite state machines and their application to engineering problems including modeling the behavior of discrete systems. Topics include theory of computing, formal language theory, and applications of cellular automata. Engineering models of digital computer hardware are covered and related to software design. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	CSE 525. Microcomputer Design Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring Prerequisite(s): ECE 412 or CSE 412 or consent of instructor. Description: Design and construction of microcomputers with microprocessors and digital integrated circuits. Breadboarding, hardware design, and software design are emphasized. The class is separated into groups, and each group designs, breadboards, and tests a complete microcomputer system, including interfaces to peripheral devices. Note: Cross-listed with ECE 516. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	4 Units
CSE 506. Modeling and Analysis of Engineering Systems Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): ENGR 330. Description: Representation of engineering systems, Fourier analysis, z-transforms, frequency response, state-space analysis, stability, an introduction to the basic theory of filter design, and demonstrated concepts to CAS. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	CSE 528. Game Design and Programming Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Prerequisite(s): CSE 302. Description: This course will provide an overview of Multimedia and Game programming, and teach basic computer game design techniques using state-of-the-art game engines. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
CSE 510. Computer Design Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring Prerequisite(s): ECE 210. Corequisite(s): ECE 511. Description: Review of logic design and elementary computer organization. Design of the central processing unit, memory, control, and input-output portions of a computer. The VHDL hardware design language will be used. Note: Cross-listed with ECE 510. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	CSE 530. Design of Compilers Term Typically Offered: Summer Only Prerequisite(s): CSE 420. Description: Engineering descriptions of algorithmic language. Study of syntax, semantics, ambiguities, procedures, replication, iterations, and recursion in the language. Engineering design of a compiler. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
CSE 516. Fundamentals of Computer Communications and Networks Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring Prerequisite(s): CSE 420. Description: Data communications: The exchange of data between devices is covered. The key aspects of transmission interfacing, link control, and multiplexing are examined. Data communication networking: Examines the internal mechanisms by which communication networks provide a data transfer service for attached devices. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	CSE 532. Python and Data Analytics Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Prerequisite(s): (CSE 120 or CSE 130) and Junior standing or higher. Description: Python is an interpreted, high-level programming language useful for rapid application development. It supports many modules and packages suitable for tasks ranging from scientific research to business software development. In recent years Python has become a fundamental tool for numerical and data analysis, as well as machine learning. This course has a dual focus of providing users with advanced Python programming skills, as well as experience processing and analyzing data with Python and its libraries. It addresses a variety of topics in a Python programming context, including file management, working with data structures, algorithms and program development, object-oriented programs, and practical problem solutions and applications. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
CSE 522. Performance Evaluation of Computer Systems Term Typically Offered: Fall Only Prerequisite(s): ISE 360 or MATH 360, CSE 420. Description: A study of approaches to the evaluation of computer systems. Measurement techniques and evaluation techniques are treated in detail with attention to existing commercial hardware and software monitors and simulators. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	CSE 535. Database Systems Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring Prerequisite(s): CSE 302 or equivalent. Description: Course covers basics of database design, SQL, query processing, and optimization, transactions. The emphasis will be placed on Engineering design and implementation of relational systems. A written project is required. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units

CSE 536. Data Management and Analysis3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Description: The goal of the course is to teach, to the students who are not Computer Science majors, the basic skills needed to organize, assess and analyze data sets. The course discusses a variety of tools (file systems, database systems, and the R environment) as well as a series of basic tasks, from generating metadata to basic filtering, organizing and enrichment of data sets. This course contributes to develop analysis, modeling and problem-solving skills.

Note: This course is intended for non-CSE majors.

CSE 538. Graph Database and Graph Analytics3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Summer OnlyPrerequisite(s): CSE 302.

Description: Our world is connected. Data representing real-world problems for analysis, however, usually are discrete and do not explicitly include connected information (relationship or link) in their data models. Graph analytics is the study and analysis of data that can be transformed into a graph representation consisting of nodes (to represent real-world entities) and edges (to represent relationships between entities). Graph analytics is built on the mathematics of graph theory, with augmentation of properties attached to nodes and edges. And graph database systems will be used to build a repository of connected graph data and query the data with a non-procedural graph query language, or an API based on a procedural programming language.

CSE 539. Advanced industrial Software for Home Appliances (part A1)4.5 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring

Prerequisite(s): The student must be participating in the GE Appliance Edison program or employees at GE Appliances enrolled in the CSE program.

Description: This course provides graduate students working in the major home appliance industry with an advanced understanding of industrial software engineering and their application to technologies associated with the design, development, and production of major household appliances such as refrigerators, washers, dryers, cooking products and dishwashers. This course serves as one of the curricular elements for the GE Appliance Edison students and is limited to students participating in this program or employees at GE Appliances enrolled in the CSE program. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

CSE 540. Object Oriented Information Technology3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): Graduate standing.

Description: Survey of design and development of object oriented software. Software architectures, development environments, graphical user interfaces, and networks of distributed objects. Software design project required.

Note: CSE students cannot receive credit for CSE 440 and 540.

CSE 542. Computer Control and Real Time Programming3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): ECE 412 or CSE 412.

Description: Programmable Logic Controllers, Human Machine interfaces, SCADA, state machines, sensors, and actuators. Study of industrial algorithms, open/closed loop real-time control, and schematics.

Note: Previously cross-listed with ECE 517.

CSE 545. Artificial Intelligence3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): CSE 302 and CSE 310.

Description: This course introduces the use of predicate calculus logic, heuristic search, and knowledge representations for solving engineering and computer science problems. The course includes coverage of rule-based expert systems, intelligent agents, and machine learning.

CSE 546. Introduction to Machine Learning3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): CSE 532, or ISE 360 or equivalent.

Description: This course provides a broad introduction to machine learning. This course will cover topics in data pre-processing, regression, classification, clustering, neural networks, ensemble methods, and deep learning. We will learn the fundamental concepts behind several machine learning algorithms without going deeply into the mathematics. We will focus on gaining practical experience applying machine learning to a range of real-world problems.

CSE 547. Deep Learning Algorithms and Methods3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): CSE 532, or ISE 360 or equivalent.

Description: Deep Learning is an area of Artificial Intelligence and Machine Learning techniques. Its ability to represent objects without the need of extensive feature engineering or pre-defining rules makes it one of the most powerful and flexible frameworks to learn from data. This course covers basic concepts and applications of Deep Learning Techniques.

CSE 550. Software Engineering3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, SpringPrerequisite(s): CSE 420.

Description: Engineering methods applied to the life-cycle issues in the team-oriented development of large software systems including issues of software processes, metrics, testing and quality. Documentation of the project and an oral presentation are required.

CSE 551. Data Visualization for Data Science3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring Even YearsPrerequisite(s): CSE 302, CSE 532 This course is all about data visualization, the art and science of turning data into readable graphics.Description: The course aims to introduce key design principles and techniques for interactively visualizing data. The major goals of this course are to understand how visual representations can help in the analysis and understanding of complex data, how to design effective visualizations, and how to create your own interactive visualizations with modern analytics languages.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)CSE 555. Internet of Things*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Occasionally OfferedPrerequisite(s): CSE 350 and either CSE 120 or CSE 130.Description: The rapid advancement in electronics, embedded systems, wireless communications, software, together with the recent advancement in Artificial Intelligence (AI) has led to the development of the Internet-of-Things (IoT), which has enabled diverse smart applications, e.g., smart home, smart city, smart healthcare, smart transportation, smart factory, robotics, and many cyber-physical and autonomous systems. This course will introduce the technology enablers of the IoT with the state-of-the-art sensing, embedded system, edge/cloud computing, communications, analytics, and AI-driven decision-making technologies through lectures, assignments, and a hands-on term project building a real-world end-to-end IoT system. The course is designed for the students to learn about the evolving and emerging cutting-edge technologies which will help them in their career in industry or further academic research.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)CSE 560. Natural Language Processing and Its Applications*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): CSE 547 This course will cover Natural Language Processing (NLP) and its importance, along with the history of NLP.Description: The basic components of NLP, Sentiment analysis and supervised machine learning, such as logistic regression in NLP, text normalization, such as stemming, lemmatization, stop word, and noise reduction, probability and Bayes' rule for spam detection, vector space model, and transformation of word vectors are discussed, Recurrent Neural Network, Gated Recurrent unit, and traditional and N-Gram Language Models are covered. The course covers state-of-art architectures such as Siamese Networks, Name Entity Recognition, Sentiment Analysis and Language Models using RNN, and Seq2Seq and Seq2Seq with Attention. At the end will cover the Transformer model, including Masked Self Attention and Multi-Head Self Attention, Transfer Learning in NLP, and ELMO, GPT, and BERT are also covered.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)CSE 563. Experimental Design in Engineering*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): ISE 560 (or equivalent) and Graduate standing in the JB Speed School of Engineering.Description: Design of engineering experiments and projects using theory of least squares, analysis of variance, randomized blocks, factorial experiments, nested designs, split plot designs and logistic regression techniques. Covers a combination of analysis by hand and using Minitab statistical software. Students may only receive credit for one of the following: ISE 464, ISE 664, ME 611, and EM 661.Note: Cross-listed with ISE 664.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)CSE 564. Introduction to Cryptography*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): CSE 310.Description: This course gives a historical introduction to cryptology and the science of secret codes. The first part covers substitution ciphers, transposition codes, Vigenere cipher and more complex polyalphabetic substitutions including those created by rotor machines. The second part describes bit block cipher schemes such as Data Encryption Standard (DES). Public key encryption is the subject of the final part including RSA, Knapsack codes, and Diffie-Hellman key exchange.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)CSE 565. Software Security*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): CSE 220, CSE 564.Description: This class offers a comprehensive view into software security practices. Students will learn how to develop software with security in mind, learn how to perform static code analysis, fuzz testing, and vulnerability assessments. It will analyze concepts of malware including viruses, adware, rootkits, and others. Students will gain a deep understanding of how software architectures and platforms as a whole must be developed to enhance security in design and development. The relationships to other aspects of cybersecurity in the software development lifecycle will be analyzed. Students will need a basic understanding of cryptography as well as some assembly and high-level (C, Java, Python) language proficiency.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)CSE 566. Information Security*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Summer OnlyPrerequisite(s): CSE 420.Description: Technical, legal and policy issues associated with information security. Authentication, trusted computer systems, information encryption, biometrics, computer forensics, and privacy issues. Written and verbal reports are required.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

CSE 568. Computer Forensics3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): CSE 311 and CSE 420.

Description: Course examines legal, legal, administrative, technical and scientific issues in computer forensics, network forensics, information security and trusted systems. Course requires class participation, lab work, team projects, writing and oral presentations.

CSE 570. Mobile Device Programming3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): CSE 220 or equivalent and CSE 335 or equivalent.

Description: This course covers the basic concepts in designing and implementing applications running on Apple's IOS and Google's Android operating systems. Students may not receive credit for both CSE 470 and CSE 570.

Note: Formerly CSE 470.

CSE 590. Special Topics in Computer Science and Engineering 1-6 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Spring Only

Description: Devoted to topics which usually are not treated in detail in the general courses.

CSE 593. Independent Study in Computer Science and Engineering1-6 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer

Description: Opportunity for the student, under the supervision of a sponsoring faculty member, to pursue individualized study related to research or practice that is not included in regular courses in the curriculum.

Note: Chair Approval is required.

CSE 596. CSE Capstone Design - CUE3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, SpringPrerequisite(s): Senior Standing, CSE 350, CSE 525 (or concurrently).

Description: This course requires solving a real-world design problem in computer science and engineering. It uses hardware and software design methods and tools learned in previous coursework emphasizing teamwork, written and oral communication.

Course Attribute(s): CUE - This course fulfills the Culminating Undergraduate Experience (CUE) requirement for certain degree programs. CUE courses are advanced-level courses intended for majors with at least 90 earned credits/senior-level status., CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

CSE 602. Graduate Internship in Computer Science and Engineering2 Units*Grading Basis: Pass/FailTerm Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer

Prerequisite(s): Admission to Graduate Study, Permission of Department Chair, and Permission of Director of Career Services.

Description: Supervised professional experience in industry at the graduate level. This course provides the structure and focus for the graduate intern field assignment to ensure that the assignment is appropriate and consistent with the intern's graduate course of study and professional development. Not to be counted towards meeting the requirements for a degree. May be repeated for credit.

Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

CSE 608. Advanced Design of Operating Systems3 Units*Prerequisite(s): CSE 420.

Description: Formal study of algorithms arising in the engineering design of operating systems. Models will be designed and analyzed as to performance measures and optimality. Topics include management protection, security, concurrency, and resource allocation.

CSE 609. Multimedia Processing3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): CSE 302 or consent of instructor.

Description: This course aims to provide a broad introduction of Multimedia representation, encoding/compression, storage, and communication. It covers multimedia standards such as JPEG, H.261, and MPEG. It also aims to provide an experience with the use, integration, and content-based indexing and retrieval of audio, image, video, and textual sources for some multimedia applications and services.

CSE 611. Computer Architecture3 Units*Prerequisite(s): CSE 510, CSE 525, ECE 510, ECE 516 or equivalent.

Description: This course will provide in-depth exposure to advanced topics in computer architecture. The emphasis on studying and analyzing fundamental issues in computer architecture design and their impact on performance. Course topics include performance measurements; ISA; memory hierarchy design and cache memory; advanced pipelining; and advanced computer structures for instruction-level parallelism, instruction scheduling, data-level parallelism, and thread-level parallelism.

Note: Cross-listed with ECE 611.

CSE 613. Network Security 3 Units Prerequisite(s): CSE 516. Description: This course provides basic knowledge and understanding of network security and vulnerability. The course also examines the internal mechanisms of various attacks and possible protection. Class participation, lab work, team projects, writing, and oral presentations will be integral components of the course. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	CSE 625. Parallel Programming 3 Units Prerequisite(s): CSE 419 or equivalent. Description: This course will provide an overview of parallel computation and algorithms, and teach basic parallel programming techniques. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
CSE 617. Mobile Computing 3 Units Prerequisite(s): CSE 516. Description: Mobile communication and computing concepts, and related software development. Internal mechanisms by which mobile communication networks provide data transfer service for attached devices. Architecture of ad hoc networks and related protocols. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	CSE 627. Digital Image Processing 3 Units Prerequisite(s): CSE 506, or ECE 420, or faculty consent. Description: A course that surveys basic concepts in image processing and pattern recognition. Topics included are: contrast and edge enhancement, histogram modification, image segmentation, feature extraction, statistical classifiers. Design problems involving computer implementation of algorithms are used extensively. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
CSE 619. Design and Analysis of Computer Algorithms 3 Units Prerequisite(s): CSE 310 and ISE 360. Description: This course covers the interrelationship between algorithmic statements, data structures, and computational complexity of computer programs. Algorithms are presented for a number of computer science and engineering applications including graph problems, string matching, dynamic programming, transitive closure, and convolution. The properties of NP-complete problems are introduced. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	CSE 628. Computer Graphics 3 Units Prerequisite(s): CSE 302. Description: This course presents an introduction to computer graphics hardware and interactive engineering computer graphics techniques. Topics include engineering computer-aided design, graphics hardware (display processors and displays, hardcopy output devices, input devices), graphics standards and graphical kernel system, graphic object representation and transformation, interaction techniques, and three-dimensional graphics. Hardware graphics options are discussed and used. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
CSE 620. Combinatorial Optimization and Modern Heuristics 3 Units Prerequisite(s): CSE 419 or equivalent. Description: Combinatorial Optimization and Modern Heuristics presents classical and modern search and optimization concepts, methods, and applications. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	CSE 629. Distributed System Design 3 Units Prerequisite(s): CSE 420. Description: This course covers general concepts in the design and implementation of distributed systems, visiting topics in cluster computing, supercomputing, grid computing, and cloud computing. The course is composed of two building blocks: 1) distributing computing models including MPI and MapReduce programming, and 2) distributed storage techniques including networked, parallel, and distributed file systems. Our readings and discussions of research papers will help us understand general approaches to design, implement, and evaluate real distributed systems as well as identify open research problems. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
CSE 621. Web Mining for E-Commerce and Information Retrieval 3 Units Prerequisite(s): CSE 419 or equivalent. Description: Fundamentals of knowledge discovery in semi-structured/unstructured data with emphasis on the World Wide Web: Web usage, content, and structure mining, applications to personalization, e-commerce, information retrieval, text mining. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	CSE 630. Advanced Databases 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Prerequisite(s): CSE 535 or consent of instructor. Description: Object-relational databases; handling of complex types, XML and text in relational databases. NoSQL databases: data models and query languages. Data warehousing: design and implementation, query processing and optimization. Big Data: cluster computing, MapReduce and extensions, advanced analytical databases, distributed query processing. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
CSE 622. Simulation and Modeling of Discrete Systems 3 Units Prerequisite(s): ISE 360. Description: Engineering design of simulation languages and simulators, discrete stochastic systems, issues in large scale simulation studies and engineering evaluation methods. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)

CSE 631. Database Security3 Units*Prerequisite(s): CSE 335 or consent of instructor.

Description: Prerequisites or corequisites: CSE 535. This course covers basic issues in the field Security for database systems. Topics include Security Architecture, Administration of Users and Password Policies, Database Application Security Models, Virtual Private Databases and Label Based Access Control, Database Auditing Models, and Application Data Auditing. The course contributes to the following ABET goals: written communication, and contains heavy coverage of the following ABET goals: Knowledge of contemporary issues in the field of computer engineering and computer science. The understanding of professional and ethical responsibility in the field of computer engineering and computer science.

CSE 632. Data Mining3 Units*Prerequisite(s): ISE 360 and CSE 335.

Description: Data mining concepts, methodologies, and techniques, including statistical and fuzzy inference, cluster analysis, artificial neural networks, and genetic algorithms, rule association and decision trees, N-dimensional visualization, Web and text mining, and advanced topics.

CSE 633. Computer Vision3 Units*Prerequisite(s): CSE 627 or ECE 618 or consent of instructor.

Description: Review of elementary pattern recognition and image processing; extension to advanced topics in computer vision, such as three-dimensional vision and perception, syntactic pattern recognition, motion, texture, and color vision applications.

CSE 635. Data Mining with Linear Models3 Units

Description: This course covers the theory and practice of linear models and mixed models as applied to different types of data.

CSE 639. Advanced Industrial Software for Home Appliances (part A2)4.5 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring

Prerequisite(s): The student must be participating in the GE Appliance Edison program or employees at GE Appliances enrolled in the CSE program.

Description: This course provides graduate students working in the major home appliance industry with an advanced understanding of industrial software engineering and their application to technologies associated with the design, development, and production of major household appliances such as refrigerators, washers, dryers, cooking products and dishwashers. This course serves as one of the curricular elements for the GE Appliance Edison students and is limited to students participating in this program or employees at GE Appliances enrolled in the CSE program. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

CSE 640. Internet Application Design and Development3 Units*Prerequisite(s): CSE 220.

Description: This course covers software design and development issues encountered in designing internet applications. Topics are HTML5 and CSS, HTTP and Servlet, JDBC, JSP Programming, Custom Tags and Java Bean, Connection Pooling, Web Application Architecture and Design, The Presentation Tier, The Business Logic Tier, The Persistence Tier, and Web Services.

CSE 641. Medical Imaging Systems3 Units*Prerequisite(s): ECE 555 or ECE 618.

Description: Focuses on the foundations of modern medical imaging. Topics include: X-ray generation and X-ray/tissue interactions, projection X-ray imaging, image reconstruction from projections, X-ray CT, MRI, nuclear medicine, SPECT, PET and Ultrasound.

Note: Cross-listed with ECE 641.

CSE 645. Advanced Artificial Intelligence3 Units*Prerequisite(s): CSE 545.

Description: Advanced topics in artificial intelligence from current research publications. Oriented toward second year graduate students. Major project required.

CSE 646. Intelligent Systems3 Units*Prerequisite(s): CSE 545.

Description: Advanced topics in artificial intelligence and intelligent systems, including machine learning, nontraditional logics, connectionist and evolutionary computing, autonomous robots, and intelligent monitoring and diagnosis of complex systems. A major project is required.

CSE 660. Introduction to Bioinformatics3 Units*Prerequisite(s): CSE 302 or CSE 503.

Description: Covers the current state of the art programs designed for sequence alignment, database searching, RNA structure prediction, microarray, sequence analysis, gene prediction, repeat detection, and protein folding prediction. A detailed analysis of the algorithms behind each of these will be explored. The algorithmic techniques discussed will include dynamic programming, hidden Markov models, finite state automata, grammars, Karlin-Altschul statistics and Bayesian statistics. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

CSE 690. Master of Science Thesis in Computer Science1-6 Units

Description: Experimental and/or theoretical research to be presented in thesis.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

CSE 693. Independent Study in Computer Engineering and Computer Science 1-6 UnitsDescription: Guided study of one or more CSE topics of interest.Note: Chair Approval is required.

CSE 694. Special Topics in Computer Science and Engineering 1-6 UnitsDescription: Devoted to topics which usually are not treated in detail in the general course.

CSE 695. Computer Engineering and Computer Science Seminar 1 Unit

CSE 696. CSE Project 3 UnitsPrerequisite(s): Graduate standing in CSE.Description: Independent design or experimental project in Computer Science and Engineering. Written and verbal reports required. Reports must include literature, speech, experimental methodology, design details, implementation details, test results, conclusions, and references. Verbal reports will be presented at a specified date each semester.

CSE 697. Master of Engineering Thesis in Computer Engineering and Computer Science 1-8 UnitsPrerequisite(s): Graduate/Professional standing.Description: A candidate for the Master of Engineering degree, specializing in the field of Computer Engineering and Computer Science, is required to perform a study, design, or investigation under the direction of a faculty member. A written dissertation is required to be presented and defended orally and submitted to the faculty for approval.Note: This course may be repeated for a maximum total of eight semester hours.

CSE 790. Special Topics in Computer Science & Engineering 1-6 UnitsDescription: Devoted to advanced topics that are not treated in the general courses. Topics will be announced in the Schedule of Courses.

CSE 795. CSE Seminar 1-4 UnitsGrading Basis: Pass/FailDescription: Seminar in Computer Science & Engineering

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

CSE 796. Independent Study in Computer Science & Engineering 1-6 UnitsPrerequisite(s): Consent of advisor.Description: Opportunity for the student, under the supervision of a sponsoring faculty member, to pursue individualized study related to research or practice that is not included in regular courses in the curriculum.

CSE 799. Dissertation Research 1-24 UnitsPrerequisite(s): Consent of advisor.

Criminal Justice (CJ)

Subject-area course lists indicate courses currently active for offering at the University of Louisville. Not all courses are scheduled in any given academic term. For class offerings in a specific semester, refer to the Schedule of Classes (https://csprd.louisville.edu/psps/ps_class/EMPLOYEE/PSFT_CS/c/COMMUNITY_ACCESS.CLASS_SEARCH./x/?state=62dab551a0d600a5e8237359c50704e59007&duo_code=sjUx20STJ21bIWVEU)

500-level courses generally are included in both the undergraduate- and graduate-level course listings; however, specific course/section offerings may vary between semesters. Students are responsible for ensuring that they enroll in courses that are applicable to their particular academic programs.

Course Fees

Some courses may carry fees beyond the standard tuition costs to cover additional support or materials. Program-, subject- and course-specific fee information can be found on the Office of the Bursar website (<https://louisville.edu/bursar/tuitionfee/university-fees/>).

CJ 500. Crime and Criminal Justice in Film 3 UnitsPrerequisite(s): Senior standing.Description: Examines media representations of the criminal justice system within a historical context and global perspective, highlighting the congruence and disparities between popular film and reality.

CJ 505. International Terrorism 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Occasionally OfferedDescription: Explores international terrorism and terrorist organizations, including their causes, operations, funding, and future threats. Covers biological, chemical, nuclear, and cyber terrorism, as well as the media's influence on terrorism and counter-terrorism efforts.

- CJ 507. Crime Prevention Through Environmental Design 3 Units
Description: Introduces Crime Prevention Through Environmental Design (CPTED). Emphasizes opportunity theories of crime and their application, and explores strategies for preventing crime by modifying the built environment.
- CJ 509. Crime Analysis 3 Units
Description: Covers introductory techniques of crime analysis and mapping, focusing on applying theoretical concepts to crime data.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CJ 510. Managing Conflict, Change, and Justice 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered
Description: Explores the interpersonal and social aspects of conflict and essential practices for conflict resolution. Analyzes human dynamics in conflicts, emphasizing the significance of conflict management in building relationships.
Note: Cross-listed with SCHG 510.

- CJ 516. Seminar in Juvenile Justice Issues 3 Units
Description: An interdisciplinary seminar examining conflicting perspectives within the juvenile justice system and related issues. Topics include an overview of the juvenile justice system, treatment and prevention programs, unique laws affecting juveniles, and other pertinent themes.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CJ 517. Gangs in the United States 3 Units
Description: Examines gangs, including their history, definitions, and the criminal justice system's response. Covers theories of gang involvement, current trends, and prevention and intervention strategies, offering an overview of the complexities of gang activity and its impact on communities and criminal justice policy.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CJ 519. Domestic and Family Violence 3 Units
Description: Explores the dynamics of family violence, focusing on intimate partner violence, child maltreatment, and abuse of older adults across diverse family structures and life stages.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CJ 520. Capital Punishment - WR 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered
Prerequisite(s): Senior standing or consent of instructor.
Description: Explores issues related to the death penalty, including constitutional questions, the impact of death row incarceration, and public attitudes, with a special focus on research findings from Kentucky.
Note: Approved for the Arts and Sciences upper-level requirement in written communication (WR).

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CJ 521. Corporate and Financial Crime - WR 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered
Prerequisite(s): CJ 200 and CJ 305, or consent of instructor.
Description: Explores corporate and financial crime, focusing on key concepts, theoretical explanations, and the extent and nature of these offenses across various sectors, including both public and private organizations.
Note: Approved for the Arts and Sciences upper-level requirement in written communication (WR).

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CJ 522. Serial and Mass Murder 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered
Prerequisite(s): Senior standing or consent of instructor.
Description: Examines serial and mass murder in the United States, focusing on the relationship between these crimes and factors such as race, gender, media portrayal, and behavioral analysis. Explores the impact of mass murder on communities, including political and religious ideologies, affected institutions, and the responses from law enforcement, community members, and policymakers.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CJ 523. Race and Gender in Criminal Justice - WR 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered
Prerequisite(s): Junior standing or consent of faculty.
Description: Examines the dynamics of racial discrimination and disparity in the United States and their impact on the criminal justice system.
Note: Approved for the Arts and Sciences upper-level requirement in written communication (WR).

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CJ 530. Introduction to Homeland Security 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered
Description: Outlines the philosophy, purpose, and rationale for a dedicated government agency focused on domestic security. Explores issues related to international and domestic terrorism and their effects on homeland security trends.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

- CJ 576. Managing Organizational Performance 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Consent of department chair.
Description: Examination of factors affecting the management of organizational performance. Designed to help participants develop conceptual diagnostic and problem solving skills required of strategic managers in contemporary law enforcement organizations. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CJ 577. Trauma Informed Policing 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring
Prerequisite(s): Restricted to students enrolled in the Southern Police Institute's Administrative Officers Course.
Description: Trauma informed policing focuses on how law enforcement can improve police community interactions, service to the public, and internal operations through adopting a trauma informed approach. This course will discuss evidence-based methods to recognize, understand, and appropriately respond to trauma experienced by victims, offenders, and police officers.
- CJ 578. Criminal Justice Leadership - WR 3 Units
Description: Through the use of lectures and case studies (films), participants will be provided with a cognitive understanding of leadership that emphasizes the study of leadership models and theories. Study and evaluation of various leadership styles and processes.
Note: Approved for the Arts and Sciences upper-level requirement in written communication (WR).
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CJ 580. International Service Learning: Criminal Justice Seminar 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Approval of program director.
Description: Study of criminology and criminal justice with a cross cultural perspective. Comparative criminal justice research regarding particular problems and issues in the host country will be conducted and examined.
Note: Travel outside the United States is required.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CJ 596. Seminar in Criminal Justice 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer
Description: Explores selected topics in Criminal Justice.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CJ 597. Ethics in Criminal Justice - WR 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered
Prerequisite(s): Senior standing or consent of instructor.
Description: Studies ethics and ethical decision-making in the criminal justice system.
Note: Approved for the Arts and Sciences upper-level requirement in written communication (WR).
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CJ 602. Criminal Justice History 3 Units
Description: A study of the historical development of criminal justice agencies in the United States. The origin and influence of various European concepts of criminal justice and how they relate to past and present ideas in the United States.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CJ 605. Police and Society 3 Units
Description: An examination of the police function as a component of the political system in the United States. The manner in which police give substance to the political system and are formed by it in turn. The interaction of the police with other governmental institutions in the political system.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CJ 606. Personnel Management in the Criminal Justice System 3 Units
Description: Focus is on contemporary personnel management problems confronting agencies in the criminal justice system. Both the historical and the theoretical developments of personnel management are analyzed. Alternatives to current management procedures and systems are presented.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CJ 607. Seminar in Law and Justice 3 Units
Description: Study of the premises, theories and research in the study of the relationship between law, society and justice. Emphasis is on the classics as well as selected modern and contemporary research.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CJ 609. Economic Analysis of Crime 3 Units
Description: A study of the economic scope of crime. The role of illegal gambling, loan sharking, labor racketeering, and legitimate business infiltration. The cost of crimes against property. The economic characteristic of high crime jurisdictions. Preventive programs and their costs.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

- CJ 610. Theoretical Foundation of Corrections 3 Units
Description: A study of the psychological, sociological, political, and economic factors which contributed to the concept of corrections. The evolution of correctional thought and its role in contemporary and future reforms.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CJ 611. Critical Issues in Corrections 3 Units
Description: In-depth examination of contemporary issues in sentencing and corrections in our society. Particular emphasis will be given to best practices: recent policies and programs that have been developed to enhance the effectiveness and efficiency of sentencing and corrections within our society.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CJ 612. Criminal Justice Administration: Police 3 Units
Description: An examination of the functions of police in society; principles of law enforcement organizations, administration, policy formulation, and management of personnel; statutory limitations on authority and jurisdiction.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CJ 613. Advanced Comparative Criminal Justice 3 Units
Description: In-depth examination of international legal systems and their related criminal justice systems including analysis of patterns of international crime and global criminal justice issues.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CJ 614. Seminar in Policing 3 Units
Description: In-depth examination of contemporary issues facing police in our society. Particular emphasis will be given to police innovation: recent policies and programs that have been developed to enhance the police function of crime prevention (societal protection) and community relations (service).
- CJ 621. The Criminal Justice System 3 Units
Description: A study of the criminal justice system in the United States. A systems approach to the study of criminal justice and the interrelationships of the various components of the system. Social and political issues related to the criminal justice system are examined in depth.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CJ 625. Legal Aspects of Criminal Justice Management 3 Units
Description: Examination of the legal issues within criminal justice management, the effects of constitutional provisions, statutes, ordinances, and judicial decisions on justice administration. A discussion of the legal aspects of selection, promotion, assignment, and termination of justice employees.
- CJ 626. Emergency Management 3 Units
Description: This course is an overview of emergency management in the United States and will focus on the four phases of the emergency management process: mitigation, preparedness, response and recovery. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CJ 627. Computer and Cyber Crime 3 Units
Description: This course examines advanced legal, policy and technical issues of computer, digital and electronic crime, including issues with digital & computational forensics, information security and privacy. Class participation, writing and oral presentations will be integral components of the course.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CJ 630. Critical Infrastructure Protection and Resilience 3 Units
Description: This course will address U.S. key infrastructures and assets, potential threats to these, their major vulnerabilities, methods used to assess these vulnerabilities and current U.S. policy pertaining to infrastructure and asset protection.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CJ 643. Theories of Crime and Delinquency 3 Units
Description: A study of the psychological and sociological factors involved in criminal and delinquent behavior. The relationship of theory to the prevention and control of crime, treatment of offenders and administration of respective criminal justice agencies.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CJ 644. Seminar in Juvenile Justice 3 Units
Description: Theoretical and empirical study of the etiology, distribution and extent of delinquency; problems involved in measuring delinquency; role of the police, courts and legal statutes; critical examination of treatment and prevention programs.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- CJ 648. Seminar in Criminal Justice Program Planning & Evaluation - WR 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered
Prerequisite(s): Graduate level.

LEAD 701. Intermediate Applied Statistics 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Prerequisite(s): LEAD 601. Description: Covers two intermediate statistics, analysis of variance and multiple regression as general data analytic techniques in applied research. Includes some programming and data processing. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	LEAD 709. Proposal Development in Educational Leadership & Organizational Development 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Prerequisite(s): LEAD 708. Description: The purpose of this course is for students to develop key components of a research proposal in advance of its defense before their committees and implementation. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
LEAD 702. Applied Multiple Regression 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Prerequisite(s): LEAD 701. Description: Applications of multiple regression as a general data analysis technique in educational and behavioral sciences. SPSS for Windows is used extensively. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	LEAD 710. Doctoral Seminar in Educational Leadership 3 Units Grading Basis: Pass/Fail Description: Study of meaning and requirements of doctoral study. Discussion of current literature. Pass/Fail. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
LEAD 703. Multivariate Educational Statistics 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered Prerequisite(s): LEAD 601, LEAD 701 and LEAD 702. Description: Examines multivariate statistical methods used by educational researchers, including multiple regression, multivariate analysis of variance, and factor analysis. Computer software packages are extensively used. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	LEAD 711. UofL / WKU Cooperative Program 1-15 Units For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm) LEAD 715. Advanced Organizational Theory 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Description: Focus is on integrating the various theories of organizations and management into an overarching general systems theory. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
LEAD 704. Qualitative Field Research Methods 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Fall Only Description: Provides opportunities to design and critique field studies in educational and social settings and to practice techniques used to collect and analyze qualitative. Additional time required outside class for observations and interviews. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	LEAD 720. LEAD 732. Education Policy Analysis3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Prerequisite(s): LEAD 730 Provides skills for persons engaged in educational leadership who desire to explore specific functional techniques for the purpose of improving administration and management.

Description: This is the second course in our sequence following LEAD 730.

LEAD 735. Doctoral Seminar in HRE and IT1-3 Units

Prerequisite(s): Admission to doctoral program or consent of the instructor, and consent of the student's advisor.

Description: It is designed to expose students to the work of other doctoral students, faculty members, and other research professionals in human resource development.

LEAD 740. Advanced Internship in HRE and IT2-6 Units

Prerequisite(s): Doctoral student with an emphasis in human resource development and consent of advisor.

Description: Provides PhD and EdD students with advanced on-the-job experiences in the field of human resource development.

LEAD 750. Doctoral Seminar in Educational Evaluation3 Units

Prerequisite(s): LEAD 606; PhD or EdD students or by consent of instructor.

Description: Covers advanced topics in educational evaluation. Discussion of policy issues and quantitative and qualitative methods.

LEAD 760. Doctoral Internship in Educational Evaluation3-6 Units

Prerequisite(s): PhD or EdD students in the evaluation specialty area, and consent of instructor required.

Description: Provides on-the-job learning experiences for future educational evaluators.

LEAD 763. Factor Analytic Procedures3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring, Summer Even Years

Prerequisite(s): LEAD 602; LEAD 702; LEAD 703; ECPY 740.

Description: Course addresses the use of factor analytic procedures to examine the psychometric properties of instruments used in the social and behavioral sciences. Specific focus is the use of factor analysis throughout all phases of scale development and validation, which includes examining an instrument's internal structure and testing its measurement invariance across groups. Its use within multilevel modeling is also considered. Factor analytic procedures covered include exploratory and confirmatory factor analysis, including emerging advancements within latent variable modeling. Data analysis examples will be based on social science applications and practical implementation of methods using available statistical software.

This course is designed to prepare students to understand the nature of crisis, trauma, and disasters and identify the personal and systemic impacts of crises and other trauma-causing events on individuals, families, and communities. Students will develop a foundation for assessing and treating post-trauma reactions in adults, along with an overview of trauma responses in children. This course explores the rapidly expanding literature in the field of psychological trauma and attempts to delineate its common concerns, research basis, and practice guidelines. It presents the roles and responsibilities of counselors in treating post-trauma exposure. Through contemporary readings and experiential activities, students will consider cultural, legal, and ethical issues related to crisis, trauma, and disaster events and response.

Electrical and Computer Engineering (ECE)

Subject-area course lists indicate courses currently active for offering at the University of Louisville. Not all courses are scheduled in any given academic term. For class offerings in a specific semester, refer to the Schedule of Classes (https://csprd.louisville.edu/psp/ps_class/EMPLOYEE/PSFT_CS/c/COMMUNITY_ACCESS.CLASS_SEARCH./x/?state=62dab551a0d600a5e8237359c50704e59007&duo_code=sjUx20STj21bJWVEuQ3Z1YRiHmfXpgoV)

500-level courses generally are included in both the undergraduate- and graduate-level course listings; however, specific course/section offerings may vary between semesters. Students are responsible for ensuring that they enroll in courses that are applicable to their particular academic programs.

Course Fees

Some courses may carry fees beyond the standard tuition costs to cover additional support or materials. Program-, subject- and course-specific fee information can be found on the Office of the Bursar website (<https://louisville.edu/bursar/tuitionfee/university-fees/>).

ECE 500. Special Topics in Electrical Engineering1-6 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerDescription: Exploration of one or more ECE topics not covered in the regular course offerings.

ECE 505. Graduate-Professional Project in Electrical Engineering1-6 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): Approval of a faculty sponsor.

ECE 510. Computer Design3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, SpringPrerequisite(s): ECE 210.Corequisite(s): ECE 511.Description: Review of logic design and elementary computer organization. Design of the central processing unit, memory, control, and input-output portions of a computer. The VHDL hardware design language will be used.Note: Cross-listed with CSE 510.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

ECE 511. Computer Design Laboratory1 Unit*Term Typically Offered: Fall, SpringPrerequisite(s): ECE 210.Corequisite(s): ECE 510 or CECS 510.Description: Experiments in the design of the central processing unit, memory, control, and input-output portions of a computer using VHDL for software simulation.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

ECE 514. Introduction to VLSI Systems Laboratory1 Unit*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): ECE 210; ECE 252 or ECE 333.Corequisite(s): ECE 515.Description: Design of logic circuits and subsystems using CAD tools: layout, verification, parameter extraction, circuit- and logic-level simulation.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

ECE 515. Introduction to VLSI Systems3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): ECE 210; ECE 252 or ECE 333.Corequisite(s): ECE 514.Description: MOS devices and circuits, electrical and logic design principles. Fabrication steps, design rules, electrical parameters, extraction, delays. Logic/switch arrays, dynamic precharge logic, precharge forms, finite state machines, registers, memories, subsystem design examples.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

ECE 516. Microcomputer Design4 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): ECE 412 or CECS 412 or consent of instructor.Description: Design and construction of microcomputers with microprocessors and digital integrated circuits. Breadboarding, hardware design and software design are emphasized. The class is separated into groups and each group designs, breadboards and tests a complete microcomputer system including interfaces to peripheral devices.Note: Cross-listed with CECS 525.

ECE 518. Fundamentals of Computer Communications and Networks3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, SpringPrerequisite(s): ECE 360 or IE 360, and CSE 412.

Description: Data communications: The exchange of data between devices is covered. The key aspects of transmission interfacing, link control, and multiplexing are examined. Data communication networking: Examines the internal mechanisms by which communication networks provide a data transfer service for attached devices.

Note: Cross-listed with CSE 516.

ECE 520. Digital Signal Processing3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, SpringPrerequisite(s): ECE 420.Corequisite(s): ECE 521.

Description: Discrete time signals and systems; Discrete Fourier Transforms, FFT algorithms, flow graph and the matrix representation of digital filters; FIR and IIR filter design techniques; quantization effects; spectral estimation; current applications of digital signal processing.

ECE 521. Digital Signal Processing Laboratory1 Unit*Term Typically Offered: Fall, SpringPrerequisite(s): ECE 420.Corequisite(s): ECE 520.

Description: Focuses on the implementation of common digital signal processing functions using state-of-the-art DSP devices and software. Introduction to fundamentals of discrete-time signal processing and digital signal processor architectures and applications. Emphasis on laboratory experience involving generation of deterministic and random signals; digital filter design; quantization effects; FFT computation; linear system analysis; speech processing.

ECE 523. Introduction to Biometrics3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): ECE 420 and Senior standing.

Description: Biometric approaches aim at identification based on a physical characteristic. Survey of biometric techniques with focus on non-intrusive approaches. Topics covered include image formation, sensors, motion tracking, and face recognition algorithms.

ECE 526. LabVIEW for Electrical Engineers3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): ECE 420 (or concurrent) or permission from the instructor.

Description: Introduction to capabilities of LabVIEW software for electrical engineers. Weekly labs build mastery of LabVIEW applications such as: data acquisition and analysis, instrumentation, and DSP programming.

ECE 528. Deep Learning and AI Tools3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): ENGR 330 or ENGR 307.Corequisite(s): ECE 529.

Description: Machine learning basics. Supervised and unsupervised learning. Feedforward networks, error back propagation algorithm; linear, nonlinear, logistic and softmax regression, regularization. Autoencoders, sparsity and feature learning under constraints. Convolutional nets. Recurrent networks, backpropagation through time, LSTM.

ECE 529. Deep Learning and AI Tools Laboratory1 Unit*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): ENGR 330 or ENGR 307.Corequisite(s): ECE 528.

Description: Lab course for ECE 528 Deep Learning and AI Tools. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

ECE 530. Introduction to Random Processes and Estimation Theory3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): ENGR 330; ECE 360 or ISE 360; and ECE 420.

Description: Introduction to the theory and applications of random processes, a nonmeasure-theoretic approach to the study of random variables, functions of random variables, least square estimation, convergence, stochastic representation, stationarity, ergodicity, Gaussian processes, Poisson processes, Markov chains, and random fields.

ECE 531. Power Electronics3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): ECE 333, ECE 334, and ECE 420.

Description: Topics in power electronics including: power semiconductor devices; converter topologies and their applications; switched-mode DC and uninterruptible power supplies; motor drives; EMI concerns and remedies for interfacing to electric utilities.

ECE 532. Electromechanical System Designs for Home Appliances4.5 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer

Description: An integrated study of advanced electrical engineering and software engineering fundamentals and their application to technologies associated with the design, development, and production of modern major household appliances. This class is designed for GE Appliances Edison students or GE Appliances employees enrolled in the ECE program.

ECE 533. Analog Integrated Circuit Design Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Prerequisite(s): ECE 252 or ECE 333. Corequisite(s): ECE 534. Description: Design and simulation of analog integrated circuits using CMOS FETs. Topics covered include: the design and simulation process, the technology and design rules of a 0.5um CMOS fabrication process, FET, capacitor, resistor and diode design, current sources, active loads, output stages, amplifiers and a custom IC design project. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	ECE 544. Microfabrications/MEMS Laboratory Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): ECE 543 (or concurrent). Fee: An additional $250.00 is charged for this course. Description: Laboratory to illustrate microfabrication processes, semiconductor measurement techniques, MEMS microstructure fabrication, and MEMS testing. Cleanroom activity required. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	1 Unit
ECE 534. Analog Integrated Circuit Design Laboratory Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Prerequisite(s): ECE 252 or ECE 333. Corequisite(s): ECE 533. Description: Laboratory to illustrate design principles in ECE 533. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	1 Unit	ECE 545. Optical Signal Processing Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): ECE 420 or consent of instructor. Description: Scalar diffraction theory and equivalence to linear filtering. Fourier transform properties of lenses. The modulation transfer function. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
ECE 539. Industrial Software for Home Appliances Description: This course provides electrical engineering graduate students working in the major home appliance industry with an understanding of industrial software engineering fundamentals and their application to technologies associated with the design, development, and production of major household appliances such as refrigerators, washers, dryers, cooking products and dishwashers. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	4.5 Units	ECE 546. Introduction to Medical Imaging Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): ECE 420. Description: Focuses on the foundation of modern medical imaging at an introductory level with emphasis placed on concepts: X-ray, CT, MRI, PET, and Ultrasound will be discussed. Students interested in in-depth treatment of these topics should register for ECE 641. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
ECE 542. Semiconductor Device Fundamentals Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring Prerequisite(s): ENGR 205 or MATH 405. Description: Semiconductor fundamentals, energy bands, carrier transport theory, continuity equations, PN junction diodes, Zener diodes, MOS capacitors, MOSFETs, microelectronic fabrication, and select other topics. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	ECE 547. Semiconductor Photonic Devices Term Typically Offered: Fall Only Prerequisite(s): ENGR 205 or MATH 405; PHYS 299. Description: This course covers advanced and state-of-the-art topics in modern photonic devices including semiconductor lasers, light-emitting diodes (LEDs), photodetectors, solar cells, CCD /CMOS imaging devices, and display devices such as LCD and OLED. Also, the recent development of organic optoelectronic devices will be discussed. A design project using a simulation software will enhance the knowledge on the related issues. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
ECE 543. Fundamentals of Microfabrication and MEMS Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): Senior standing. Description: Microfabrication techniques including cleanroom technology, lithography, thermal oxidation, diffusion, ion implantation, film deposition, etching, micromachining, wafer-level bonding/polishing, and packaging yield. Microtechnology measurement and analysis techniques. Process simulation. CAD device-layout. MEMS (microelectromechanical systems) and microelectric technology and applications. Material issues for MEMS/microelectronics. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	ECE 548. Electron Microscopy Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Description: This Electron Microscopy course provides an in-depth introduction to the principles, techniques, and applications of Scanning Electron Microscopy (SEM). Students will gain hands-on experience with sample preparation, imaging, and analysis, learning to capture high-resolution images of biological and materials samples at the nanoscale. Ideal for students and professionals in fields such as materials science, biology, and nanotechnology, this course equips participants with the skills needed to conduct precise electron microscopy imaging and analysis in a wide range of research and industrial applications. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units

ECE 549. Micro Electro Mechanical Systems (MEMS) Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Prerequisite(s): ENGR 205 or MATH 405; PHYS 299; ECE 252 or ECE 333. Description: MEMS fundamentals, mechanical structures used for MEMS, actuation methods, sensing methods, damping, noise, dynamic response, resonant structures, inertial sensors, resonant filters, chemical and biological sensors, simulations. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	ECE 560. Control Systems Principles Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): ECE 420. Corequisite(s): ECE 561. Description: Basic concepts of linear control systems. Formulation of the linear control problem by classical and state space methods. Frequency response and time response analysis and synthesis techniques. Stability and system performance specifications. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
ECE 550. Communication and Modulation Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Prerequisite(s): ECE 360 or ISE 360, and ECE 420. Corequisite(s): ECE 551. Description: Modulations such as AM, FM, PAM, PPM, PDM, single sideband, vestigial sideband. Coherent and noncoherent detection, heterodyne action, performance and distortion, circuits for modulation and demodulation For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	ECE 561. Control Systems Laboratory Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Corequisite(s): ECE 560. Description: Laboratory exercises involving identification, analysis and design of closed-loop control systems. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	1 Unit
ECE 551. Communication Systems Laboratory Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Prerequisite(s): ECE 420. Corequisite(s): ECE 550. Description: Laboratory exercises involving the design and analysis of electronic communication systems for the transmission of analog and digital data at radio frequencies. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	1 Unit	ECE 564. Fundamentals of Autonomous Robots Term Typically Offered: Fall Only Prerequisite(s): Senior standing, or permission of instructor. Corequisite(s): ECE 565. Description: Fundamentals of autonomous robots: sensors, path planning, machine perception, basic principles of AI, modeling, control and architecture. Case studies in industry and medicine will be discussed. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
ECE 555. Digital Image Processing Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring Prerequisite(s): ECE 520 and ECE 521, or ECE 420 and departmental consent. Corequisite(s): ECE 556. Description: Introduction to the theory and applications of 2-D signal and image processing: 2-D signals and systems analysis, 2-D sampling and quantization, 2-D signals and image transforms, 2-D FIR filter design; image formation; image enhancement; image restoration; image coding; image reconstruction from projections; image compression; color image processing; current applications. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	ECE 565. Fundamentals of Autonomous Robots Lab Term Typically Offered: Fall Only Prerequisite(s): Senior standing, or permission of instructor. Corequisite(s): ECE 564. Description: An autonomous robots laboratory experience in which the student becomes familiar with designing and building autonomous robots, using sensors, applying robotic paradigms and controller design. A final robotic competition will be held at the end of the semester. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	1 Unit
ECE 556. Digital Image Processing Laboratory Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring Corequisite(s): ECE 555. Description: Laboratory experiments in software are assigned to test the concepts covered in ECE 555, Digital Image Processing. Projects include: Image Representation and Transformation, Image Enhancement in the spatial and frequency domain and Image Restoration. Time permitting, projects on image compression and image segmentation will also be assigned. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	1 Unit	ECE 569. Intermediate Electromagnetic Fields and Waves Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): ECE 473. Description: General curvilinear coordinates. Electromagnetic energy transmission. The wave equation, Poynting theorem and plane wave propagation in media. Transmission lines and impedance matching. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units

ECE 581. Electric Machines and DrivesTerm Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): ECE 473.

Description: Operating principles and characteristics of DC, induction, synchronous motors/generators. AC/DC electric-machine drives for speed/position control. Integrated discussion of electric machines, power electronics, and control systems. B and H in ferromagnetic materials. Magnetic circuits. Transformers. Dynamic equations of magnetic systems.

ECE 582. Power System AnalysisTerm Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): ECE 473.

Description: Three-phase circuits. Inductance and capacitance of transmission lines. Circuit models. Per-unit representation. Network methods. Load-flow studies. Load-flow control. Economic dispatch. Symmetrical three-phase faults.

ECE 593. Independent Study in Electrical EngineeringTerm Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): Approval of a faculty sponsor.

ECE 595. Graduate/Professional Seminar in Electrical & Computer EngineeringTerm Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer

ECE 600. Special Topics in Electrical & Computer Engineering

Description: An examination of one or more specific areas of Electrical and/or Computer Engineering not covered in the regular curriculum.

Topics vary by semester.

3 Units3 Units*1-6 Units*1 Unit*1-6 Units*ECE 602. Graduate Internship in Electrical and Computer Engineering*2 Units*Grading Basis: Pass/FailTerm Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): Admission to Graduate Study, Permission of Department Chair, and Permission of Director of Career Services.

Description: Supervised professional experience in industry at the graduate level. This course provides the structure and focus for the graduate intern field assignment to ensure that the assignment is appropriate and consistent with the intern's graduate course of study and professional development. Not to be counted towards meeting the requirements for a degree. May be repeated for credit.

Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

ECE 605. Graduate Project in Electrical & Computer Engineering1-6 Units*Prerequisite(s): Approval of a faculty sponsor.

ECE 611. Computer ArchitectureTerm Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): Any of the following: CECS 510, CECS 525, ECE 510, ECE 516 or equivalent.

Description: This course will provide in-depth exposure to advanced topics in computer architecture. The emphasis is on studying and analyzing fundamental issues in computer architecture design and their impact on performance. Course topics include performance measurements; ISA; memory hierarchy design and cache memory; advanced pipelining; and advanced computer structures for instruction-level parallelism, instruction scheduling, data-level parallelism, and thread-level parallelism.

Note: Cross-listed with CECS 611.

ECE 613. Computational Intelligence Methods for Data Analysis3 Units*Prerequisite(s): Graduate standing.

Description: Foundations of neural processing, fuzzy systems, genetic algorithms, and machine learning. Theory and application of Principal and Independent Component Analysis. Applications for classification, clustering, visualization, data mining, rule generation, and expert systems.

- ECE 614. Deep Learning 3 Units
Description: Machine learning basics. Supervised and unsupervised learning. Feedforward neural networks, error back propagation algorithm, logistic and softmax regression, regularization. Auto-encoders, sparsity and feature learning under constraints Convolutional nets. Boltzmann machines.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ECE 618. Artificial Intelligence Systems 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered
Description: The course provides an in-depth overview of the modern theory, algorithms, and sample applications of artificial intelligence, in a systems-based approach. Theoretical concepts include predicate calculus logic, heuristic search, language models, and knowledge representations. Algorithms include machine learning using convolutional neural networks, deep learning, reinforcement learning, and transfer learning.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ECE 619. Computer Vision 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Spring Only
Prerequisite(s): ECE 555 or ECE 618.
Corequisite(s): ECE 645.
Description: Introduction to the theory and applications of computer vision. Topics include: image representation, image segmentation, image analysis by mathematical morphology, texture, shape representation, shape analysis and 3D vision.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ECE 620. Pattern Recognition and Machine Intelligence 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring
Prerequisite(s): ECE 420 and ECE 360 or ISE 360.
Corequisite(s): ECE 655.
Description: Fundamentals of statistical, structural, and syntactic pattern recognition approaches. Parametric and nonparametric classification, feature extraction, clustering, and formal languages representation. Applications include: Data classification, character recognition, speech recognition, and target tracking.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ECE 631. Advanced Electromechanical System Design for Home Appliances 4.5 Units
Description: Provides electrical engineering graduate students working in the major home appliance industry with an advanced, integrated summary of electrical engineering and computer engineering fundamentals presented in the context of technologies impacting appliance product lines and production methodologies. Curriculum materials and assignments emphasize the multi-disciplinary nature of these technologies, and critical role played by EE / CE in their realization. The course culminates in an end-of-semester project, which the students will work together to solve a real-world engineering problem from the major home appliance industry.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ECE 632. Semiconductor Principles 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): ECE 542 and ECE 473.
Description: Fundamental principles of semiconductors necessary for a detailed understanding of the operation of transistors, including energy bands, carrier statistics, recombination-generation, carrier transport, and Boltzmann equation.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ECE 633. Microelectronics Design and Fabrication 4 Units
Term Typically Offered: Spring Only
Prerequisite(s): ECE 542, ECE 543 and ECE 544.
Fee: An additional $250.00 is charged for this course.
Description: Design, layout, simulation and verification, fabrication, characterization, and extraction of model parameters for microelectronic devices (e.g., MOSFETs) and circuits.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ECE 636. MEMS Design and Fabrication 4 Units
Term Typically Offered: Spring Only
Prerequisite(s): ECE 543 and ECE 544.
Fee: An additional $250.00 is charged for this course.
Description: Design, layout, simulation and verification, fabrication, characterization, and extraction of model parameters of MEMS devices.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ECE 638. The MOSFET 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): ECE 542.
Description: Fundamentals of MOSFET operation and fabrication, including long-channel MOSFET's, short-channel MOSFET's, sub-100nm gate-length MOSFET's, and novel MOSFET structures.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ECE 639. Advanced Industrial Software for Home Appliances 4.5 Units
Description: Provides electrical engineering graduate students working in the major home appliance industry with an understanding of industrial software engineering fundamentals and their application to technologies associated with the design, development, and production of major household appliances such as refrigerators, washers, dryers, cooking products and dishwashers.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ECE 640. Introduction to Biomedical Engineering 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): ECE 420.
Description: Engineering modeling and simulation of biological systems, quantitative physiology of the cardiovascular, pulmonary, and circulation systems, fundamentals of biomechanics and human-machine interface, basics of medical instrumentation design, and artificial organs. Practical applications include biopotential amplifiers design, biological signal processing, and medical imaging.

- ECE 641. Medical Imaging Systems 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): ECE 555 or ECE 618.
Description: Focuses on the foundations of; modern medical imaging. Topics include: X-ray generation and X-ray/tissue interactions, projection X-ray imaging, image reconstruction from projections, X-ray CT, MRI, nuclear medicine, SPECT, PET, and Ultrasound.
Note: Cross-listed with CSE 641.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ECE 643. Introduction to Biomedical Computing 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Graduate Standing.
Description: Covers various aspects of modern tools of biocomputing in its broad sense; hardware and software issues are covered. Topics include: Super and high performance computer architecture, high bandwidth networking, wireless computing, visualization, and software engineering in medicine. Topics also include computer-assisted interventions, imaging, parallel programming, and database design and query, as applied to life, medical and biomedical sciences.
Note: Formerly cross-listed with CECS 643.

- ECE 645. Computer Vision Laboratory 1 Unit
Term Typically Offered: Spring Only
Prerequisite(s): ECE 555 or ECE 618.
Corequisite(s): ECE 619.
Description: Laboratory experiments in hardware and software forms are assigned to test the concepts covered in ECE 619, Computer Vision. Projects include: Image formation and camera calibration, stereo vision, 3D object reconstruction from the sequence of images, active vision applications, surface registration, and motion estimation.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ECE 651. Communication System Design 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): ECE 550.
Description: Emphasis on the systems approach to digital communication systems design. Topics include communication link analysis, channel coding, modulation and coding trade-offs, synchronization, spread spectrum techniques, and data encryption and decryption.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ECE 652. Information Theory and Coding 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): ECE 550.
Description: Information theory, capacity, and measures of information; fixed and variable length block encoding, data compression; state transition and Markov source models for communication channels and methods of achieving maximum capacity; topics in abstract algebra including groups, rings and fields; block error correction codes such as Hamming codes, cyclic codes, BCH codes, Reed Solomon codes; convolutional codes and Viterbi decoding algorithm.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ECE 653. Digital Communications 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): ECE 550 and ECE 360 or ISE 360.
Description: Review of random process theory, sampling and quantization, source coding, optimum receivers for AWGN channels, digital transmission through band-limited AWGN channels, inter-symbol interference, equalization, and spread spectrum systems.
- ECE 654. Advanced Voice/Data Networks 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): ECE 518 or CECS 516 or permission of the instructor.
Description: This course extends topics covered in ECE 518 to address advanced networking technologies that are used in corporate intranets and the Internet. Topics covered include: packet-voice technologies, Ethernet switching, IP version 6, digital subscriber loop technologies, dynamic routing, tagged packet switching technologies, and Quality of Service (QoS).
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ECE 655. Pattern Recognition and Machine Intelligence Laboratory 1 Unit
Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring
Corequisite(s): ECE 620.
Description: Laboratory experiments in hardware and software forms are assigned to test concepts covered in ECE 620, Pattern Recognition and Machine Intelligence. Projects include: Stochastic simulation, design of Bayesian classifiers, clustering, hyperspectral classifiers, digital train mapping, automatic target recognition, and biomedical applications.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ECE 656. Wireless Communications and Mobile Radio Networks 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered
Prerequisite(s): ECE 550 This class discusses the modern view of broadband wireless communication systems and their associated challenges.
Description: The class will cover the latest concepts and developments in the field. Emphases will be placed on enabling technologies such as OFDM, MIMO and their applications in the latest WiFi and mobile cellular networks.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ECE 660. Introduction to Robust Control 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): ECE 560 and ECE 561.
Description: To provide students with the fundamentals of Robust Control Theory, with emphasis on stability and performance analysis in the time and frequency domains and design tools for robust performance and robust stability. It examines how a controller can be designed taking into account uncertainties in the model of the plant. The course will include a final design project which will be completed using MATLAB.

- ECE 661. Sampled-Data Control Systems 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): ECE 560.
Description: Analysis and synthesis of closed-loop sampled-data control systems using Z-transforms and state-space methods. Sampling and data reconstruction. Modified Z-transform. Time response and steady state accuracy. Stability analysis. Lag, lead, and PID controllers. Pole assignment. State estimation. Discrete optimal control.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ECE 662. Introduction to Optimum Control 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): ECE 560.
Description: Calculus of variations, dynamic programming, the minimum principle, and numerical optimization techniques applied to discrete-time and continuous-time deterministic control systems.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ECE 664. Modern Adaptive Control 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): ECE 560 and ECE 625.
Description: Methods of modern adaptive control, including the indirect and direct approaches. Discrete- and continuous-time controllers. Behavior of controllers under nonideal conditions, including stochastic disturbances and unmodeled dynamics.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ECE 665. Theory of Nonlinear Systems 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer
Description: Modern theory of nonlinear systems including phase plane analysis, Lyapunov stability theory, perturbation theory, singular perturbations, describing functions, Lure problem, Popov circle criterion. Applications to closed-loop control systems.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ECE 668. Advanced Robotic Manipulation 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered
Prerequisite(s): ECE 560.
Description: This course presents a broad overview of robotics with focus on manipulators rather than mobile robots. This course will cover the principles of kinematics, dynamics, control, and planning as applied to research robotic manipulation systems. It will discuss serial and parallel robots, multi-fingered robot hands, mobile manipulators, with both motion and force control problems. Topics discussed include: classification of robots, robot kinematics using screw theory, Lagrangian dynamics, nonholonomic constraints, introduction to robot motion planning, computed torque, force, and visual servo control, introduction to grasping and multi-fingered manipulation.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ECE 669. System Identification and Estimation 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered
Prerequisite(s): ECE 560.
Description: Introduction to parametric and non-parametric, linear and nonlinear identification methods with applications in many engineering fields, including robots or mechatronic systems, MEMS and NEMS, fluid flow and heat transport phenomena in bio-chemistry. Models are derived from noisy data and quantitatively describing the relationship between system inputs and outputs from data used for prediction, control or optimization. Covers parametric box models such as linear, nonlinear, and recursive autoregressive models, neural networks, nonparametric models such as Empirical Transfer function estimate, and the Kalman Filter.
- ECE 682. Advanced Power System Analysis 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): ECE 582.
Description: Symmetrical components. Unsymmetrical faults. Power system stability. Power system protection. Computer methods.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ECE 687. Platform Engineering Project 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): ME 530, ME 531 and ECE 532.
Description: Major product development project involving a multidisciplinary team working on design and/or research problems associated with consumer appliance technologies. Concurrent topics on research methodologies, product realization, and project management. A proposal, activity reports and final report are required. Project results are presented for faculty and peer review.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ECE 690. Master of Science Thesis or Paper in Electrical Engineering 1-6 Units
Prerequisite(s): Graduate or Professional standing.
Description: Performance of an engineering project or research activity under the direction of a faculty member, resulting in a thesis that demonstrates both mastery of the subject matter and a high level of communication skills. A written thesis must be presented and defended orally before a faculty committee for approval and be submitted to a referred conference or referred journal for potential publication.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ECE 692. Master of Science Advanced Level Independent Project 3-4 Units
Prerequisite(s): Graduate Standing, Approval of the Department Chair.
Description: Students enrolled in this course will engage in an engineering project or research activity and produce a report that demonstrates both mastery of the subject matter and a high level of communication skills. Oral presentation of the report is required.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

ECE 693. Independent Study in Electrical & Computer Engineering1-6 Units*Prerequisite(s): Approval of a faculty sponsor.

ECE 695. Graduate Seminar in Electrical and Computer Engineering 1 UnitTerm Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): Graduate or Professional standing.

Description: Students receive career preparation by active participation in technical, career and policy seminars. Topics include current and future technology directions, entrepreneurship, strategic networking, publishing, patenting, reporting and communication, life-long and professional leadership. Content delivered by the instructor, guest speakers and expert webinars.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

ECE 696. Advanced Level Oral Presentation0 Units*Grading Basis: Pass/FailPrerequisite(s): Graduate or Professional Standing and approval of the Department Chair.Corequisite(s): Enrollment in an approved ECE companion course for the Advanced-Level Project/Research/Communication requirement.

Description: Oral presentation before a faculty committee, of the results of an engineering project or research activity.

ECE 697. Master of Engineering Thesis or Paper in Electrical Engineering1-6 Units*Prerequisite(s): ECE 497 and graduate or professional standing.

Description: Performance of a study, design, or investigation under the direction of a faculty member. A written thesis or technical paper must be presented and defended orally before a faculty committee for approval. A paper must be submitted to a referred conference or referred journal for potential publication.

Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

ECE 700. Dissertation Research in Electrical Engineering1-18 Units*Prerequisite(s): Completion of doctoral core program and consent of dissertation director.

Description: Original research activity in an appropriate electrical engineering discipline, under the direction of an Electrical and Computer Engineering graduate faculty member.

Engineering Management (EM)

Subject-area course lists indicate courses currently active for offering at the University of Louisville. Not all courses are scheduled in any given academic term. For class offerings in a specific semester, refer to the Schedule of Classes (https://csprd.louisville.edu/ps/ps_class/)

EMPLOYEE/PSFT_CS/c/COMMUNITY_ACCESS.CLASS_SEARCH./x/?state=62dab551a0d600a5e8237359c50704e59007&duo_code=sjUx20STj21bIWVU

500-level courses generally are included in both the undergraduate- and graduate-level course listings; however, specific course/section offerings may vary between semesters. Students are responsible for ensuring that they enroll in courses that are applicable to their particular academic programs.

Course Fees

Some courses may carry fees beyond the standard tuition costs to cover additional support or materials. Program-, subject- and course-specific fee information can be found on the Office of the Bursar website (<https://louisville.edu/bursar/tuitionfee/university-fees/>).

EM 525. Project Management3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Occasionally OfferedPrerequisite(s): Admission in ISE or EM program or instructor permission.

Description: Use of CPM, PERT, precedence diagramming, resource allocation heuristics, and other techniques for planning, managing, and controlling engineering projects involving research and development, production, maintenance, and construction. Computer procedures and codes for analyzing complex project networks will be covered.

Note: Cross-listed with ISE 525.

EM 560. Construction Management3 Units*Prerequisite(s): Admission into the Engineering Management program or instructor permission.

Description: An investigation of the engineer's role in the construction process. Study of the many variables influencing the project and associated methods of managing variables. Includes a practical demonstration of student's understanding schedule and cost estimate for a project of the student's choosing.

EM 561. Engineering Statistics I3 Units*Prerequisite(s): Admission into the Engineering Management program or instructor permission.

Description: . Study of the laws of probability, discrete and continuous probability distributions, point and interval estimation, tests of hypothesis, simple linear regression, and the single factor analysis of variance.

EM 582. Management of Human Systems3 Units*Prerequisite(s): Admission into the Engineering Management program or instructor permission.

Description: Computer-aided, quantitative application of human performance capabilities and limitations to the planning, design, development, and evaluation of complex human-machine/industrial systems.

- EM 613. Operations Management 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Admission in EM program or instructor permission.
Description: Concepts in strategic planning, quality management, operations research, facility design, supply chain and logistics, forecasting, inventory control, resource planning, and scheduling. Emphasis is on appropriate analytical and computer-based techniques. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- EM 615. Management Science 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Admission in EM program or instructor permission.
Description: Students will gain knowledge in the application of management science processes and models used in decision making. Emphasis will be placed on the mathematical tools and will cover the following topics: Decision Analysis, Regression Models, Forecasting, Inventory, Control Models, Linear Programming, Queuing Theory, and Discrete Event Simulation. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- EM 620. Safety Management 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Summer Only
Prerequisite(s): Admission into the EM program, or instructor permission.
Description: This course will introduce concepts of designing, operating, maintaining, and managing safety programs. Topics will be drawn from hazard avoidance, risk management, legislation (including OSHA & Worker's Compensation), health management, accident investigation, building/facility safety, industrial hygiene, fire safety, personal protection, ergonomics, materials handling, machine guarding, electrical hazards, construction safety, systems safety, certification issues, ethics, and professionalism. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- EM 624. Human Resource Management 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Admission in EM program or instructor permission.
Description: This course will present HR management various activities including hiring, training, performance review, motivation, and employee satisfaction. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- EM 626. Effective Communication for Engineers 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Summer Only
Prerequisite(s): Admission into the EM program, or instructor permission.
Description: This class will discuss efficient ways of communicating engineering ideas, projects, e-mails, and presentations to make them clear and concise to a variety of audiences. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- EM 627. Information Technology Management 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Spring Only
Prerequisite(s): Admission in EM program or instructor permission.
Description: In this course, students will gain knowledge in the application of information systems in business environments. The use and management of data supplied externally to the firm (e.g., customer transactions) and data generated internally by the firm (e.g., production orders) will be considered. Emphasis will be placed on leveraging reliable data to derive meaningful information that is relevant to the decisions a firm must make. The following topics will be included: Data Structure, Network Structure, System Security, System Access, System Reliability, Component Integration, User Interfaces, and Analytical Reports. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- EM 628. Engineering Management 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Admission in EM program or instructor permission.
Description: The principles and practices of administration of the engineering function, including management, organization, planning, controlling and measuring results, management of human resources, communication and decision-making. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- EM 632. Quality Management 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring
Prerequisite(s): EM 661 or ISE 563; admission in EM program or instructor permission.
Description: In this course, students will gain knowledge in the application of quality improvement methodology in both manufacturing and service environments. Emphasis will be placed on philosophical approaches to quality improvement and quantitative methods of quality control. The following topics will be included: Corporate Quality Programs, Applications for Quality Improvement, Measurement Systems Analysis, Statistical Process Control, Experimental Design, Root Cause Analysis, and Design for Quality. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- EM 640. Applied Systems Analysis 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): ISE 360 or equivalent; admission into the EM program or instructor permission.
Description: Methods of engineering management applied to case studies so as to define the problems, analyze the data, and recommend solutions or decisions. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- EM 645. Decision and Risk Analysis 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer
Prerequisite(s): Admission in EM program or instructor permission.
Description: In this course students will gain knowledge in the process of decision-making. Emphasis will be placed on quantitative and qualitative tools and will cover the following topics: Introduction to Decision Analysis, Elements of Decision Problems, Structuring Decisions, Making Choices, Sensitivity Analysis, and Organizational Use of Decision Analysis. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

EM 646. Marketing and the Engineer 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): Admission into the EM program or instructor permission.

Description: Provides an introduction to marketing principles and techniques with an emphasis on technical product development, pricing, promotion and distribution strategies. It stresses the role the engineers play in the product marketing plan of an organization, as well as methods for forecasting technology and measuring marketing decisions. It includes a unit on marketing aspects of engineering entrepreneurship. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

EM 656. Supply Chain Management 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): EM 613 and admission in EM program, or instructor permission.

Description: Understand how supply chain design and planning decisions impact the performance of the firm as well as the entire supply chain. Understand the link between supply chain structures and logistical capabilities in a firm. Case studies and problems are used throughout the course to highlight important concepts and principles.

EM 661. Engineering Statistics II 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring

Prerequisite(s): ISE 360 (or equivalent) and admission into the EM program, or instructor permission.

Description: The principles and techniques of advanced statistics, including multiple linear regression, multi-factor analysis of variance, experimental design, nonparametric statistics, and quality control.

Note: Students may only receive credit for one of the following: ISE 464, ISE 664, ME 611, and EM 661.

EM 670. Engineering Financial Management 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): Admission in EM program or instructor permission.

Description: This course examines various approaches for managing financial resources in the technology enterprise, including cost accounting and cost estimating. The focus is both direct and indirect costs for materials, labor and overhead.

EM 672. Management Law for Engineers 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer

Prerequisite(s): Admission in EM program or instructor permission.

Description: In this course, students will study the common law as it pertains to Contracts, Torts and Real Estate; rules governing business transactions in the area of creditors' rights in secured transactions and suretyship; sales as covered by the Uniform Commercial Code; business relationships such as agency and forms of business ownership, and ethics and professional liability.

EM 674. Intellectual Property Law for Engineers 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): Admission in EM program or instructor permission.

Description: A study of U.S. law governing the protection for various forms of intellectual property including patent, trademark, and copyright law. Issues addressed include creation, ownership, acquisition, use, and transfer of various forms of intellectual property.

EM 676. Effective Leadership 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer

Prerequisite(s): Admission in EM program or instructor permission.

Description: In this course, students will gain a comprehensive understanding of the leadership skills and practices required to advance the mission of an organization. Emphasis will be placed on establishing strategic direction with supporting tactics, enhancing the organization's problem solving capabilities, fostering an environment of reliable change implementation, and communicating with impact. The following topics will be included: Mission and Vision Statements, Corporate Values, Sourcing Decisions, Performance Improvement Systems, Change Management, and Leadership Styles.

EM 684. Applications for Process Improvement I 1.5 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring

Prerequisite(s): EM 613/ISE 240, EM 661/ISE 563; admission in EM program or instructor permission.

Corequisite(s): EM 685.

Description: In this course, students will learn the process improvement methodologies of six sigma. Emphasis will be placed on the quantitative and qualitative tools covered in EM 613 (ISE 240 equivalent) and EM 661 (ISE 563 equivalent) and how to use these tools within framework of the DMAIC process of six sigma. Students will complete the Define Phase of DMAIC.

EM 685. Applications for Process Improvement II 1.5 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring

Prerequisite(s): EM 613/ISE 240, EM 661/ISE 563; admission in EM program or instructor permission.

Corequisite(s): EM 684.

Description: In this course, students will apply the tools learned in EM 684 to complete a project. Students entering the class will have already completed the Define phase of DMAIC and in this class, will complete Measure, Analyze, Improve, Implement, and Control. At the end of the class, students have the option of taking an exam (for an additional fee) to obtain their Six Sigma Black Belt Certification.

EM 693. Independent Study in Engineering Management 1-6 Units

Description: Opportunity for the student, under the supervision of a sponsoring faculty member, to pursue individualized study related to research or practice that is not included in regular courses in the curriculum.

EM 694. Special Topics in Engineering Management 1-6 UnitsPrerequisite(s): Admission in EM program or instructor permission.Description: A theoretical or experimental investigation of an engineering management problem.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)EM 697. MEng Thesis in Engineering Management 1-6 Units*Description: A candidate for the Master of Engineering degree, specializing in the field of engineering management, is required to perform a study, design, or investigation under the direction of a faculty member. A written thesis is required to be presented orally and submitted to the faculty for approval.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)EM 699. Industrial Engineering Master's Degree Project 3 Units*Prerequisite(s): Instructor permission required.Description: The Industrial Engineering MS student carries out an engineering project under the supervision of a faculty mentor, prepares an acceptable written report, and presents a seminar on the project.Note: Cross-listed with ISE 699.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

Climate and Environmental Change*3 Units*Description: Global and regional climate change is one of the most pressing issues of our time. The science of climate change has employed a great diversity of techniques to unravel the Earth's climate history on multiple time scales. There now exists a considerable body of knowledge as to the magnitudes and rates of climate and environmental change. However, while the physical basis of the global climate system and its variation are well resolved, there is debate as to the nature of human intervention in the global climate system and consequences of climate change on the natural and human-made environment. As time moves forward, issues connected to all facets of climate change will become increasingly important particularly in terms of human occupancy and the sustainability of the planet. What is currently missing from debates connected to climate change is an agreed upon understanding the linkages between the physical basis of the global climate system and its connection to human affairs.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)ENVS 691. For class offerings in a specific semester, refer to the Schedule of Classes (https://csprd.louisville.edu/psps/ps_class/EMPLOYEE/PSFT_CS/c/COMMUNITY_ACCESS.CLASS_SEARCH./x/?state=62dab551a0d600a5e8237359c50704e59007&duo_code=sjUx20STj21bWVEuQ3Z1YRjHmfpgov).

500-level courses generally are included in both the undergraduate- and graduate-level course listings; however, specific course/section offerings may vary between semesters. Students are responsible for ensuring that they enroll in courses that are applicable to their particular academic programs.

Course Fees

Some courses may carry fees beyond the standard tuition costs to cover additional support or materials. Program-, subject- and course-specific fee information can be found on the Office of the Bursar website (<https://louisville.edu/bursar/tuitionfee/university-fees/>).

EXP 501. Applied Exercise Physiology3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): Admission into the Exercise Physiology MS Program; or Consent of Instructor.Description: Selective review of the pertinent areas of basic physiology and the application of this knowledge to exercise conditions. Consists of both lecture and laboratory format.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)EXP 502. Principles of Exercise Testing and Prescription*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): EXP 501 or consent of instructor.Description: Effects of exercise to prevent coronary heart disease and atherosclerosis; specific effects of exercise on the established risk factors. Exercise as a rehabilitative measure in heart attack recovery.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)EXP 503. Clinical Exercise Physiology*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): Admission into the Exercise Physiology MS Program; or Consent of Instructor.Description: This course provides students with in-depth content regarding the physiology of exercise specifically related to clinical populations.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)EXP 600. Exercise Biochemistry*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): Admission into the Exercise Physiology MS Program; or Consent of Instructor.Description: Effects of physical activities and work-related stress on the human organism. Includes energy liberation, circulation and respiration, physical work capacity, physical training, energy cost of various activities, nutrition and performance, temperature regulation, factors affecting performance and fitness, physiology of various sport activities. Laboratory demonstrations and projects and discussion of current literature. Spring.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)EXP 601. Laboratory Methods in Exercise Physiology*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): Admission into the Exercise Physiology MS Program or Consent of instructor.Fee: An additional $95.00 is charged for this course.Description: Basic laboratory techniques in Exercise Physiology will be covered, including: oxygen consumption, strength measurement, body composition, etc. General concepts of data collection including validity and reliability will be emphasized. Scientific writing skills will be developed through the use of lab reports. Experimental design and analysis will be briefly discussed. Fall.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)EXP 602. Biochemistry of Exercise*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): EXP 600 or consent of instructor.Description: Examination of nutritional, energetic and metabolic aspects of exercise. Emphasis on various biochemical control mechanisms that function during exercise and biochemical adaptations that occur through exercise training. Spring.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)EXP 603. Seminar in Exercise Physiology*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): Admission into the Exercise Physiology MS Program or consent of instructor.Description: Reviews, presentations and discussions of current topics in exercise physiology.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

EXP 604. Holistic Athlete Development Term Typically Offered: Summer Only Prerequisite(s): Admission into the Exercise Physiology MS Program or consent of instructor. Description: This course explores the multidimensional development of athletes, integrating physical, psychological, nutritional, and other factors to optimize performance, health, and long-term athletic success. Students will examine evidence-based strategies in strength and conditioning, recovery, mental skills, nutrition, and injury prevention while developing the skills to create comprehensive, individualized athlete development programs. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	EXP 608. Strength and Power Programming Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Prerequisite(s): Graduate Standing or Consent of Instructor This course focuses on the principles and methodologies of strength and power programming for athletic performance enhancement. Description: Students will explore the physiological adaptations underlying strength and power development and learn how to design evidence-based training programs to optimize muscular strength, power output, and athletic performance across different sports. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
EXP 605. Human Physiology Term Typically Offered: Fall Only Prerequisite(s): Admission into the Exercise Physiology MS Program; or Consent of Instructor. Description: Fundamental mechanisms of human physiology and study of coordinated body functions. Emphasis on neuromuscular, circulatory, respiratory and endocrine systems. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	EXP 609. Speed and Conditioning Programming Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Prerequisite(s): Graduate Standing or Consent of Instructor This course focuses on the principles and methodologies of speed and conditioning programming for athletic performance enhancement. Description: Students will explore the physiological adaptations underlying speed and conditioning development and learn how to design evidence-based training programs to optimize speed, agility, and conditioning across various sports and populations. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
EXP 606. Practicum in Exercise Physiology Term Typically Offered: Fall Only Prerequisite(s): Admission into the Exercise Physiology MS Program or consent of instructor. Description: This course is designed to provide an immersive and comprehensive experience for students seeking advanced knowledge and practical skills in the field of exercise physiology. Integrating theoretical concepts with real-world applications, the course focuses on case study presentations, clinical immersion experiences, and research activities to foster a deep understanding of exercise physiology principles. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	EXP 610. Periodization Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Prerequisite(s): Graduate Standing or Consent of Instructor This course provides an in-depth exploration of the theory of periodization, practical concepts, and periodization methodologies in the context of strength and conditioning programming. Description: Students will examine the theoretical principles, historical development, and practical applications of periodization models to systematically plan and optimize training adaptations, enhance athletic performance, and prevent overtraining and injury. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
EXP 607. Neuromuscular Exercise Physiology Term Typically Offered: Fall Only Prerequisite(s): Admission into the Exercise Physiology MS Program or consent of instructor. Description: This course provides an in-depth examination of neuromuscular physiology with a focus on clinical exercise applications. Students will explore the structure and function of the neuromuscular system, understanding its critical role in the control of movement and exercise. The curriculum emphasizes bioenergetics, muscle plasticity, and the neural mechanisms that regulate exercise. Key topics include the acute neuromuscular responses to physical activity, chronic adaptations to various forms of exercise training, and the neuromuscular adaptations to different physiological and pathological stimuli. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	EXP 611. Advanced Cardiorespiratory Physiology with ECG Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Prerequisite(s): Admission into the Exercise Physiology MS program; or Consent of Instructor. Description: Course delivers an in-depth examination of the pathophysiology of cardiovascular and pulmonary diseased states during resting conditions and their effects on the exercise response. The mechanical and electrical properties of the heart are explored through the interpretation of ECG signals including rate, rhythm, axis, hypertrophy and infarction. Myocardial oxygen consumption, pressure-volume loops, arteriovenous oxygen differences, and the effects of cardiac pharmacology are also reviewed. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units

3-6 Units

Prerequisite(s): Admission into the Exercise Physiology or Human Performance MS programs; or consent of Instructor.

Description: Experience in exercise testing, prescription and leadership are available for cardiac rehabilitation, elderly, pulmonary, orthopedic, sports performance, and other special populations as well as healthy individuals.

Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

FREN 611. Teaching and Research Methods in French3 Units*Description: Introduction to teaching and research methods in French through observation, investigation and practice.Note: Required of all French MA students.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

FREN 655. Independent Reading in French3 Units*Prerequisite(s): Graduate status.Description: Readings in literature, civilization, culture, history, or linguistics.

FREN 670. Special Topics3 Units*Prerequisite(s): Consent of instructor.Description: Selected topics in French language, literature, or culture.

Topics chosen will reflect the needs of the students and the background of the instructor.

Note: May be repeated under different subtitles.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

FREN 680. Seminar3 Units*Prerequisite(s): Consent of instructor.Description: Selected writers or personalities in French language, literature, or culture. Topics chosen will reflect the needs of the students and the background of the instructor.Note: May be repeated under different subtitles.

FREN 690. Thesis3-6 Units

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

FREN 699. Final Research Project3 Units*Prerequisite(s): 15 hours of graduate work.Description: Production of a research paper on a French or francophone literary or cultural topic supervised by a French faculty member.Note: Required of all French MA students.

Course Fees

Some courses may carry fees beyond the standard tuition costs to cover additional support or materials. Program-, subject- and course-specific fee information can be found on the Office of the Bursar website (<https://louisville.edu/bursar/tuitionfee/university-fees/>).

GEOG 500. Globalization Seminar 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): GEOG 300 or permission of instructor.

Description: A discussion-based course that focuses on current events, global economies, and cultural and environmental issues resulting from globalization.

GEOG 510. Urbanism in the Global South: Cities and Space 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered

Description: This course is a reading-based seminar. We learn about processes and practices within the Latin American and African city from a spatial, cultural, economic and political perspective.

Note: Cross-listed with LALS 510 and URBS 687.

GEOG 520. Geography and Nutrition Among African and African-American Populations 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): Consent of instructor.

Description: Comparison of geographical conditions, food culture, technology and socioeconomic factors among Africans and African-Americans affecting health and nutrition.

Note: Previously cross-listed with PAS 560.

GEOG 521. Medical Geography 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): Faculty consent.

Description: Introduction to concepts, methods and tools used to investigate geographic aspects of health and disease. Application of concepts and methods through analysis of health, population and environmental data.

GEOG 522. GIS and Public Health 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered

Prerequisite(s): Consent of instructor.

Description: Application of tools and methods of analysis in geographic information systems (GIS) to public health. Use of ArcGIS software to manage and analyze health, census and spatial data.

GEOG 524. Food and Race 3 Units

Description: This course will serve as a critical analysis of the intersection between race and food/agriculture. Topics covered include: 1) production, preparation and consumption patterns; 2) food production during slavery and sharecropping; 3) modern day agricultural labor; 4) food and health; 5) food and borders; and 6) food and national identity.

Note: Cross-listed with PAS 605.

GEOG 525. Measuring Sustainability: Our Human Planet 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Odd Years

Description: This course will facilitate student understanding of the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals in a spatially-explicit manner by introducing how Earth Observation data is being used to monitor and measure the SDG indicators.

GEOG 528. Planning, History and Issues 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): GEOG 328.

Description: The history of planning and contemporary issues with an emphasis on role of planning, zoning and law.

GEOG 529. Geography of Urban Issues 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered

Prerequisite(s): GEOG 328, GEOG 558 or comparable Urban Geography and GIS course.

Description: Advanced urban geography course with unique geographic perspective for integration of socioeconomic problems in America's metropolitan areas.

GEOG 530. Transportation Geography 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered

Prerequisite(s): GEOG 200 or consent of instructor.

Description: An analysis of distribution and transportation systems as functional entities capable of introducing and reacting to change within the economic region.

GEOG 531. GIS & Urban Demographic Analysis 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Prerequisite(s): GIS knowledge or concurrent tutorial.

Description: Demographic analysis through the use of GIS technology. Emphasis placed on metropolitan area characteristics including population change, segregation, ethnic settlement, social and economic stratification and commuting.

GEOG 535. GIS and Retail Site Analysis 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Fall Only Prerequisite(s): GIS knowledge or concurrent tutorial. Description: Retail site analysis through use of GIS technology. Emphasis placed on market demand and supply characteristics. Physical site analysis, demographics, and competitive environment will be examined. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	GEOG 549. Special Topics in Environmental Analysis Applications in GIS 3 Units Description: Introduction to the application of GIS to environmental problem solving. Note: May be repeated if topics vary. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
GEOG 536. Sustainable Transportation 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered Prerequisite(s): GEOG 200 or permission of instructor. Description: The course looks into the problems of developing sustainable transportation systems. We will examine the environmental and human problems associated with transportation; including climate change, air quality, consumption of non-renewable resources, safety, congestion and social equity. We will also explore possible solutions to these problems, including pricing, planning, policy, technology and education. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	GEOG 555. Remote Sensing 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Fall Only Fee: An additional $80.00 is charged for this course. Description: This course provides an introduction to the theory and application of remote sensing data with weekly lab reports for hands-on-experience in the acquisition and utilization of remotely-sensed data in geographical/environmental research. This course prepares for GEOG 556. Prior completion of GEOS 200, GEOS 350, or GEOS 301, or PHYS 111 or equivalent is recommended, but not required. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
GEOG 540. Geography and Human-Environment Interactions 3 Units Description: The study of interactions between humans and the environment is inherently interdisciplinary and multi-scalar, two of the hallmarks of contemporary geographic research. Students taking this course will be exposed to the theoretical underpinnings of both social and ecological aspects of research. Through in-class discussions of both seminal and contemporary peer-reviewed literature, students will be expected to engage in an interdisciplinary exploration of how studies of human-environment interactions have evolved from disciplinary roots into the large, complex and transdisciplinary projects commonly funded today and expected in the future. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	GEOG 556. Advanced Remote Sensing 3 Units Prerequisite(s): GEOG 555 or consent of instructor. Fee: An additional $80.00 is charged for this course. Description: Application of advanced techniques involved in the collection of digital imagery data from aircraft and spacecraft instruments. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
GEOG 545. Unoccupied Aerial Systems and Geospatial Applications 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Spring Odd Years Description: This course introduces unmanned aerial system (UAS) technology, application and the underlying principles of remote sensing and photogrammetry that inform the utilization of UAS data in geographical/environmental research. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	GEOG 558. Introduction to Geographic Information Systems 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Description: Introduction to geographic information systems using ArcGIS software, management of relational databases, and manipulation and graphical output of digital geo-spatial data. Note: May not be taken for credit if credit has been earned in GEOG 357 or GEOG 557. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
GEOG 548. Special Topics in Urban Analysis Applications in GIS 3 Units Prerequisite(s): GEOG 357 or GEOG 558. Description: Introduction to the application of GIS by local governments, non-profit agencies and other urban-related groups. Note: May be repeated if topics vary.	GEOG 559. Advanced Geographic Information Systems 3 Units Prerequisite(s): GEOG 558. Description: Application of advanced GIS concepts to real-world projects. An emphasis will be placed on the development of a digital spatial database. Note: Graduate students must arrange for an additional project for graduate credit.

- GEOG 583. Spatial and Non-Spatial Database Management 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered
Prerequisite(s): GEOG 357 or GEOG 558.
Description: Provides students with "hands-on" experience in development, management and integration of spatial and non-spatial databases, using GIS and database management software. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- GEOG 590. Special Topics 3 Units
Description: Investigation of topics not offered in regular courses. Topic will be announced in Schedule of Courses.
Note: Offered as needed.
Note: May be repeated for different topics up to a limit of 12 hours.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- GEOG 599. Directed Readings in Geography 1-4 Units
Prerequisite(s): Advanced courses in geography or related fields; permission of major department.
Description: Supervised readings centered around a specific region or topical field for advanced work.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- GEOG 600. History and Philosophy of Geography 3 Units
Description: An explanation of the history of geographic thought and the paradigms that have shaped geography since the late nineteenth century. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- GEOG 620. Geography & Nutrition Among African and African-American Populations 3 Units
Description: An in-depth examination of the nutritional status of Africans, African Americans and persons of African descent. The course will focus on comparison of epidemiological transition, political economy of nutrition, politics of food welfare programs, food aid, over-nutrition (obesity), under-nutrition and dietary-related diseases among African Americans, Africans and persons including blacks in the Diaspora.
Note: Cross-listed with PAS 660.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- GEOG 628. Planning History and Issues 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Consent of instructor.
Description: The history of planning and contemporary issues with a special emphasis on the role of planners, zoning and law. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- GEOG 631. Urban Demography 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Graduate standing.
Description: Spatial analysis of the distribution, characteristics, growth, and change of the population of a metropolitan area. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- GEOG 635. Real Estate Market Analysis 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall Only
Prerequisite(s): URBS 602 or approval of instructor.
Description: Covers concepts, methodologies and analytical tools used in urban real estate market analysis, with a particular emphasis on site selection using GIS applications.
Note: Cross-listed with URBS 613.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- GEOG 640. Approaches & Methods in Applied Geography 3 Units
Description: Examination of concepts and methods used by applied geographers.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- GEOG 641. Research Design and Proposal Development in Applied Geography 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): GEOG 600, GEOG 656, GEOG 660.
Description: Provides students with the background needed to design a research study and develop a research proposal and culminates in development of thesis proposal.
- GEOG 656. Spatial Statistics 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Statistics course.
Description: The analysis of spatial patterns and processes through the use of spatially-based statistics.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- GEOG 657. Geographic Information Systems 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Consent of instructor.
Description: Application of GIS to real world projects. An emphasis will be placed on the development of a digital spatial database.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- GEOG 660. Qualitative Methods in Applied Geography 3 Units
Description: An examination of the philosophical underpinnings of the qualitative approach with practical experience in conducting qualitative research.

GEOG 685. Introduction to Programming for GIS and Spatial Data Analysis for Graduate Students 3 Units

Description: There are two primary goals for this course. First, students will learn introductory computer programming concepts and features. Students will deconstruct examples from a variety of programming and scripting languages (primarily Python, R, VBA, and IDL), learning how to identify common logic, flow control and syntactic features. Students will learn the purpose of these structures and how to start using the programming and scripting environments of common statistics, geographic information systems (GIS) and remote sensing (RS) platforms.

GEOG 690. Special Topics 1-3 Units

Description: Investigation of topics not offered in regular courses. Topic will be announced in Schedule of Courses. Offered as needed.

Note: May be repeated for different topics up to a limit of 12 hours.

GEOG 691. Research and Independent Study 1-5 Units

GEOG 698. Thesis 1-6 Units

Prerequisite(s): Permission of instructor.

Description: Reading, research, and writing of thesis under the supervision of a faculty member.

GS 500. Summer Undergraduate Research and Creative Activity 0 Units

Term Typically Offered: Summer Only

Description: This course is to register students who are participating in 10-week undergraduate summer research programs.

GS 601. Academic Communication in English1-3 Units

Description: Classes and a range of interactive activities are designed to help international graduate students gain confidence in both academic and conversational English in authentic settings and contexts. Course outcomes include that students will acquire a sophisticated vocabulary and facility with idiomatic language; improve pronunciation, improve understanding of English in academic and nonacademic contexts, improve ability to discuss academic and non-academic topics, current events, and cultural issues; be able to give short presentations and execute small public speaking tasks with greater fluency, accuracy, and confidence.

GS 611. Seminar: Cultural Resource Management3 Units

Description: Cultural Resource Management Seminar.

GS 612. Cultural Resource Management: Field Methods3 Units

Description: Field Methods in Cultural Resource Management.

HSS 500. Neuromuscular Aspects of Human Performance3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring

Prerequisite(s): HSS 387; HSS 390; and HSS 394.

Description: This course provides an in-depth exploration of neuromuscular structure and function in respect to control of exercise and human movement, specifically as it relates to human performance and athletic adaptation. Emphasis will be placed on bioenergetics, muscle plasticity, neural control of exercise, acute responses and chronic adaptations to various exercise training, and adaptation to various stimuli.

HSS 501. Advanced Applied Kinesiology3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Summer Only

Prerequisite(s): Graduate Standing or Consent of Instructor Exploration of advanced principles of applied kinesiology, focusing on structure and function of skeletal muscle to optimize movement patterns and enhance athletic performance.

- HSS 503. Field Testing for Athletes 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall Only
Prerequisite(s): Graduate Standing or Consent of Instructor.
Description: This course provides an in-depth examination of field testing methodologies used to assess athletic performance and monitor training progress in various sports and athletic populations. Students will learn the principles of test selection, administration, data interpretation, and application to optimize performance assessment and inform training program design.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- HSS 504. Physical Activity and Public Health 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring
Description: Students will examine individual, social, organizational, community, environmental, and policy factors that serve as facilitators and barriers to the promotion of physical activity and public health. This course is designed to provide students with the knowledge, skills, and abilities to conduct physical activity and public health needs assessments; to plan, implement, evaluate, lead, and manage physical activity and public health interventions, initiatives, and programs; to conduct physical activity and public health research; and to communicate and advocate for physical activity and public health promotion.
Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- HSS 505. Bioenergetics 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall Only
Prerequisite(s): Graduate Standing or Consent of Instructor This course provides a detailed exploration of the principles of bioenergetics and metabolic pathways involved in energy production in the human body, with a focus on their implications for athletic performance, exercise prescription, and training program design.
Description: Students will explore the biochemistry of energy metabolism, energy systems interplay, substrate utilization, and metabolic adaptations to exercise.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- HSS 506. Athlete Monitoring and Data Management 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Summer Only
Prerequisite(s): Graduate Standing or Consent of Instructor.
Description: Basic Data Management will be taught including data collection, entry, and management in both XCEL and R Programs. Students will learn data collection techniques for Global Positioning Systems (GPS), Force Plate, and Velocity-Based Training forms of athlete monitoring. By the end of the course, students will have strong skills in analyzing monitoring data, visualization of data into meaningful charts, and be proficient in the ability to interpret results into comprehensive reports for coaches and the sports performance team.
- HSS 507. Senior Seminar in Exercise Physiology 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered
Prerequisite(s): HSS 387 and HSS 394; 90+ hours; and permission of instructor.
Description: Critical and comprehensive examination of well-defined topics related to exercise physiology that are not studied in regular courses. Topics will be announced in schedule of courses.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- HSS 508. Athlete-Centered Coaching and Long-Term Athlete Development 1 Unit
Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer
Prerequisite(s): Admission into the Holistic Coaching Graduate Certificate program or Instructor Permission This course focuses on equipping coaches with the knowledge and skills to prioritize athlete development, enhance physical literacy, and promote lifelong physical activity.
Description: Coaches will learn about athlete-centered coaching philosophies and the principles associated with long-term athlete development, such as the American Development Model.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- HSS 509. Strategic Planning and Program Management in Sport Coaching 1 Unit
Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer
Prerequisite(s): Admission into the Holistic Coaching Graduate Certificate program or Instructor Permission This course focuses on helping coaches establish a clear vision, set goals, and effectively manage their sport programs.

Queer Performance Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered Description: What defines queer performance? Is it rooted in identity, expression, or both? How have artists used performance to explore and challenge conventional ideas about gender, sexuality, and identity? This course considers the historical, aesthetic, and cultural dimensions of performance often labeled as "queer", attending to where it is staged, how it is received, and who produces it. We will examine the work of performers whose practices engage with, question, or expand social norms related to gender and identity. These artists may complicate traditional expectations, offering alternative ways of understanding how identities are expressed and interpreted in performance. In addition to exploring a range of performance styles and practitioners sometimes described as lesbian, gay, trans, or queer we will also consider the broader social, political, and institutional contexts in which these performances occur. Students will reflect on what it means to watch and interpret these performances. Note: Cross-listed with WGST 608 and WGST 508.	3 Units

HUM 673. Topics in Cultural Theory 3 Units Prerequisite(s): Graduate standing. Description: Exploration of advanced theory regarding the formation and maintenance of, and issues in, culture from a social perspective. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	HUM 699. Interdisciplinary Capstone Symposium 3 Units Prerequisite(s): Graduate standing. Description: Symposium for candidates completing their content course work during the current academic year. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
	HUM 700. Dissertation Research 1-9 Units Prerequisite(s): Graduate standing and approval of chair or graduate advisor. Description: Dissertation research For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)

ISE 525. Project Management

3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered

Prerequisite(s): Admission in ISE or EM program or instructor permission.

Description: Use of CPM, PERT, precedence diagramming, resource allocation heuristics, and other techniques for planning, managing, and controlling engineering projects involving research and development, production, maintenance, and construction. Computer procedures and codes for analyzing complex project networks will be covered.

Note: Cross-listed with EM 525.

ISE 560. Probability and Statistics for Engineers

3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer

Prerequisite(s): ENGR 102 OR (Calculus I AND graduate status).

Description: Engineering applications using probability, random variables, distribution functions, confidence intervals, estimation and hypothesis testing.

Note: Students cannot receive credit for both ISE 360 and ISE 560.

ISE 561. Decision Support Systems

3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Prerequisite(s): Graduate Standing in the JB Speed School of Engineering.

Description: This course introduces students to optimization problems, algorithm design, and problem-solving techniques. The course focuses on developing pseudocode and practical algorithmic solutions for real-world decision problems, such as traveling salesman, bin packing, and knapsack problems. Students will explore how to address optimization challenges by analyzing the search space, identifying feasible solutions, and applying criteria for optimality, with clear, non-mathematical explanations. We will focus on Local Search, Carousel Greedy, Randomized Adaptive Search (GRASP), Genetic Algorithms (GA). The course also covers the fundamentals of coding languages, specifically Python, to support the implementation of algorithms.

ISE 590. Special Topics in Industrial Engineering

1-6 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer

Description: A theoretical and/or experimental investigation of an industrial engineering design topic.

ISE 600. Additive Manufacturing Processes

3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Prerequisite(s): Prior knowledge in manufacturing process is required.

Description: Graduate standing in the JB Speed School of Engineering. This course is designed to provide an overview to additive manufacturing processes (a.k.a. 3D printing). An overview of all additive manufacturing processes is provided. Projects are used to develop in-depth knowledge in key applications of additive manufacturing.

Note: Students cannot receive credit for both ISE 600 and ISE 400.

ISE 601. Additive Manufacturing Structure Design

3 Units

Description: This course focuses on the overview of design issues in additive manufacturing (AM), including the design of structures, materials and processes. The students are expected to gain in-depth understanding of the design issues with current AM technologies. Hands-on projects will be assigned that gives the students the opportunity of understanding the design issues and applying the knowledge to the design of functional parts and assemblies.

ISE 602. Graduate Internship in Industrial Engineering Grading Basis: Pass/Fail Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): Admission to Graduate Study, Permission of Department Chair, and Permission of Director of Career Services. Description: Supervised professional experience in industry at the graduate level. This course provides the structure and focus for the graduate intern field assignment to ensure that the assignment is appropriate and consistent with the intern's graduate course of study and professional development. May be repeated for credit. Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	1 Unit	ISE 619. Digital and Advanced Manufacturing Systems Term Typically Offered: Fall Only Prerequisite(s): Previous course preparation in the areas of manufacturing process principles and industrial digital automation control is required. Description: This course deals with some of the contemporary aspects of digital manufacturing and industry 4.0 manufacturing systems, which is highly disciplinary and of great interest to today's manufacturing industries. In particular, the course focuses on the fusion between manufacturing technologies and systems, smart manufacturing hardware, and data science. A range of topics including manufacturing sciences/engineering, industrial automation control, product conceptualization and prototyping, smart manufacturing, data analytics and quality modeling. While the discussions into most of these topics will be relatively brief, the emphasis is to establish a perspective of the relationships and interplay of the different areas in digital manufacturing. Throughout the course, 4-5 labs/projects are anticipated. In addition, assignments such as individual homework will be employed as additional learning tools for necessary knowledge for solving manufacturing-related engineering problems. Note: Students cannot receive credit for both ISE 419 and ISE 619. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
ISE 610. Foundations of Optimization I Term Typically Offered: Spring Even Years Prerequisite(s): ISE 646 and Graduate standing in the JB Speed School of Engineering. Description: Formulation and solution of applicable optimization models for linear, integer, and network problems. Efficient algorithmic methods and use of computer modeling languages and systems. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	ISE 621. Facility Location and Layout Term Typically Offered: Fall Only Description: Design and layout of industrial facilities, facility location, space requirement, flow charts, relationships diagrams, material handling, quantitative layout techniques, production line balancing, and computer programs for layout planning. Note: Students cannot receive credit for both ISE 621 and ISE 421. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
ISE 611. Discrete Optimization Prerequisite(s): ISE 515. Description: A study of the techniques and applications of discrete optimization, especially as related to integer and dynamic programming. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	ISE 625. Production and Inventory Systems Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Prerequisite(s): ISE 560 (Probability and Statistics) or similar course. Description: Topics include the context of inventory management and production planning decisions, economic order quantities, heuristics and models for probabilistic and time-varying demand patterns, coordinated replenishment systems, and aggregate planning. Note: Students cannot receive credit for both ISE 425 and ISE 625. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
ISE 614. Foundations of Optimization II Prerequisite(s): ENGR 330 and ISE 610. Description: Formulation and solution of applicable optimization models for nonlinear, stochastic programming, robust optimization and convex problems. Efficient algorithmic methods and use of computer modeling languages and systems. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units

- ISE 629. Quality Control 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Spring Only
Prerequisite(s): This course is only available for those who have not taken ISE 430.
Description: Previous course preparation in the areas of engineering statistics is required and approved by instructor. Developing an effective total quality control (TQC) system: integrating the quality development, maintenance, and improvement efforts of an organization; control charts, process capability, value engineering, product liability prevention, and computer control.
Note: Students cannot receive credit for both ISE 629 and ISE 430.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ISE 630. Advanced Production Systems Design 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): ISE 421, ISE 425, ISE 430.
Description: This course is organized around the principles of Lean Manufacturing Engineering. Topics include lean manufacturing, including value, value stream, flow, pull and continuous improvement. Improvement and efficiency are facilitated through a study of factory dynamics, the influence of variability, and "Push and Pull" production systems.
- ISE 631. Advanced Quality Control 3 Units
Description: Advanced techniques for quality improvement and process control are investigated; these include advanced techniques of SPC, trouble shooting and diagnostics and Taguchi methods of experimental design.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ISE 634. Case Studies in Production and Industrial Engineering 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): ISE 425, ISE 515, ISE 541.
Description: Case studies illustrate the application of industrial engineering techniques to the design of production systems, the control of construction projects, and health care delivery systems.
- ISE 640. Applied Systems Analysis 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): ISE 360, ISE 370, ISE 515.
Description: Problem formulation, data collection, alternative design generation, design evaluation, specification, and implementation for large scale systems.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ISE 642. Statistical Methodology in Simulation 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): ISE 360 and ISE 541.
Description: Discrete simulation modeling, input probability distributions, random variate generators, output data analysis, validation, variance reduction, experimental design and optimization.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ISE 643. Analysis for Decision Making 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): ISE 360 and ISE 515.
Description: The role of decision analysis in design; techniques for multicriteria decision analysis; systematic creativity in design.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ISE 645. Systems Simulation 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Spring Only
Prerequisite(s): ISE 560 (or equivalent), and Graduate standing in the JB Speed School of Engineering.
Description: The goal of this course is to give the student a basic working knowledge of the concepts of simulation modeling and analysis, especially as applied in the design and operation of both manufacturing-oriented and service-oriented systems. Following this course, students should be able to build and experiment with simulation models of manufacturing/service systems and interpret the output of these models as an aid in the design and operation of these systems.
Note: Students may not receive credit for both ISE 445 and ISE 645.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ISE 646. Operations Research Methods 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall Only
Prerequisite(s): Prior knowledge in linear algebra is required.
Description: Graduate standing in the JB Speed School of Engineering. Formulation and solution of basic models in operations research. Topics to be covered include applications of linear, integer and nonlinear programming; transportation and assignment problems, and network flows models.
Note: Students may not receive credit for both ISE 446 and ISE 646.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ISE 650. Material Flow Systems Design 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): ISE 515.
Description: Material handling and equipment concepts; computerized plant layout; problem formulation; requirements definition; queuing; location analysis; conveyor theory; simulation; developing and evaluating alternative systems; systems implementation.

ISE 655. Supply Chain Engineering3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): Graduate Standing in the JB Speed School of Engineering.

Description: This course is designed to offer a balanced coverage on concept survey, analytics and modeling for operations and engineering in supply chain and logistics systems. Emphasis will be on analysis of strategic, tactical and operational supply chain problems including inventory decisions, revenue operations & modeling, distribution & network design, supply contracts and coordination among supply chain partners. Other related topics to be covered include various critical concepts and strategies such as risk pooling, information sharing, and the role of information systems in supply chain engineering.

Note: Students cannot receive credit for both ISE 655 and ISE 455.

ISE 657. Models for Design and Analysis of Logistical Systems 3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): ISE 646, and Graduate standing in the JB Speed School of Engineering.

Description: This modeling oriented course for the design, analysis and operation of logistical systems includes topics such as inventory control, transportation, distribution network design, and supply chain management. Both deterministic as well as stochastic models are studied.

ISE 660. Reliability and Maintainability3 Units*Prerequisite(s): ISE 360.

Description: Design, development, and test techniques required to assure the reliability and maintainability of new systems. Design of maintenance programs for new and existing systems.

ISE 662. Predictive Analytics for Decision Making I3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): Prior knowledge on basic probability and statistics.

Description: Graduate standing in the JB Speed School of Engineering. This course will prepare students with various predictive analytics methods for manufacturing, healthcare, etc., which will be illustrated in examples. Different data types from real-world examples will be shown. Subsequently, it will be demonstrated how the predictive analytics methods can be used for better decision making. The methods will be implemented in non-programming based standard software such as Matlab, Excel, and Minitab.

Note: Students cannot receive credit for both ISE 662 and ISE 462.

ISE 663. Predictive Analytics for Decision Making II3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): ISE 462 or ISE 662 or similar; Experience with Python; ISE 560 (Prob&Stats) or similar course.

Description: This course provides an introduction to several classical and state-of-the-art machine learning methods and their applications for engineers. Fundamentals of linear model and shallow neural networks, multilayer perceptrons, and deep neural networks will be covered. Modern convolutional neural networks (CNN, including AlexNet, NiN, GoogleNet, ResNet, DenseNet), recurrent neural networks (RNN, including GRU, LSTM, Bi-LSTM, Transformer), and optimization techniques will be discussed with engineering examples implemented in Python.

Note: Students cannot receive credit for both ISE 663 and ISE 463.

ISE 664. Experimental Design in Engineering3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): ISE 560 (or equivalent) and Graduate standing in the JB Speed School of Engineering.

Description: Design of engineering experiments and projects using theory of least squares, analysis of variance, randomized blocks, factorial experiments, nested designs, split plot designs and logistic regression techniques. Covers a combination of analysis by hand and using Minitab statistical software. Students may only receive credit for one of the following: ISE 464, ISE 664, ME 611, and EM 661.

Note: Cross-listed with CSE 563.

ISE 669. Introduction to Human Factors Engineering and Ergonomics3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): Graduate Standing in the JB Speed School of Engineering.

Description: Human factors engineering is the study of human cognitive and physical abilities and limitations, and applying that knowledge to engineering design. "Ergonomics" typically relates to physical abilities and limitations. This course will provide a broad coverage of human factors and ergonomics and show how the application of human factors and ergonomics principles can improve the design of systems involving the interaction of humans with technology.

Note: Students may not receive credit for both ISE 469 and ISE 669.

ISE 670. Advanced Engineering Economy3 Units*Prerequisite(s): ISE 370.

Description: Inflation; cost of capital; revenue requirements; uncertainty and risk; propagation of errors; Hillier's results; simulation; capital budgeting.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

ISE 671. Advanced Topics in Human Factors Engineering 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): ISE 669 (or equivalent); graduate Standing in the JB Speed School of Engineering.Description: Human factors engineering is the study of human cognitive and physical abilities and limitations, and applying that knowledge to engineering design. The main goal of this course is to learn and apply advanced methods in human factors engineering, as well as newer models, theories, and frameworks related to the field.Note: Students may not receive credit for both ISE 471 and ISE 671.

ISE 675. Usability Engineering 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): Graduate Standing in the JB Speed School of Engineering.Description: Although the title of this course is 'Usability Engineering', the traditional concept of usability is expanded to a broader notion of user experience, including usability, usefulness, and emotional impact. The course will present an iterative evaluation-centered user experience (UX) lifecycle as a lifecycle template intended to be instantiated in many different ways to match the constraints of a particular development project. The UX lifecycle activities we will cover include contextual inquiry and analysis, requirements extraction, design-informing models, design thinking, ideation, sketching, conceptual design, and formative UX evaluation. It is a goal of this course to help students realize that UX engineering is an ongoing process throughout the full product lifecycle, and developing the human-computer interface is not something to be done at the last minute, when the "rest of the system" is finished.Note: Students may not receive credit for both ISE 475 and ISE 675.

ISE 682. Quality of Care and Patient Safety 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Fall OnlyDescription: This course provides students an overview of the healthcare system and the different types of healthcare delivery, as well as factors that determine quality of care. This course also exposes students to tenets of patient safety from a human factors engineering perspective. Students will learn models of patient safety and incident analysis tools, including Root Cause Analysis (RCA) and Healthcare Failure Mode and Effects Analysis (HFMEA).Note: Students cannot receive credit for both ISE 682 and ISE 482.

ISE 684. Health IT and Clinician Support 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Spring OnlyDescription: This course provides students an overview of various types of health information technology (IT) systems, as well as strategies, methods, and tools used to support the work and health of clinicians. This course also exposes students to applied tools and guidelines of the design and evaluation of health IT systems. Students will learn to use software to prototype high-fidelity, interactive user interfaces, and to conduct human factors evaluation on health IT systems based on the FDA guidelines. Documentation of such design and evaluation process will also be practiced with the semester project.Note: Students cannot receive credit for both ISE 684 and ISE 484.

ISE 690. Master of Science Thesis in Industrial Engineering 1-6 UnitsGrading Basis: Pass/FailPrerequisite(s): Department Chair permission required.Description: Research on MS thesis project. Grade shall be deferred by the major professor until evaluation of the thesis by the student's committee. Grade on pass-fail basis by the examining committee.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

ISE 693. Independent Study in Industrial Engineering 1-12 UnitsDescription: Opportunity for the student, under the supervision of a sponsoring faculty member, to pursue individualized study related to research or practice that is not included in regular courses in the curriculum.

ISE 694. Advanced Topics in IE 1-6 UnitsPrerequisite(s): Consent of instructor.Description: An advanced course in Industrial Engineering topics not covered by regularly scheduled courses.

ISE 695. PhD Seminar 1 UnitGrading Basis: Pass/FailTerm Typically Offered: Fall, SpringPrerequisite(s): Consent of advisor.Description: This course is a series of seminars covering topics related to Industrial Engineering (IE).

ISE 699. Industrial Engineering Master's Degree Project 3 UnitsPrerequisite(s): Instructor permission required.Description: The Industrial Engineering MS student carries out an engineering project under the supervision of a faculty mentor, prepares an acceptable written report, and presents a seminar on the project.Note: Cross-listed with EM 699.

ISE 700. Dissertation Research in Industrial Engineering 1-18 Units
Grading Basis: Pass/FailPrerequisite(s): Department Chair permission required.Description: Research on dissertation project. Grade will be deferred by the major professor until evaluation of the dissertation by the student's committee. Graded on a Pass/Fail basis by the examining committee. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

IMBA 615. Opportunity Discovery 1.5 UnitsPrerequisite(s): Admission to the IMBA program.Description: This course acquaints students with the dynamic changes in our economic system and the business opportunities fostered by these changes. The course consists of readings, discussion, and exploration of the opportunity discovery process.

IMBA 620. Leadership 1.5 UnitsPrerequisite(s): Enrollment in IMBA program.Description: Theories of influence, leader behaviors, situation, fellowship, work teams, and transformational leadership. Practical development of self-knowledge, self-confidence and choosing to lead.

IMBA 621. Venture Launch I 1.5 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): Enrollment in the IMBA program; IMBA 615.Description: This experiential course introduces Lean LaunchPad and Value Proposition Canvas. Student teams identify an initial entrepreneurial concept, and use techniques of customer discovery to get out of the classroom and talk to users in order to validate product-market fit.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

IMBA 622. Venture Strategic Analysis 1.5 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): Enrollment in the IMBA program; IMBA 615.Description: Strategic analysis consists of analyzing information from the internal and external environments to recognize and assess organizations strengths, weaknesses, opportunities & threats. Strategic analysis in existing firms and new ventures is compared and contrasted. Student teams will conduct and present an industry and competitive analysis of their new venture opportunity.

MSSW 675. Child Welfare Supervision, Coaching and Mentoring Practices & Policies to Achieve Best Outcomes
3 Units

Description: This course focuses on understanding and applying principles and skills of supervision, coaching and mentoring in the field of child welfare.

MSSW 676. Program Design, Implementation and Change
3 Units

Description: Explores utilization and application of theories and evaluative research in the design, implementation, and change of social programs and interventions.

MSSW 677. Mezzo Practice and Integrated Social Work Practice with Complex Cases
3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer

Prerequisite(s): SW 640, SW 641.

Description: The course focuses on theories, knowledge and skills needed in working with organizations in the areas of creating change, conducting agency assessments, networking, leadership, strategic planning, project development and management, team building, meeting management, budgeting and finances, fundraising and grant writing, marketing, and interfacing with the media, with a special emphasis on working with groups and organizations that work on behalf of oppressed populations. The last weeks in the course focus on reinforcing and integrating skills from all three practice courses through case-based study conceptualizing practice issues/interventions on macro, mezzo, and micro levels simultaneously.

Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

MSSW 678. Advanced Alcohol and Drug Counseling Specialization Practicum Seminar
1.5 Units
Grading Basis: Pass/Fail

Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in the Alcohol and Drug Counseling Specialization.

Description: This is a required seminar for Advanced Practicum ADCS students designed to achieve two goals: 1) Enhance knowledge of research supported group counseling methods in the treatment of substance abuse (all students); and 2) advance special knowledge and skills related to one of the following: a) criminal justice and treatment of substance abuse (immersion practicum students) or b) leadership (rotational practicum students).

MSSW 679. Advanced Alcohol and Drug Counseling Specialization Practicum Seminar-Spring Semester 1.5 Units
Grading Basis: Pass/Fail

Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in the Alcohol and Drug Counseling Specialization.

Description: This is a required seminar for Advanced Practicum ADCS students designed to achieve two goals: 1) Enhance knowledge of research supported family engagement methods in the treatment of substance abuse (all students); and 2) advance special knowledge and skills related to one of the following: a) criminal justice and treatment of substance abuse (immersion practicum students) or b) leadership (rotational practicum students).

MSSW 681. Social Gerontology 3 Units

Description: Explores societal, cultural, and individual issues associated with aging and the field of aging itself. The field of social gerontology is discussed; the biological, physiological, psychological, and social contexts of aging are examined; and the students explore what it means to age.

MSSW 682. Social Work Practice with Older Persons 3 Units

Description: Specific knowledge, skills and values associated with social work intervention with older persons are the emphasis of this course. There is an emphasis on the heterogeneity of the population of older Americans and issues associated with diversity. Taught from a strengths perspective using a narrative approach, this course will provide the learner with pragmatic skills needed to work with diverse populations of older adults.

MSSW 684. Spirituality and Social Work 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): This course is restricted to students in the Kent School of Social Work.

Description: Provides an in-depth examination of the meaning of spirituality for social work practice. Students will broaden their knowledge of basic spiritual and religious doctrines and principles and analyze their application to social work by applying this knowledge within various social work settings.

MSSW 685. Planning and Community Development 3 Units

Description: Integrates theories of social science and social work as it develops student skills, knowledge, values in social planning and community development. There is a special emphasis placed on conceptual and practice skills necessary for successful social planning and community development.

MSSW 686. Gerontology Specialization Lab I 1 Unit
Grading Basis: Pass/Fail

Corequisite(s): MSSW 672.

Description: Supervision of student work with a variety of gerontology clients and their families community agency settings.

MSSW 687. Gerontology Specialization Lab II 1 Unit

Grading Basis: Pass/Fail

Corequisite(s): SW 673.

Description: Supervision of student work with a variety of gerontology clients and their families community agency settings.

MSSW 688. Policy Analysis 3 Units

Description: Demographic, political, economic and other influences are considered as they act upon policy development and related social problems.

MSSW 689. Interpreting and Promoting Human Service Programs 3 Units

Description: This course familiarizes social workers with the use of media in promoting and interpreting social welfare policies and programs.

MSSW 690. Macro Social Work Practice in the Health Field 3 Units

Description: Provides overview of major issues in organization and delivery of health services and the planning, implementation and evaluation of programs.

MSSW 691. Mental Health Specialization Integrative Seminar I 1 Unit

Grading Basis: Pass/Fail

Prerequisite(s): Completion of Foundation requirements and acceptance into Mental Health Specialization.

Description: Supervision of student work with a variety of clients and their families with mental health needs in community agency settings.

MSSW 692. Mental Health Specialization Integrative Seminar II 1 Unit

Grading Basis: Pass/Fail

Prerequisite(s): Completion of Foundation requirements and acceptance into Mental Health Specialization.

Description: Supervision of student work with a variety of clients and their families with mental health needs in community agency settings.

MSSW 694. Social Work in Health Fields 3 Units

MSSW 695. Cultural Context & Social Services with Latinx Individuals Families & Communities 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Fall, Spring

Description: This course surveys a variety of historical & contemporary social justice issues necessary for understanding the culture & well-being of Latinx & Latin American individuals, families, & communities. The legacies of colonization, genocide, & slavery of Indigenous & African populations, will be explored. Particular attention will be paid to the impacts of class, race, & language in contemporary Latinx communities. Transmigration, immigration, refugee status & asylum seeking, & their legal & psychosocial implications, also will be covered. Social justice movements in response to systemic oppression, political unrest, & violence occurring in Latin American & in the United States also will be reviewed. In addition, cultural values that may be particularly salient & meaningful to Latinx peoples as well as techniques identified by grassroots organizations &/or the research literature as culturally-responsive approaches for engaging, assessing, &/or intervening with these populations.

MSSW 697. Advanced Topical Seminar 3-4 UnitsPrerequisite(s): Permission of instructor.

Description: This course focuses on the development of positive mental health and health in populations at risk.

MSSW 699. Independent Study 1-4 Units

Description: Opportunity for the student, under the supervision of a sponsoring faculty member, to pursue individualized study related to research or practice that is not included in regular courses in the curriculum.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

Materials and Energy Science and Engineering

Subject-area course lists indicate courses currently active for offering at the University of Louisville. Not all courses are scheduled in any given academic term. For class offerings in a specific semester, refer to the Schedule of Classes (https://csprd.louisville.edu/ps/ps_class/EMPLOYEE/PSFT_CS/c/COMMUNITY_ACCESS.CLASS_SEARCH.x/?state=62dab551a0d600a5e8237359c50704e59007&duo_code=sjUx20STj210WVLEd321rjmimixpqv)

500-level courses generally are included in both the undergraduate- and graduate-level course listings; however, specific course/section offerings may vary between semesters. Students are responsible for ensuring that they enroll in courses that are applicable to their particular academic programs.

Course Fees

Some courses may carry fees beyond the standard tuition costs to cover additional support or materials. Program-, subject- and course-specific fee information can be found on the Office of the Bursar website (<https://louisville.edu/bursar/tuitionfee/university-fees/>).

MESE 593. Independent Study in Materials and Energy Science & Engineering 1-6 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered

Prerequisite(s): MESE 600, MESE 601, or permission of instructor
Independent research and/or studies conducted with the approval and supervision of a faculty member on a particular topic that fits in scope within Materials and Energy Science & Engineering Note: Cross-listed with MESE 693.

MESE 600. Energy Science and Engineering 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Fall, Spring

Description: This course presents an overview of global challenges associated with energy/environment nexus, energy demand, generation and storage. In particular, the course will cover fundamentals of thermodynamics, physics, chemistry and kinetics as applied to various energy technologies. The topics will include thermodynamic efficiency, state of the art, challenges associated with size and for each of the energy systems and their impact on environment and sustainability. Topics on energy conversion will include all renewable forms of electricity and fuel generation, their storage and transportation. Topics will also include advanced fossil fuel R&D, carbon dioxide capture and utilization and renewable fuels.

MESE 601. Materials Science and Engineering 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Fall, Spring

Description: Provides a background in materials for students coming from various majors in engineering and science. The course will review fundamental crystal structures, structure, bonding relations and defects in crystals. Thermodynamics of solids, phase diagrams, structure-property relationships, microstructure control, lattice dynamics and fundamental electrical, magnetic and optical properties.

MESE 603. Fundamentals of Electrical, Optical and Thermal Properties of Solid Materials 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Fall, SpringPrerequisite(s): MESE 601 or permission by instructor.

Description: Prerequisites or corequisites: MESE 600. This course is intended to introduce the fundamentals of electrical, optical and thermal properties of materials along with relevant characterization methods. Students will gain a comprehensive understanding of key concepts, including semiconductor fundamentals (band structure, work function, Fermi energy, effective mass, etc.), semiconductor statistics, doping (carrier concentrations, Fermi-Dirac distribution, and equilibrium properties), transport phenomena (drift, diffusion, ambipolar effects, and hot electron phenomena), carrier dynamics (recombination and generation processes, lifetime, and mobility), thermal properties (heat capacity, thermal conductivity), and optical properties (absorption and emission, reflection, refraction). The course also includes selected other important topics such as magnetic properties, superconductivity, ion-conductivity, and semiconductor devices. Additionally, students will be introduced to computational techniques and predictions in materials science. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

MESE 610. Materials Characterization: Microscopy & Diffraction 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Summer OnlyPrerequisite(s): MESE 601.

Description: This course provides graduate students fundamental understanding of some of the most important material's characterization techniques. Special focus is placed on fundamental aspects and practical applications of electron microscopy and diffraction methods to phase identification and structure determination for crystalline material. Following this course, students will (1) learn and understand fundamental concepts of materials structure, with the emphasis on crystals structure, (2) understand fundamentals of electron microscopy and diffraction techniques, and (3) apply theoretical methods and software tools to analyze and interpret various types of microscopic and diffraction data. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

MESE 612. Photovoltaics and Solar Fuels3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): MESE 600, MESE 601.

Description: This course develops the fundamentals of semiconductor physics specific to solar energy and uses these key concepts to understand solar cell behavior. The various photovoltaic technologies, including both commercial and research-stage approaches, are described in detail. In addition, electrochemical and catalysis concepts are introduced and integrated with semiconductor behavior to understand the myriad criteria necessary to leverage solar energy in electrochemical fuel production processes such as water-splitting via artificial photosynthesis.

MESE 614. Biomass Processing and Biofuels3 Units*Prerequisite(s): MESE 600 or permission of instructor.

Description: Manufacturing of bio-based products (materials, chemicals and energy produced using sustainable resources such as agricultural biomass) offers socio-economic and environmental benefits. In order to be a part of this emerging bioeconomy, it is essential to learn the fundamental skills of managing biorenewable resources for the effective development of the rapidly evolving bioenergy and biofuels industries. This multi-disciplinary course for senior level undergraduates and all graduate students integrates the biorenewable knowledge base of academic disciplines that include agriculture, chemistry, engineering, environmental sciences, and economics to provide a student with a broader perspective on biomass conversion to bioproducts.

MESE 616. Energy Storage Systems3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, SpringPrerequisite(s): ME 440.

Description: This course will cover functional knowledge of various energy storage modes with emphasis on electrochemical energy storage. It will introduce the fundamental principles of different energy storage systems such as mechanical energy storage, thermal energy storage, chemical energy storage, and electrochemical energy storage. The practical applications for each energy storage system will be discussed. This course will also focus on the chemistry and materials science behind these energy storage systems. In addition, the basis performance analysis of different types of batteries will be introduced and compared.

Note: Cross-listed with ME 572.

MESE 619. Industrial Catalysis3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring

Description: This course will teach scientific and technological concepts involved with industrial catalysis in many chemical processing applications. In addition to catalytic reaction mechanisms, the course will also teach industrial catalyst production methods and testing. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

MESE 622. Roll to Roll Processing3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Description: Continuous manufacturing through roll-to-roll processes has been a staple within several industries over the past century including film, newspaper and other traditional low cost high volume products. As the renewable industry begins to scale, roll-to-roll processes can play an extremely important role in reducing costs at high volumes. This course will explore the roll-to-roll manufacturing processes through fundamental engineering principals including economics, heat and mass transfer, thermodynamics and materials. The course will consider the manufacturing of solar modules, batteries and fuel cell membranes. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

MESE 640. Entrepreneurship in Renewable Energy3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): MESE 600; MESE 618; or ECE 531.

Description: The renewables market will continue to grow as the world seeks and finds cleaner and more sustainable techniques to produce energy. This product-based course guides student teams through the ideation to prototype development to test the commercial relevance of renewable energy products. At the end of the course each student team will have developed a prototype design supported by a business plan. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

MESE 642. Techno-Economic Analysis and Energy Policy3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): MESE 600 or instructor approval.

Description: While many novel scientific ideas are being explored for renewable energy generation and energy storage, a successful technology will require more than a proof-of-concept and an efficient prototype. This course will introduce methods for conducting a techno-economic analysis on an energy technology, determining the levelized cost of product over the facility lifetime, and modeling a sensitivity analysis to determine key performance metrics required to reach possible profitability. The development and current status of energy policies will be addressed as well and incorporated to inform ideal markets for a prospective energy technology. Student teams will conduct their own project analysis as the core component of their grade for the course. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

MESE 644. Smart Manufacturing3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, SpringPrerequisite(s): MESE 600, MESE 601.

Description: Smart Manufacturing are systems that are "fully-integrated, collaborative manufacturing systems that respond in real time to meet changing demands and conditions in the factory, in the supply network, and in customer needs" (NIST). This directed reading and project-based course will address the key principles of Smart manufacturing with an emphasis on Energy efficiency, sustainability, and advanced sensors and control systems.

MESE 690. Master's Project3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): MESE 600, MESE 601.

Description: Students enrolled in this course will engage in an engineering project or research activity and produce a report that demonstrates both mastery of the subject matter and a high level of communication skills. Oral presentation of the report is required. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

MESE 693. Independent Study in Materials and Energy Science & Engineering1-6 Units*Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered

Prerequisite(s): MESE 600, MESE 601, or permission of instructor. Independent research and/or studies conducted with the approval and supervision of a faculty member on a particular topic that fits in scope within Materials and Energy Science & Engineering. Note: Cross-listed with MESE 593.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

500-level courses generally are included in both the undergraduate- and graduate-level course listings; however, specific course/section offerings may vary between semesters. Students are responsible for ensuring that they enroll in courses that are applicable to their particular academic programs.

Course Fees

Some courses may carry fees beyond the standard tuition costs to cover additional support or materials. Program-, subject- and course-specific fee information can be found on the Office of the Bursar website (<https://louisville.edu/bursar/tuitionfee/university-fees/>).

MATH 501. Introduction to Analysis I - CUE3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, SpringPrerequisite(s): MATH 301, MATH 311 and MATH 325.

Description: Foundations of the real number system, sequences and series, topology of the line, continuity, differentiation of functions of one variable.

Course Attribute(s): CUE - This course fulfills the Culminating Undergraduate Experience (CUE) requirement for certain degree programs. CUE courses are advanced-level courses intended for majors with at least 90 earned credits/senior-level status.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

MATH 502. Introduction to Analysis II3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): MATH 501.

Description: Riemann integration on the line, sequences and series of functions, uniform convergence, metric spaces.

MATH 505. Introduction to Partial Differential Equations3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, SummerPrerequisite(s): MATH 301 and MATH 405 or PHYS 350.

Description: Techniques for solving standard heat, wave, and potential equations, including discussion of Fourier analysis techniques.

MATH 507. Fourier Analysis3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): MATH 301 and MATH 405.

Description: Introduction to Fourier series and transforms.

Mathematics (MATH)

MATH 511. Complex Analysis I Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered Prerequisite(s): MATH 301 or ENGR 201; MATH 311; MATH 325 or ENGR 330. Description: Geometry of the complex plane, analytic and meromorphic functions, linear fractional transformations. Cauchy's Theorem and the Residue Theorem. Emphasizes computational aspects of the course topics. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	MATH 535. Modeling I Prerequisite(s): MATH 325 or MATH 405 or equivalent. Description: Introduction to mathematical modeling of discrete and continuous dynamical systems. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
MATH 512. Complex Analysis II Prerequisite(s): MATH 511. Description: A continuation of MATH 511, including deeper properties of analytic, meromorphic, harmonic functions and conformal mappings. Emphasizes theoretical aspects of the course topics. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	MATH 536. Modeling II Prerequisite(s): MATH 535. Description: Advanced mathematical modeling of discrete and continuous dynamical systems. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
MATH 520. Theory of Numbers Prerequisite(s): MATH 206 or ENGR 102; MATH 311; MATH 325 or consent of instructor. Description: A study of the integers and their divisibility properties. Particular emphasis on the theory of congruencies, partitions, prime numbers, Diophantine analysis and quadratic residues. Note: Credit may be applied towards the MAT but not toward any other graduate degree in mathematics. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	MATH 545. Introduction to Fractal Geometry Prerequisite(s): MATH 301 and MATH 325; MATH 501 recommended. Description: Recursively defined sets and self-similarity; metric spaces and iterated function systems; topological, fractal, and Hausdorff dimensions. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
MATH 521. Modern Algebra I - CUE Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring Prerequisite(s): MATH 206 or ENGR 102; and MATH 311; and MATH 325; or consent of instructor. Description: An introduction to the theory of groups, rings, integral domains, and fields. Course Attribute(s): CUE - This course fulfills the Culminating Undergraduate Experience (CUE) requirement for certain degree programs. CUE courses are advanced-level courses intended for majors with at least 90 earned credits/senior-level status. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	MATH 550. Advanced Euclidean Geometry Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered Prerequisite(s): A year of high school geometry; MATH 206 or ENGR 102; MATH 311; MATH 325 or consent of instructor. Description: Theory of Euclidean geometry contrasted with non-Euclidean from both the axiomatic and algebraic approach. Of special value to secondary teachers. Note: Credit may be applied toward the MAT but not toward any other graduate degree in mathematics. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
MATH 522. Modern Algebra II Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Prerequisite(s): MATH 521. Description: Continuation in greater depth of topics introduced in MATH 521; introduction to theory of ideals, field extensions, and abstract vector spaces. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	MATH 551. Geometry Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Prerequisite(s): MATH 206 or ENGR 102; MATH 311; MATH 325 or consent of instructor. Description: Study of projective spaces, transformations and invariants. Introduction to related geometries, such as affine, elliptic, and hyperbolic. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
		MATH 561. Probability Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring Prerequisite(s): MATH 301. Description: Probability spaces, probability distributions, moments, moment-generating functions, independence, transformation of variables, sampling distributions, laws of large numbers, central limit theorem, applications. Note: Credit will not be granted for both MATH 561 and IE 360. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units

MATH 562. Mathematical Statistics Prerequisite(s): MATH 561. Description: Random samples and statistics, point estimation, sufficiency and completeness, confidence regions, classical theory of hypothesis testing, linear regression, nonclassical procedures. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	MATH 574. Actuarial Models II Prerequisite(s): MATH 573. Description: It further develops knowledge of the theoretical basis of actuarial models and the application of those models to insurance and other financial risks. Note: Continuation of MATH 573. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
MATH 564. Probability Models Prerequisite(s): MATH 561. Description: Finite probability models, Markov chains, renewal and reliability theory, Brownian motion, stochastic differential equations. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	MATH 581. Introduction to Graph Theory Term Typically Offered: Fall Only Prerequisite(s): MATH 206 or ENGR 102; MATH 311; MATH 325 or consent of instructor. Description: Provides an overview of graph theory. Topics include blocks, trees, connectivity, Hamiltonian and Eulerian graphs; topological problems, matrices and groups. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
MATH 568. Mathematical Models in Molecular Biology Prerequisite(s): MATH 205 or instructor consent. Description: Introduction to probability models for representations of biochemical networks. Markov Processes. Stochastic simulation. Chemical and biochemical kinetics. Gillespie algorithm. Applications to intra-cellular kinetics. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	MATH 587. Discrete Mathematics for MAT students Prerequisite(s): MATH 206 or ENGR 102; MATH 325. Description: Topics include: Pigeon-hole principle, counting techniques, binomial coefficients, generating functions, stirling and catalan numbers, permutations and graphs. Note: Does not count towards the mathematics major or minor. Note: Credit may be applied toward the MAT degree but not towards any other graduate degree in mathematics. Note: Credit not allowed for both MATH 387 and MATH 587. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
MATH 570. Foundations of Actuarial Science Prerequisite(s): MATH 561. Description: Fundamental mathematical tools for quantitatively assessing risk. Application of these tools to problems encountered in actuarial science is emphasized. Covers the material of Examination 1 of the Society of Actuaries and Casualty Actuarial Society. Note: Credit may not be applied toward a graduate degree in mathematics. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	MATH 590. History of Mathematics - WR Prerequisite(s): 500-level course in math (except MATH 560). Description: Mathematical history from Mesopotamia to present. Emphasis on doing mathematics, identifying the growth of mathematical concepts and studying prominent mathematicians. Note: Approved for the Arts and Sciences upper-level requirement in written communication (WR). MATH 573. Actuarial Models I Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered Prerequisite(s): MATH 570; MATH 372 or MATH 572. Description: This course covers the material for the Society of Actuaries Exam MFE, Actuarial Models-Financial Economics (also CAS Exam 3F). The syllabus for Exam MFE develops the student's knowledge of the theoretical basis of financial models and the application of those models to insurance and other financial risks. A thorough knowledge of calculus, probability and interest theory is assumed. In addition, for Exam MFE/3F, students are assumed to be familiar with derivative securities (introductory material). Note: Knowledge of risk management at the level of MATH 570 is assumed. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	MATH 591. Selected Topics in Mathematics Prerequisite(s): Announced in Schedule of Courses. Description: An examination of one or more topics in mathematics not usually treated in a regularly offered course. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	1-3 Units
		MATH 601. Real Analysis I Prerequisite(s): MATH 502. Description: Basic set theory and real topology, Lebesgue measure and integration on the real line, differentiation of integrals, $L(p)$ spaces. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units

MATH 602. Real Analysis II Prerequisite(s): MATH 601. Description: Elementary Hilbert space theory, abstract measure spaces and integration, product spaces. Applications to other areas. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	MATH 622. Algebra II Prerequisite(s): MATH 621. Description: Including Polynomial Rings, Modules, Vector Spaces, Structure of Fields, Galois Theory, Advanced Linear Algebra. Note: A continuation of MATH 621. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
MATH 605. Functional Equations I Prerequisite(s): MATH 601. Description: Introduction to the theory and application of functional equations in several variables, including Cauchy equations, d'Alembert equation, quadratic functionals. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	MATH 631. Group Theory Prerequisite(s): MATH 522. Description: Abstract Groups, Homomorphisms, Permutation Groups, Abelian Groups, Simple Groups, Sylow Theory, Series, Extensions. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
MATH 606. Functional Equations II Prerequisite(s): MATH 605 or consent of department. Description: It extends further the theory of functional equations to applications in various branches of mathematics, information theory, and the natural and social sciences. Note: Continuation of MATH 605. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	MATH 633. Rings and Ideals Prerequisite(s): MATH 522. Description: Ideals and Homomorphisms, Prime Ideals and the Prime Radical, Rings of Endomorphisms, the Jacobson Radical. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
MATH 607. Seminar on Applied Analysis Prerequisite(s): MATH 605 or consent of department. Description: Advanced topics in applied analysis. Topics will be determined by the research interests of the students and those of the instructor. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	MATH 635. Mathematical Modeling I Prerequisite(s): MATH 325, MATH 405 or equivalent. Description: Introduction to mathematical modeling of continuous and discrete dynamical systems. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
MATH 611. Complex Variables I Prerequisite(s): MATH 502. Description: Geometry of the complex plane and complex analysis. Topics include analytic and meromorphic functions, linear fractional transformations, Cauchy's Theorem and the Residue Theorem. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	MATH 636. Mathematical Modeling II Prerequisite(s): MATH 635. Description: Advanced mathematical modeling of discrete and continuous dynamical systems. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
MATH 612. Complex Variables II Prerequisite(s): MATH 611. Description: Including deeper properties of the space of meromorphic functions, harmonic functions and conformal mappings. Note: Continuation of MATH 611. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	MATH 641. Topology I Prerequisite(s): MATH 502 or MATH 541. Description: Continuous functions, connectedness, compactness, countability, separation, metrizability, and completeness in the context of topological spaces. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
MATH 621. Algebra I Prerequisite(s): MATH 522. Description: Advanced theory of Groups, Rings, Integral Domains and Fields. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	MATH 642. Topology II Prerequisite(s): MATH 641. Description: Introduction to algebraic topology, including the Fundamental Group and Covering Spaces. Note: A continuation of MATH 641. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units

MATH 663. Theory of Probability I	3 Units	MATH 674. Actuarial Models II	3 Units
Prerequisite(s): MATH 501 and MATH 561 or consent of department.		Prerequisite(s): MATH 673.
Description: Advanced topics in probability theory such as probability measures, random variables, laws of large numbers, large deviations, expected values, and distributions.		Description: It further develops knowledge of the theoretical basis of actuarial models and the application of those models to insurance and other financial risks. The following specific models are introduced: Contingent Payment Models, Survival Models, Frequency and Severity Models, Compound Distribution Models, Stochastic Process Models, Ruin Models. Together with its predecessor, Mathematics 673, covers material on the Examination 3 of the Society of Actuaries and the Casualty Actuarial Society.
MATH 664. Theory of Probability II	3 Units	For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
Prerequisite(s): MATH 663 or consent of department.
Description: Advanced topics in probability theory such as types of convergence, central limit theorems, conditional probabilities and expectations, stochastic processes, martingales, and Brownian motion.
MATH 667. Statistical Inference	3 Units	MATH 676. Actuarial Modeling I	3 Units
Prerequisite(s): MATH 561 or consent of department.		Prerequisite(s): MATH 673 and MATH 674.
Description: Advanced topics in mathematical statistics such as sampling distributions, exponential families, sufficiency, point and interval estimation, likelihood-based inference, hypothesis testing, Bayesian inference, statistical decision theory, and asymptotic theory.		Description: Approximately half of the material on the Society of Actuaries/Casualty Actuarial Society examination 4, Actuarial Modeling. Topics include: statistical analysis of simulated data, statistical validation techniques, actuarial credibility, empirical estimation, loss distributions, and introduction to estimation of survival functions.
MATH 668. Linear Statistical Modeling	3 Units	MATH 677. Actuarial Modeling II	3 Units
Prerequisite(s): MATH 667 or consent of department.		Prerequisite(s): MATH 676.
Description: This course covers linear and related models including a discussion of fixed, mixed, and random effects models as well as regression and ANOVA models. The discussion will include estimation, hypothesis testing, confidence intervals, model fitting, and model diagnostics. Violations of the assumptions of the linear model will be examined. Statistical software will be used frequently. A strong background in linear algebra is needed.		Description: The rest of the material on the Society of Actuaries/Casualty Actuarial Society examination 4, Actuarial Modeling. Topics: Estimation of survival and hazard function. Regression analysis. Multiple regression. Regression in actuarial modeling. Time series models. Properties of stochastic time series. Estimating and forecasting with time-series models. Actuarial modeling with time series.

MATH 670. Introduction to the Stochastic Calculus	3 Units	MATH 681. Combinatorics and Graph Theory I	3 Units
Prerequisite(s): MATH 660 or consent of the department.		Prerequisite(s): MATH 521, or MATH 580, or MATH 581, or consent of department.
Description: Levy Process, local martingale, stochastic integrals, quadratic variation, Ito's formula, existence and uniqueness of stochastic differential equation. Applications to financial engineering, no arbitrage and martingale measure, Black-Scholes model, edging.		Description: Fundamental topics in Graph Theory and Combinatorics through Ramsey theory and Polya's theorem respectively. Motivation will be through appropriate applications.
MATH 673. Actuarial Models I	3 Units	MATH 682. Combinatorics and Graph Theory II	3 Units
Prerequisite(s): MATH 570 and MATH 572.		Prerequisite(s): MATH 681.
Description: Theoretical basis of actuarial models and the application of those models to insurance and other financial risks. The following specific models are introduced: Contingent Payment Models, Survival Models, Frequency and Severity Models, Compound Distribution Models, Stochastic Process Models, Ruin Models. Together with its continuation, MATH 674, covers the material on the Examination 3 of the Society of Actuaries and the Casualty Actuarial Society.		Description: Fundamental topics in Graph Theory and Combinatorics through Ramsey theory and Polya's theorem respectively. Motivation will be through appropriate applications.

MATH 683. Advanced Combinatorics and Graph Theory I Prerequisite(s): MATH 681. Description: Advanced topics in Combinatorics and Graph Theory, including finite planes, coding theory, combinatorial optimization, groups, graphs, and graphs on manifolds. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	MATH 696. Computer in Teaching Science and Mathematics Prerequisite(s): One year of teaching experience or consent of instructor (no previous computer experience needed). Description: Introductory programming and use of computers in a wide range of topics in secondary school science and mathematics. Note: Does not count as part of 15-hour minimum in 600-level mathematics courses for the MA in Mathematics. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
MATH 684. Advanced Combinatorics and Graph Theory II Prerequisite(s): MATH 681 and MATH 682. Description: Course extends the study of advanced topics in Combinatorics and Graph Theory, including Extremal Graph Theory and Algebraic Combinatoris. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	MATH 699. Seminar Description: Topics vary. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	1-12 Units
MATH 687. Seminar on Discrete Mathematics Prerequisite(s): MATH 683 or consent of department. Description: Advanced topics in discrete mathematics. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	MATH 700. Doctoral Research Grading Basis: Pass/Fail Prerequisite(s): Student must have passed all qualifying examinations and have a dissertation committee. Description: Research while enrolled for a doctoral degree under the direction of faculty members. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	1-6 Units
MATH 690. An Overview of Mathematics Prerequisite(s): Undergraduate mathematics major or at least four mathematics courses in the graduate program or consent of instructor. Description: History of mathematics, survey of the major content areas of modern mathematics, discernment of current directions in various mathematical fields. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	MATH 710. Doctoral Dissertation Grading Basis: Pass/Fail Prerequisite(s): Previous enrollment in MATH 700. Description: Dissertation writing under the direction of the major professor. Note: Grade to be deferred until evaluation of the dissertation by the student's committee. Note: Graded pass-fail, depending on the evaluation by the student's committee. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	1-6 Units
MATH 691. Independent Study For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
MATH 693. Seminar in Teaching Mathematics Prerequisite(s): Must be admitted to a graduate program in the Department of Mathematics and consent of instructor. Description: Topics in teaching mathematics to college students. Note: Does not count as part of the 18-hour minimum in mathematics for the MA in Mathematics. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	2 Units
MATH 694. Graduate Internship Description: Students participating in a graduate internship must be registered for this course. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	1-6 Units
MATH 695. Thesis Guidance For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	1-6 Units

Mathematics for Education (MTED)

Subject-area course lists indicate courses currently active for offering at the University of Louisville. Not all courses are scheduled in any given academic term. For class offerings in a specific semester, refer to the Schedule of Classes (https://csprd.louisville.edu/psps/ps_class/EMPLOYEE/PSFT_CS/c/COMMUNITY_ACCESS.CLASS_SEARCH./x/?state=62dab551a0d600a5e8237359c50704e59007&duo_code=sjUx2OSTj21bIWVEU)

500-level courses generally are included in both the undergraduate- and graduate-level course listings; however, specific course/section offerings may vary between semesters. Students are responsible for ensuring that they enroll in courses that are applicable to their particular academic programs.

Course Fees

Some courses may carry fees beyond the standard tuition costs to cover additional support or materials. Program-, subject- and course-specific fee information can be found on the Office of the Bursar website (<https://louisville.edu/bursar/tuitionfee/university-fees/>).

MTED 591. Topics in Mathematics for In-Service Teachers 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): MATH 152 or permission of department.

Description: Course is intended for professional development of in-service mathematics teachers and will typically be taught off campus. Mathematical topics will be mixed with strategies for presenting them to students and with applications and technology as needed.

Note: Course does not count toward any degree in the College of Arts & Sciences.

Mechanical Engineering (ME)

ME 510. Thermal Design of Internal Combustion Engines 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer

Prerequisite(s): ME 310.

Description: Thermodynamics and fluid mechanics of internal combustion engine design. Combustion stoichiometry, thermochemistry, and properties of working fluids. Ideal and real engine cycles. Fluid flow processes, combustion processes, pollutant formation and control. Engine operating characteristics.

ME 512. Finite Element Methods for Mechanical Design I 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered

Prerequisite(s): ME 422.

Description: Matrix analysis of static and dynamic structural systems and steady-state heat transfer. Computer aided design of trusses, frames, plane stress structures, as well as one- and two-dimensional thermal systems including conduction and convection.

ME 513. Energy Conversion 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer

Prerequisite(s): ME 310.

Description: A study of nuclear and fossil-fueled steam generators, plus internal combustion prime movers and alternate energy sources. A computerized design project will be required.

ME 521. Mechanical Vibrations 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer

Prerequisite(s): ME 422.

Description: The theory of vibrating mechanical systems. Modeling of lumped parameter and distributed parameter systems. Free and forced vibration. Damping. Periodic and transient motion. Concept of normal modes. Multiple degree-of-freedom systems. Design applications.

ME 523. Intermediate Dynamics 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer

Prerequisite(s): ME 206.

Description: Extension of the concepts in introductory dynamics (ME 206) to three dimensional motion. This includes the kinematics of multiple, rotating reference frames, and Newtonian vector mechanics for particles and rigid bodies (Euler's equations). Lagrangian analytical methods. Stability of motion.

ME 526. Vehicle Dynamics and Handling 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer

Prerequisite(s): ME 380.

Description: Design of passenger and commercial vehicles for optimal dynamic performance with a focus on architecture layout, characterization of critical subsystems, and CAE-based kinematic and kinetic modeling.

ME 532. Experimental Stress Analysis 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer

Prerequisite(s): ME 323, ME 414 and ME 415 or graduate standing in Mechanical Engineering.

Fee: An additional $30.00 is charged for this course.

Description: Fundamentals of experimental stress analysis. Brittle coating methods, photoelastic coating and electrical strain gage techniques, strain measurements under static and dynamic loading.

ME 534. Experimental Vibrations Term Typically Offered: Summer Odd Years Prerequisite(s): ME 435. Description: Experimental techniques for identifying the modal parameters of mechanical and structural systems. Review of multiple degree-of-freedom vibration modeling and analysis. Measurement of frequency response functions. Excitation techniques, instrumentation, Fourier analysis and signal processing. Acoustical modal analysis. Experiments on real mechanical and structural systems. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	ME 544. Design of Fluid Power Systems Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): ME 380 and ME 311. Description: Design methodology of hydraulic circuits and fluid power components. Study of rotary/linear actuators, hydrostatic transmissions, temperature control, contamination control, pneumatics, valves, and control components. Applied design projects and laboratory modules are required. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
ME 535. Control System Design Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): ME 435. Description: Basic concepts and principles of feedback control systems. Formulation of linear control problems by classical methods. Analysis and synthesis techniques as used in the design of automatic, dynamic control systems. Study of transient and steady state response, use of time and frequency domain concepts. System performance specifications. Design applications. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	ME 547. Design Methods Term Typically Offered: Fall Only Prerequisite(s): ME 422. Description: This course uses broad based engineering knowledge to meld equation driven principles with customer and business driven needs/requirements. The product development process is used to design a mechanical or electro-mechanical product. Topics include: concurrent engineering, project management, voice of customer, quality function deployment, concept generation, concept selection, concept embodiment, robust design methods, design failure mode and effects analysis, design validation plan & report design for X, and value/cost analysis. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
ME 536. Applied Stress Analysis Description: The course is designed to review basic concepts in structural mechanics, formulate analytical solutions to elastic problems, and understand finite element analysis procedures for mechanical engineering problems. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	ME 549. Geometric Dimensioning and Tolerancing Description: Introduction to the terms, rules, symbols, and concepts of GD&T as prescribed in the ASME Y14.5-2009 Standard, plus application of the GD&T. The class includes a comparison of GD&T to coordinate tolerancing; Rules #1 and #2; form and orientation controls; tolerance of position; runout and profile controls. It also introduces measuring using a coordinate measuring machine and PolyWorks For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
ME 540. Microfluidics Term Typically Offered: Fall Only Description: Introduction to the basic theory and practical applications of microfluidics. Topics include fluid mechanics at small scales, fabrication of microfluidic devices, methods of inducing and controlling flow, and techniques to measure fluid properties. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	ME 551. Materials for Additive Manufacturing Description: This course will explore polymeric and particulate materials in the context of processes and applications associated with additive manufacturing, popularly referred to as 3D printing. Metals, ceramics, polymers and composites can all be processed using additive manufacturing technologies. This course will guide students to undertake self-directed studies from popular, commercial and refereed research publications contributing to insights on materials-processing-design interactions in additive manufacturing. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
ME 542. Gas Turbines Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): ME 310 and ME 401. Description: Theory and design of various types of gas turbine engines used for power and propulsion. Thermodynamic cycle analysis; design basics of turbomachinery, nozzles, diffusers and combustion chambers; engine performance analysis. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units

- ME 553. Design-To-Manufacture Digital Tools 3 Units
Description: Successful product design involves correctly answering three inter-related questions: (1) What does the product look like? (2) What will the product be made out of? (3) How will the product be made? The three considerations based on material properties, component shapes, and processing methods offer many opportunities but impose several constraints that affect decision making in manufacturing. This online course will synthesize the learning from foundational engineering courses in materials, design and manufacturing and enable the student to undertake design challenges using the CES EduPack software to skillfully navigate the material-shape-process space.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ME 555. Introduction to Micro and Nanotechnology 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer
Prerequisite(s): CHE 253 or equivalent; Senior or Graduate standing in an engineering program.
Description: Design, fabrication and application of micro- and nano-electro-mechanical systems (MEMS/NEMS). Scaling laws governing micro- and nanoscale physics. Use of MEMS/NEMS devices in electronics, as sensors, and for medical applications.
- ME 556. Micro/Nano Energy Systems 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): ME 310 or Graduate standing.
Description: Introduction to different micro- and nanoscale energy conversion technologies - their basic principle, design considerations, fabrication, and operation. Topics include mechanical energy harvesting mechanisms such as piezoelectric and electrostatic, thermal energy harvesting systems such as thermoelectric and pyroelectric, and solid-state cooling technologies such as electrocaloric and magnetocaloric.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ME 559. Process Physics & Material Science in Advanced Manufacturing 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Spring Only
Prerequisite(s): ME 323 and ME 381.
Description: Materials processing lies at the core of advanced manufacturing. It is through understanding and innovations in materials processing, true progress in manufacturing development can be reached. Topics include mechanical, thermal, electrochemical, acoustic, optical energy-based material processing physics, physical metallurgy, phase transformation, solidification, heat and mass transfer, dislocation mechanics in the context of manufacturing.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ME 562. Composite Materials 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer
Prerequisite(s): ME 422.
Description: Overview of composite materials, stress/strain analysis of a polymer matrix fiber-reinforced composite ply, classical lamination theory, failure criteria, design approaches, manufacturing methods, and applications for structural polymeric composites.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ME 565. Advanced Engineering Mathematics I 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer
Prerequisite(s): ENGR 201 or ENGR 205 or equivalent.
Description: Formulation and solution of mathematical models for mechanical engineering problems leading to ordinary and partial differential equations. Transform solution methods and linear algebra concepts, including real and complex-domain eigenvalue problem solutions.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ME 566. Advanced Engineering Mathematics II 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer
Prerequisite(s): ME 565 or equivalent.
Description: Analysis of engineering systems and phenomena yielding complex domain models and solutions. Power series, Taylor series, and Laurent series. Complex analysis and potential theory. Numerical analysis for complex domain systems. Introduction to optimization and linear programming.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ME 570. Sustainable Energy Systems 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall Only
Prerequisite(s): ME 310 and ME 311.
Description: Analysis and design of sustainable energy systems, and exploration of concepts such as carbon capture storage for making fossil energy systems more environmentally acceptable.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ME 572. Energy Storage Systems 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer
Prerequisite(s): ME 440 or graduate standing in Mechanical Engineering.
Description: Study of the principles and analysis of energy systems. Introduction to energy storage systems and their applications; thermal and mechanical energy storage, storage of organic fuels, hydrogen, and electrochemical energy.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ME 573. Electric and Hybrid Vehicles 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): By course: ME 310.
Description: By topic: Refrigeration and Heat Pump Systems, Reaction Mixture and Combustion, Chemical and Phase Equilibrium. By course: ME440. By topic: Heat Exchanger Design, Forced Convection. Introduction to the knowledge for the design, analysis, and development of electric, hybrid vehicles, and their components. Topics include the operation principle of electric cars, motors and power electronics in an electric car, battery, and relevant charging technologies.

ME 575. Special Topics in Mechanical Engineering 1-4 Units Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): Faculty consent. Description: A special topics course in mechanical engineering topics not covered by regularly scheduled courses. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	ME 602. Graduate Internship in Mechanical Engineering 2 Units Grading Basis: Pass/Fail Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): Admission to Graduate Study, Permission of Department Chair, and Permission of Director of Career Services. Description: Supervised professional experience in industry at the graduate level. This course provides the structure and focus for the graduate intern field assignment to ensure that the assignment is appropriate and consistent with the intern's graduate course of study and professional development. Not to be counted towards meeting the requirements for a degree. May be repeated for credit. Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.
ME 580. Air Pollution Control 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): CHEM 202, ME 310 or equivalent. Description: Origin and fate of air pollutants, combustion and pollutant formation processes, control of emissions of gaseous and particulate pollutants and design of various pollution control devices. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
ME 585. Design and Energy Analysis of Consumer Appliances 4.5 Units Description: Application of classical, computational, and experimental methods and analysis to the design of mechanical and energy systems. Topics include material impacts on design, structural component design, and design and analysis of thermal fluid, and acoustic systems. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	ME 606. Continuum Mechanics 3 Units Prerequisite(s): Graduate standing, ME 311 and ME 323. Description: Emphasizes the basic principles of continuum mechanics and the central role these principles play in the formulation of the fundamental equations of fluids and solid mechanics. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
ME 588. Independent Study in Mechanical Engineering 1-4 Units Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): Faculty consent. Description: A theoretical or experimental investigation of a problem area related to mechanical engineering. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	ME 610. Data Acquisition and Signal Analysis 3 Units Prerequisite(s): Graduate/Graduate Professional standing in Mechanical Engineering or instructor permission. Description: Implementation of PC-based data acquisition systems for dynamic signal analysis. The LabView graphical programming language will be used to design virtual instruments for data collection and signal analysis.
ME 595. Measurement, Reliability, and Thermal Design of Electromechanical Systems 4.5 Units Prerequisite(s): ME 585. Description: Application of classical, computational, and experimental methods and analyses to the design of electromechanical systems. Topics include reliability and failure analysis, measurement and control of electromechanical systems, and analysis and design optimization of thermal systems. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm) ME 611. Introduction to Experimental Statistical Design 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Summer Only Prerequisite(s): ME 414. Description: Experimental Statistical Design based on experimental principles including randomization, replication, blocking, and parametric versus non-parametric assumptions. Associated topics include factorial designs, statistical assumptions, regression and software package use. The course is open to students in Mechanical Engineering graduate programs; but is not open to students with credit for IE 464 or 664. Note: Students may only receive credit for one of the following: IE 464, IE 664, ME 611, and EM 661.

- ME 612. Finite Element Methods for Mechanical Design II 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): ME 512.
Description: Use of general purpose software for practical structural, thermal, and fluid design applications, including nonlinear and transient effects. Advanced modeling techniques, and analysis guideline with emphasis on interpretation of results.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ME 614. Heating, Ventilating, and Air Conditioning 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): ME 440.
Description: Psychometric principles. Detailed calculation of heat losses and heat gain for both heating and cooling of buildings. Basic concepts of refrigeration. Design of actual systems and selection of equipment. Automatic controls. Codes and standards. A design project will be required.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ME 615. Pattern Recognition and Learning Algorithms 3 Units
Description: In this class students will learn how to use concepts of Machine Learning to identify patterns in related engineering applications. Concepts related to Regression, Classification, Clustering, and Time-Series Forecast will be discussed, alongside topics related to different learning approaches as Supervised Learning, Unsupervised Learning, and Reinforcement Learning. Case studies related to different engineering applications will be presented throughout the course.
- ME 618. Heat Exchanger Design 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): ME 440.
Description: Thermal and hydraulic design of heat exchangers. Selection and optimum design of heat exchangers. Cost and construction of heat exchangers.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ME 620. Advanced Mechanics of Solids 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): ME 432 or equivalent.
Description: Analysis of stress and strain. Topics include failure theories, unsymmetric bending, curved beams, shear center, torsion, beams on elastic foundations, beams with combined axial and lateral loads, thick-wall cylinders, rotating disc, introduction to elastic stability.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ME 621. Noise and Vibration Control 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): ME 422 and ME 414.
Description: Practical aspects of noise and vibration control are studied. Methods for measuring and analyzing noise and vibration. Methods for selecting design criteria. Methods for quieting a product.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ME 625. Mechanical Design of Internal Combustion Engines 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): ME 310, ME 380, and ME 442, or equivalents.
Description: Principles and procedures for the mechanical design of internal combustion engine components and systems for strength, endurance, and optimal performance. Design projects and computer applications are emphasized.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ME 626. Vehicle Body Structure Design 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): ME 380 and ME 442, or equivalent.
Description: Principles of structural analysis and design for commercial and passenger vehicle bodies. Body architecture. Fabrication/assembly options. NVH assessment and optimization. Material selection for safety, reliability, cost reduction and weight reduction.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ME 630. Turbomachinery 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): ME 310 and ME 401.
Description: The thermodynamics and fluid mechanics of turbomachinery. Dimensional analysis and performance mapping. Preliminary design procedures. Blading and flow path design. Experimental and theoretical methods for determination of flow losses. Flow field calculations and performance prediction.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ME 635. Advanced Control Systems 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall Even Years
Description: Design of modern control systems including state-space realizations and observer design. Introduction to non-linear control systems including phase plane analysis, nonlinear stability analysis, describing functions, feedback linearization and anti-windup compensation. Advanced control methods covered include sliding mode control and adaptive control.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- ME 638. Computational Methods in Fluid Flow and Heat Transfer 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Graduate School or Professional School Standing.
Description: Solutions of the momentum and thermal boundary-layer equations; methods of solving boundary-value problems using digital computers. Finite-difference methods, finite-element methods, and other methods for solving equations of fluid flow and heat transfer. Turbulence models.

ME 639. Injury Biomechanics 3 Units Prerequisite(s): ME 649 or BE 354 or equivalent, or permission of the instructor. Description: Application of mechanics to the study of human injury. Response of the human body to injurious conditions. Injury tolerance of the human body. Applications to child abuse, transportation safety and medico-legal environment. Note: Cross-listed with BE 639. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	ME 646. Design for Manufacturability and Reliability 3 Units Prerequisite(s): ME 442 and ISE 360. Description: Introduction to manufacturing concerns such as efficient assembly, producibility, and quality that should be considered early in the design process. Topics include the product development cycle, manufacturing process selection, tolerancing, design for assembly, quality control techniques, Taguchi's robust design methodology, quality function deployment, value engineering and reliability-based design. Life cycle optimization. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
ME 640. Optimum Design Methods 3 Units Prerequisite(s): ME 422 or equivalent. Description: Methods and applications of engineering design optimization. Strategies for problem formulation. Transformation methods, search techniques, linearization methods and quadratic approximation methods. Solution evaluation. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	ME 647. Advanced Design Methods 3 Units Prerequisite(s): ME 442 and ME 497. Description: Practical techniques for product definition, concept generation and selection, value analysis, parameter design, design for manufacture, life cycle design and product structuring. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
ME 641. Advanced Mechanics of Machinery 3 Units Prerequisite(s): ME 442 and ME 521. Description: Machine analysis and design for high speed, high performance applications. Rigid-body kinematics and dynamics of mechanisms, balancing of machinery. Cam-follower mechanisms. Mathematical modeling of mechanisms composed of elastically deformable elements such as gears, bearings, linkages and actuators. Transient and steady-state dynamic response. Failure modes and prevention. A design project is required. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	ME 650. Biofluid Mechanics 3 Units Prerequisite(s): ME 401. Description: Application of the Navier-Stokes equation to flow in the human body and to other biological systems. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
ME 644. Mechatronics 3 Units Fee: An additional $40.00 is charged for this course. Description: Introduction to multi-domain systems. Mechanical, electrical, electronic, electromechanical system dynamics. Emphasis on modeling and simulation of hybrid systems using modern computer-aided tools. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	ME 651. Kinematics and Kinetics of Human Movement 3 Units Prerequisite(s): ME 206. Description: Development of analytical tools for evaluating three-dimensional kinematics and kinetics of human motion. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
ME 645. Mechanical Engineering Structured Research Project 3 Units Prerequisite(s): Graduate/professional school standing. Description: Structured research in a mechanical engineering discipline. A proposal, activity reports and final report are required. Research results are presented for faculty and peer review, and must also be documented in a scholarly paper targeted toward a journal or technical conference. Intended for candidates for the Master of Engineering degree choosing the non-thesis curriculum alternative. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	ME 652. Advanced Human Biodynamics 3 Units Prerequisite(s): ME 651. Description: Development of techniques for synthesis and analysis of kinematic and kinetic models of human motion, in conjunction with acquisition of biomechanical data associated with functional human movement. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
	ME 661. Advanced Thermodynamics 3 Units Prerequisite(s): Graduate or Professional school standing. Description: Review of thermodynamic fundamentals, with application to selected topics. Irreversible, non-equilibrium thermodynamics. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
	ME 662. Intermediate Heat Transfer 3 Units Prerequisite(s): ME 440. Description: Classical heat conduction solutions and numerical techniques. Intermediate convection and radiative heat transfer topics. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)

ME 667. Solar Energy Applications 3 Units Prerequisite(s): ME 440 Theory of solar radiation transmission, absorption and reflectance. Description: Heat transfer in solar energy devices. Design methods for heating of buildings by solar energy. Active and passive solar applications. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	ME 683. Additive Manufacturing with Polymers 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Description: This course will explore polymer materials used in Additive Manufacturing (AM) in the context of design of new materials, material selection, polymer processing for AM, material selection for AM, and various applications that can be manufactured with polymer AM. This course offers new design tools such as CES and MSC Digimat that are often used by design engineers in AM for material and process selection and process simulation to reduce trial-and-error practices. This course will guide students to undertake self-directed learning from peer reviewed research papers, and popular publications to enable focused learning in a continuously emerging field of AM. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
ME 668. Advanced Mechanical Vibrations 3 Units Prerequisite(s): ME 521. Description: Analytical and computational methods for mechanical vibration problems. Formulation and solution techniques. Modeling and applications. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	ME 685. Computational Modeling of Materials 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Prerequisite(s): ME 310. Description: Crystal structures and chemical bonding in solids; Basics of statistical thermodynamics; introduction to different materials modeling techniques at nano-to meso-scopic scales (Molecular Dynamics, Monte-Carlo, and Kinetic Monte-Carlo); atomic-scale modeling of surface diffusion processes, structural, thermal, mechanical, and defect properties; "Hands-on" sessions on designing and executing atomistic simulations using available open-source packages, visualize and analyze output; introduction to emerging techniques like machine learning and materials informatics to design-materials. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
ME 669. Advanced Dynamics 3 Units Prerequisite(s): Graduate or Professional school standing. Description: Kinematics and dynamics of rigid-body motion. An introduction to variational mechanics, including generalized coordinates and Lagrange's equations of motion. Stability of motion, including the Routh-Hurwitz criterion and the Liapounov direct method. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	ME 688. Independent Study in Mechanical Engineering 1-6 Units For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
ME 670. Experimental Fluid Mechanics 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered Description: This course provides a graduate-level introduction to the basic theory and practical application of several important experimental techniques used in fluid dynamics. Topics include techniques for the measurement of material properties, pressure, density, force, fluid velocity, temperature and heat flux. The course will also review applications of measurement techniques for non-Newtonian fluids, hydraulics, microfluids, and other special-case topics. Fundamentals of data processing and data acquisition will be discussed. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	ME 690. Master of Science Thesis or Paper in Mechanical Engineering 1-6 Units Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): Graduate standing. Description: Experimental and/or theoretical research performed under the direction of a faculty member. A written thesis must be presented to a faculty committee and defended, or a paper approved by a faculty committee must be submitted to a peer reviewed journal or conference. Intended for candidates for the Master of Science degree choosing the thesis or paper curriculum alternative. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
ME 671. Advanced Fluid Mechanics 3 Units Prerequisite(s): ME 401. Description: A study of the Navier-Stokes equation, with application to laminar and turbulent-flow fields for various geometries. Computer applications. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	ME 694. Mechanical Engineering Seminar 0 Units Grading Basis: Pass/Fail Prerequisite(s): Graduate or Professional school standing. Description: Presentations on research projects and current literature. Course begins in the fall semester and concludes in the spring semester. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
ME 675. Advanced Topics in Mechanical Engineering 1-6 Units Prerequisite(s): Faculty consent. Description: An advanced course in mechanical engineering topics not covered by regularly scheduled courses. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)

ME 695. Platform Engineering Project3 Units*Prerequisite(s): ME 530, ME 531, and ECE 532.

Description: Major product development project involving a multidisciplinary team working on design and/or research problems associated with consumer appliance technologies. Concurrent topics on project realization and management. A proposal, activity reports and final report are required. Project results are presented for faculty and peer review.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

ME 697. Master of Engineering Thesis or Paper in Mechanical Engineering1-6 Units*Prerequisite(s): Graduate or Professional school standing.

Description: Original design or research activity in a mechanical engineering discipline, under the direction of a faculty member. A written thesis must be presented to a faculty committee and defended, or a paper approved by a faculty committee must be submitted to a peer reviewed journal or conference. Intended for candidates for the Master of Engineering degree choosing the thesis or paper curriculum alternative.

ME 700. Dissertation Research in Mechanical Engineering1-18 Units*Prerequisite(s): Completion of doctoral program core and permission of dissertation director.

Description: Original research activity in an appropriate mechanical engineering discipline, under the direction of a Mechanical Engineering graduate faculty member.

Microbiology & Immunology (MBIO)

Subject-area course lists indicate courses currently active for offering at the University of Louisville. Not all courses are scheduled in any given academic term. For class offerings in a specific semester, refer to the Schedule of Classes (https://csprd.louisville.edu/ps/ps_class/EMPLOYEE/PSFT_CS/c/COMMUNITY_ACCESS.CLASS_SEARCH./x/?state=62dab551a0d600a5e8237359c50704e59007&duo_code=sjUx20STj21bWVEu03Z1YRiHmfxpgoV).

500-level courses generally are included in both the undergraduate- and graduate-level course listings; however, specific course/section offerings may vary between semesters. Students are responsible for ensuring that they enroll in courses that are applicable to their particular academic programs.

Course Fees

Some courses may carry fees beyond the standard tuition costs to cover additional support or materials. Program-, subject- and course-specific fee information can be found on the Office of the Bursar website (<https://louisville.edu/bursar/tuitionfee/university-fees/>).

MBIO 600. Lab Rotations1-2 Units*Grading Basis: Pass/Fail

Description: Research experience in different faculty members' laboratories in areas of interest to the student. The purpose is to help the student select a Research Advisor. Acceptance by the faculty members is required. The course consists of one or two laboratory rotations (one rotation per quarter) with one credit hour per rotation. This course may be taken more than once if deemed necessary. Fall and spring semesters only. Pass/fail grading.

MBIO 601. Molecular Microbiology2 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Description: This is an advanced graduate course in Microbiology and material will be presented at a first year graduate level, assuming that the students have a background in microbiology from previous undergraduate coursework, or have a high interest and sufficient motivation to learn at the state of the art level in this field. The course is primarily intended as a required class for all students seeking a PhD degree in Microbiology and Immunology, and will therefore provide the basic foundation of knowledge needed to build on to become an expert in the field, or in closely related fields in Biology and Oral Biology.

MBIO 602. Immunology3 Units*Prerequisite(s): Permission of course directors.

Description: This course provides an advanced introduction to innate and adaptive immunity at cellular and molecular levels including: identification of the cells of the immune system and their roles in various immune responses, the role and mechanisms of intercellular communication in induction and regulation of immune responses, gene rearrangement in formation of antigen receptors, regulation of antibody responses in response to infection, cytotoxic T cell responses against tumors and infectious agents, hypersensitivity reactions and autoimmunity.

MBIO 604. General Virology1 Unit*Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Description: This is an introductory course that focuses on building basic virology concepts including the basic replication steps common to viruses, entry, replication and egress, interaction of virus with host cellular proteins during the replication cycle, general virus replication cycle, how and why some viruses cause disease (viral pathogenesis), and how viral diseases spread (mode of transmission), and current approaches of vaccines and antivirals. Format: lectures, student presentations. Graded.

MBIO 606. Seminar1 Unit*Grading Basis: Pass/FailPrerequisite(s): Consent of instructor.Description: Pass/Fail grading.

MBIO 610. Methods and Analysis in the Biomedical Sciences 2 Units

Description: The primary goal of the course is to provide first-year graduate students with the conceptual framework to become familiar with key tools and techniques used in biomedical science research. We will examine the kind of information the methodology can provide, the strengths and weaknesses of the approach, and how data obtained can be judged and used to address scientific problems.

Note: Cross-listed with ASNB 610, BIOC 610, PHTX 610, PHZB 610.

MBIO 611. Learning Theories & Instructional Strategies in Science Education 2 Units

Term Typically Offered: Summer Only

Description: This course covers how to actively engage all students in the classroom and prepares students to teach in graduate courses at the School of Medicine or other schools of higher education. Students will create a lesson plan, PowerPoint presentation and activities to engage the students; an assessment plan to measure student's performance; and a teaching philosophy statement.

MBIO 618. Topics in Advanced Microbiology 1-3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Summer Only

Prerequisite(s): Consent of instructor.

Description: An in-depth examination of one or more topics not included in regularly offered courses in the curriculum. Topics vary.

MBIO 619. Research 1-12 Units

Grading Basis: Pass/Fail

Prerequisite(s): Consent of instructor.

Description: Pass/Fail grading.

MBIO 621. Advanced Immunology: Innate and Adaptive Immunity 2 Units

Prerequisite(s): MBIO 602 or consent of instructor.

Description: This is an advanced interdisciplinary graduate level course focused on acquiring deeper knowledge about cells and associated concepts involved in innate and acquired immunity. The cells include dendritic cells, macrophages, neutrophils, innate lymphoid cells, NK cells and T cells. Concepts such as cell differentiation, development, activation and function, antigen presentation, thymic selection, and cell cross-talk will be discussed. Format: short lectures, analysis of pertinent high-profile papers. Graded.

MBIO 622. Immunity to Microbes and Tumor 2 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Prerequisite(s): MBIO 601 and MBIO 602 or consent of instructor; Completion of all first year graduate courses & an average of 3.0 GPA is required.

Description: The course focuses on the cellular and molecular components of the immune response that perpetuate or protect against pathogenic and commensal microbes, tumor cells and autoimmunity. Short lectures will be followed by student analysis of pertinent high profile papers.

MBIO 623. Scientific Writing and Hypothesis Testing 2 Units

Grading Basis: Pass/Fail

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Prerequisite(s): Permission of instructor.

Description: This course will teach students writing skills necessary to write research papers and compete successfully for grant funding, and more generally to succeed as a scientist. Topics covered in this course include how to write abstracts, research papers, as well as various components of research proposal, including Specific Aims page and research plan. Didactic lectures on these topics will be combined with in class presentations by students.

MBIO 631. Basic Microbiology, Immunology, and Virology 2 Units

Term Typically Offered: Summer Only

Prerequisite(s): Consent of instructor.

Description: A general course in infectious diseases and immunology. Special emphases are placed on oral infections, immune phenomena, and natural resistance mechanisms. Specific topics include the human immune response, pathogenesis of microbial infections, molecular and microbiological basis of periodontal diseases, pulp and periapical infections and cariogenesis. Graded. Summer semester only.

MBIO 632. Basic Immunology 1 Unit

Term Typically Offered: Summer Only

Description: This course is designed to teach graduate students in programs related to biomedical research the basics of Immunology.

MBIO 687. Microbial Pathogenesis 2 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Prerequisite(s): MBIO 601, BIOC 645, or consent of instructor.

Description: A detailed discussion of host-parasite interactions, focusing on the characteristics (i.e., virulence factors) of bacteria that enable them to cause disease. Exotoxins, capsules, adherence mechanisms, intracellular replication, and iron metabolism will be described in detail. Specific bacterial diseases will be examined to illustrate how each virulence factor is required in the infectious process. The use of animals and other model systems will be discussed. Graded. Spring.

MBIO 690. Research Methods in Microbiology and Immunology 2 UnitsGrading Basis: Pass/FailTerm Typically Offered: Fall OnlyDescription: A series of lectures and laboratory demonstrations emphasizing current research techniques used in areas of immunology, virology, microbiology, biochemistry and molecular biology. A limited amount of hands-on experience may be utilized in some areas. Fall semester only. Pass/fail grading.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

Description: To promote nursing research and scholarship among students through faculty mentoring. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	1-3 Units	NURS 603. Family Health Prerequisite(s): NURS 600, NURS 605, NURS 611, NURS 651, NURS 655, NURS 656, and NURS 657. Description: This course provides a foundation in family health concepts and family assessment for advanced practice nurses. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	1 Unit
		NURS 604. Transition to Practice Prerequisite(s): Matriculation to specialty-specific clinical track course. Description: This course will assist completing students to make an easier transition to practice as advanced practice nurses. Students will focus on portfolio development, preparation for certification, and legislative/practice issues. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	2 Units

NURS 606. Healthcare Systems 3 Units

Description: The U.S. healthcare system evolution, services, policy, and delivery are examined and compared politically, ethically, technologically, environmentally, and socioeconomically. Availability, access, regulation, and accountability are considered using systems theory.

NURS 607. Foundational Concepts of Evidence Based Practice 3 Units

Fee: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This course introduces the student to evidence based practice models and research design and methods. Students will learn the process of critically evaluating the literature for evidence based practice.

NURS 608. Health Care Systems and Microsystem Analysis 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Prerequisite(s): Admission to MEPN Program.

Fee: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This foundational course will prepare the student nurse in advanced practice to effectively navigate complex health care systems. This course focuses on principles of systems theory, micro- and macro-economics, microsystem analyses, information management, models of service delivery, and strategies for effective interprofessional collaboration.

NURS 609. Research Design and Professional Writing 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): Admission to the MSN program or consent of Instructor.

Description: This course is an overview of nursing research using multiple designs and methods. Ethical issues, data management and analysis of findings are included. Instruction in scientific writing is integrated.

NURS 611. Graduate Pharmacology for Advanced Practice Nurses 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): Entrance to the Graduate Program in the School of Nursing.

Description: This course will provide the nurse practitioner student with a sound basis for clinical application of pharmacology. Emphasis is placed on learning drug classifications by clinical indication or body symptoms.

NURS 612. Philosophy of Science 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in the doctoral program.

Description: Overview and critical analysis of science as a way of knowing, including epistemological and ontological implications of differing approaches to knowledge generation.

NURS 613. Introduction to Health Care Policy 3 Units

Description: This course provides the student with the understanding of the role of the nurse as leader and advocate in health policy at the local, state, regional, national and global level. Students will analyze and evaluate how policy influences health care delivery in the context of stakeholders, politics and economics.

NURS 615. Advanced Clinical Practice: Women's Health Nurse Practitioner, Clinical I 2 Units

Prerequisite(s): NURS 660 and NURS 661.

Corequisite(s): NURS 602, NURS 604, NURS 616, and NURS 619.

Fee: An additional $200.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This clinical course places an emphasis on the role of the advanced practice nurse as a member of the health care team across a variety of obstetric and gynecological settings. The clinical experience focuses on comprehensive patient assessment, diagnosis and management of acute health problems for women and their families.

NURS 616. Women's Health Nurse Practitioner I 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): NURS 601, NURS 660, and NURS 661.

Corequisite(s): NURS 602, NURS 604, NURS 615, and NURS 619.

Description: This is the first in a series of four courses (two didactic; two clinical) which assist students to develop the role of the Women's Health Nurse Practitioner. The focus of the initial course is on the health and well being of girls and women across the life-span. It emphasizes the application of concepts, principles and skills needed to provide care for common, well-defined obstetric and gynecologic health processes and problems of adolescents and adults frequently encountered by Women's Health Nurse Practitioners. The focus of this course is identifying between normal and abnormal, and in making beginning differential diagnoses.

NURS 617. Advanced Clinical Practice: Women's Health Nurse Practitioner (WHNP), Clinical II 1 Unit

Prerequisite(s): NURS 604, NURS 615, NURS 616, and NURS 619.

Corequisite(s): NURS 618.

Description: This clinical course places an emphasis on the role of the advanced practice nurse as a member of the health care team in obstetric settings. The clinical experience focuses on comprehensive patient assessment, diagnosis and management of obstetric health problems for women and their families.

NURS 618. Women's Health Nurse Practitioner II4 Units*Prerequisite(s): NURS 604, NURS 615, and NURS 616.Corequisite(s): NURS 617.

Description: This is the second in a series of four courses (two didactic; two clinical) which assist students to develop the role of Women's Health Nurse Practitioner. The focus of this course is on the diagnosis and management of complex health issues affecting multicultural women across the life-span. It emphasizes the application of concepts, principles and skills needed to provide care for more complex obstetric and gynecologic health processes and problems of adolescents and adults frequently encountered by Women's Health Nurse Practitioners (WHNP's). The focus of this course is developing differential diagnoses for abnormal conditions, recognizing those issues within the scope of practice for WHNP's, and when referral to other health care providers is warranted.

NURS 619. Advanced Skills Laboratory: Women's Health Nurse Practitioner1 Unit*Prerequisite(s): NURS 602, NURS 660, and NURS 661.Corequisite(s): NURS 604, NURS 615, and NURS 616.

Description: This laboratory course places an emphasis on advanced psychomotor skills used by Women's Health Nurse Practitioners across a variety of obstetric and gynecologic settings. These skills are learned and practiced in the classroom setting before application in the clinical setting.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

NURS 621. Research and Evidence Based Practice2 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): Admission to the MEPN Program.Fee: An additional $100.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This course assists the student to critically evaluate evidence for advanced nursing practice. Students will use research theory and process to critique

NURS 623. Advanced Clinical Practice: Adult Clinical Nurse Specialist II7 Units*Prerequisite(s): NURS 622.

Description: Explores the theoretical and practical applications of the Adult CNS in a variety of clinical settings. The clinical practicum is designed by faculty and students to promote CNS competencies in the spheres of influence: nursing personnel and organization/network.

NURS 624. Advanced Clinical Practice: Adult-Gerontology Primary Care Nurse Practitioner I3 Units*Prerequisite(s): NURS 656.Fee: An additional $200.00 is charged for this course.

Description: The purpose of this course is to provide clinical experience in comprehensive patient assessment, diagnosis and management of common primary health problems in adolescent, adult, geriatric patient populations. Students will begin practicing the role of an APRN under preceptor supervision.

NURS 625. Advanced Clinical Practice: Adult-Gerontology Primary Care Nurse Practitioner II3 Units*Prerequisite(s): NURS 624.

Description: The purpose of this course is to provide advanced clinical experience in comprehensive patient assessment, diagnosis and management of common and complex primary health problems in adolescent, adult, and geriatric patient populations. Students will strengthen and enhance their advanced practice skills with preceptor supervision.

NURS 626. Advanced Clinical Practice: Adult Nurse Practitioner III3 Units*Prerequisite(s): NURS 602, NURS 604, NURS 624, and NURS 625.

Description: The focus of this clinical course is the synthesis of theoretical and evidence-based practice skills necessary to implement the nurse practitioner role in a holistic manner that will advance nursing knowledge and the health of patients.

NURS 627. Epidemiology and Global Health3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): Admission to the MEPN Program.Fee: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This course will focus on the theory and concepts of epidemiology and social determinants of health, and how they can be applied to nursing practice. Application and integration of the principles and tools of epidemiology to decision-making in a health care environment will be emphasized. This course provides an overview of health behavior at the level of the individual family, community, and clinical/aggregate populations. The effects of individual health beliefs, cultural variables, readings for change, community environment, and health disparities on health behavior will be discussed.

NURS 628. Health Information Technology
2 Units
Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Prerequisite(s): Admission to MEPN Program.

Fee: An additional $100.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This course provides an introduction to the use of information technology in health care and health care systems. Factors that facilitate or prevent successful use of health care technology will be examined.

NURS 629. Advanced Health Assessment of the Neonate
3 Units
Prerequisite(s): NURS 605, NURS 607, NURS 608, NURS 613, NURS 652, and NURS 655.

Corequisite(s): NURS 658.

Fee: An additional $100.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This course is an in-depth study of neonatal assessment techniques and normal versus abnormal variations seen in the newborn. Emphasis is on the clinical presentation of the newborn, utilizing concepts from development anatomy and physiology as well as intrauterine factors that may alter findings. Students will learn advanced physical examination, gestational age, and neurobehavioral assessment skills specific to the neonate.

NURS 630. Neonatal Pathophysiology
2 Units
Prerequisite(s): Admission to the MSN program, Neonatal Nurse Practitioner track.

Description: Advanced neonatal pathophysiology serves as a basis for clinical management of the neonate.

NURS 631. Clinical Nurse Leader Immersion: Part I
1 Unit
Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Prerequisite(s): Admission to MEPN Program.

Fee: An additional $50.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This practicum allows the student to begin to examine the various roles of the Clinical Nurse Leader (CNL) through a clinical immersion experience. This practicum will focus on the CNL as a clinician who advocates for the client, develops outcomes for the client, and manages client care using previous nursing coursework. The preceptor will help the students to begin to develop skills as a CNL through intensive clinical experience. The AACN competencies and curricular expectations for CNL education and practice (October 2013) will serve as the defining framework for this course.

Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

NURS 632. Clinical Nurse Leader Immersion: Part II
3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Prerequisite(s): Admission to MEPN Program, NURS 631.

Fee: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This practicum allows the student to begin to examine the various roles of the Clinical Nurse Leader (CNL) through a clinical immersion experience. This practicum will focus on the CNL as a clinician who advocates for the client, develops outcomes for the client, and manages client care using previous nursing coursework. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

NURS 633. Advanced Neonatal Pathophysiology and Clinical Management I
4 Units
Prerequisite(s): NURS 605, NURS 607, NURS 608, NURS 613, NURS 629, NURS 652, NURS 655, NURS 658, and NURS 657.

Corequisite(s): NURS 637.

Fee: An additional $200.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This course provides a foundation in the cellular processes upon which neonatal pathophysiology occurs. Synthesis of topics in human embryology is the foundation for understanding specific neonatal pathophysiologic processes. Common pathophysiologic neonatal diseases and how they deviate from normal physiology are presented using a systems approach. Integrated into the course are diagnostic reasoning skills needed to manage the care of a critically ill neonate. Students will evaluate presenting clinical signs in the neonate requiring intensive care, determine the appropriate diagnosis and differential diagnoses, identify appropriate diagnostic tests and exams to determine the appropriate diagnosis in neonates with a variety of problems.

NURS 634. Advanced Clinical Practice: Neonatal NP II
2 Units
Prerequisite(s): NURS 629, NURS 633, and NURS 600.

Description: This course provides a theoretical foundation for evidence based neonatal nurse practitioner practice. Clinical management of cardiovascular, gastrointestinal, integumentary and hematologic systems will be the focus.

NURS 635. Advanced Neonatal Pathophysiology and Clinical Management II 4 Units

Prerequisite(s): NURS 605, NURS 607, NURS 608, NURS 613, NURS 629, NURS 636, NURS 652, NURS 655, NURS 657, and NURS 658.

Corequisite(s): NURS 637.

Description: This course is the second of two courses that provides the student with didactic preparation in the concepts of advanced neonatal pathophysiology based upon normal neonatal physiology. Synthesis of topics in human embryology, genetics, and advanced neonatal pathophysiology and clinical management provides the foundation for understanding complex neonatal pathophysiologic processes. Complex pathophysiologic neonatal diseases and how they deviate from normal physiology are presented using a systems approach. Integrated into the course is the diagnostic reasoning needed to manage the care of the critically ill neonate. Topics addressed in course include those recommended to prepare the student for national certification as a neonatal nurse practitioner.

NURS 636. Neonatal Nurse Practitioner Residency I 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): NURS 605, NURS 607, NURS 608, NURS 613, NURS 629, NURS 636, NURS 652, NURS 655, NURS 657, and NURS 658; NURS 633 (or concurrent).

Description: The purpose of the NNP Residency is to provide neonatal nurse practitioner students with learning opportunities that facilitate continued development in the Neonatal Nurse Practitioner role. Students will work with preceptors in a Level III-IV NICU's to advance the knowledge and skills acquired in previous coursework. This course provides the student with an immersion into the Neonatal Nurse Practitioner (NNP) role that allows development of increased skill and independence in decision-making as a NNP. Students are expected to identify, interpret, and apply current evidence to their practice and clinical decision-making in the care of critically ill infants.

NURS 637. Neonatal Nurse Practitioner Residency II 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): NURS 604, NURS 605, NURS 607, NURS 608, NURS 613, NURS 629, NURS 633, NURS 636, NURS 652, NURS 655, NURS 657, and NURS 658.

Corequisite(s): NURS 635.

Description: This is the second and final residency course for NNP students. The purpose of the NNP Residency is to provide students with learning opportunities that facilitate continued development in the Neonatal Nurse Practitioner role. Students will work with preceptors in a Level III-IV NICU's to advance the knowledge and skills acquired in previous coursework. This course provides the student with an immersion into the Neonatal Nurse Practitioner (NNP) role that allows advance their skills and independence in decision-making as a NNP working with infants with increasingly complex medical problems. Students are expected to identify, interpret, and apply current evidence to their practice and clinical decision-making in the care of critically ill infants.

NURS 638. Advanced Psychiatric Assessment and Clinical Interviewing Techniques 1 Unit

Description: The focus this course is the use of clinical interviewing techniques and psychiatric assessment of in determining the mental health status of clients throughout the lifespan.

NURS 639. Advanced Psych Nurse Practitioner Mental Health Assessment Clinical 1 Unit

Prerequisite(s): NURS 638 and NURS 647.

Description: Course focuses on Initial Implementation of the APPMHN role: psychiatric assessment and interviewing strategies utilizing the current Diagnostic and Statistical Manual for diagnosing psychopathology. The practicum focuses on a lifespan approach with select clients in multicultural contexts who are at risk for or are experiencing dysfunction in the area of mental health.

NURS 640. Introduction to CNL Project 1 Unit

Term Typically Offered: Summer Only

Prerequisite(s): Admission to MEPN Program.

Description: NURS 640 is a one credit course designed to assist the Clinical Nurse Leader (CNL) student with expectations for Nursing 631 Immersion I and NURS 632 Immersion II. These are "leadership" immersions culminating in an evidence-based performance improvement proposal and immersion project. The student will learn about immersion expectations; roles for the student, faculty, committee, and their preceptor; explore and critique completed projects for strengths and weaknesses; make connections between EBP theory and practice; and review documentation requirements for the Immersion Courses.

NURS 641. Advanced Psychiatric Mental Health Nurse Practitioner I: Theory 3 Units

Description: Course introduces the advanced practice role with a focus on at least 3 modes of therapy across the lifespan and in multicultural contexts. Relevant literature, professional practice guidelines and current best practice standards will guide the selection of intervention models across the continuum of care.

NURS 642. Advanced Psychiatric Mental Health Nurse Practitioner II: Theory 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): NURS 638, NURS 641, and NURS 645.

Corequisite(s): NURS 646.

Description: Course provides in-depth study of PMH interventions for clients with complex or co-morbid diagnoses. A lifespan approach encompassing diverse and multicultural contexts will be utilized. Relevant literature, professional practice guidelines and current best practice standards will guide the selection of intervention models across the continuum of care.

NURS 643. Quality and Safety in Advanced Practice Nursing 2 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring

Fee: An additional $100.00 is charged for this course.

Description: Introduces students to the latest information on healthcare quality and patient safety. Focuses on the specific domains of healthcare quality. Quality frameworks and models will be the basis for explaining techniques of quality management. Examines healthcare quality and patient safety from a strategic viewpoint with the goal of making APN providers effective decision makers.

NURS 645. Advanced Psychiatric Mental Health Nurse Practitioner I: Clinical 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): NURS 638, NURS 647, and NURS 649.

Corequisite(s): NURS 641.

Fee: An additional $200.00 is charged for this course.

Description: Course focuses on initial implementation of the APPMHN role: psychiatric assessment, diagnosis and intervention strategies including psychopharmacology. The practicum focuses on a life span approach with select clients in multicultural contexts who are at risk for or are experiencing dysfunction in the area of mental health.

NURS 646. Advanced Psychiatric Mental Health Nurse Practitioner II: Clinical 2 Units

Prerequisite(s): NURS 638, NURS 641, NURS 647, and NURS 649.

Corequisite(s): NURS 642.

Description: Course continues focus on implementation of APPMHN role. The practicum focuses on PMH interventions using a lifespan approach with individuals, families, and/or groups in diverse multi-cultural contexts who are experiencing co-morbid of complex psychiatric diagnoses. A variety of relevant intervention models will be utilized across the continuum of care.

NURS 647. Advanced Psychopathology Across the Lifespan 2 Units

Description: This course is a comprehensive study of essential developmental and psychopathology across the lifespan. Clinical theory, standards of practice, neurobiology, genomic, genetic, and environmental influences will be examined in multicultural contexts.

NURS 648. Advanced Clinical Assessment: Psych/Mental Health Nursing 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): Basic physical/health assessment skills are necessary; formal basic courses or continuing education courses in physical health assessment are acceptable.

Description: Builds upon basic assessment skills. The nurse's knowledge will be expanded to enable the development of the advanced practice role. Critical thinking and communication skills will be enriched by an accurate interpretation of a holistic approach to advanced clinical assessment of the adult.

NURS 649. Advanced Psychopharmacology Across the Lifespan 2 Units
Prerequisite(s): NURS 611 (or concurrent).

Description: This course is a comprehensive study of essential psychopharmacology used across the lifespan. Clinical theory, standards of practice, neurobiology, genomic, genetic, and environmental influences will be examined in multicultural contexts.

NURS 650. CNL Certification Prep 1 Unit
Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Prerequisite(s): Admission to MEPN program.

Description: NURS 650 is a one credit course designed to assist the student with preparation for the Clinical Nurse Leader (CNL) Certification Exam. The course will use a certification review text, along with group activities and case studies to assist with knowledge, recognition, and application between and among the core CNL Competencies, Roles and Values. The course will engage the student in a 360 evaluation and exploration of skills, knowledge, and accountability for CNL professional practice.

NURS 651. Evidence Based Nursing for Advanced Practice 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): NURS 652 and graduate-level Statistics (applied descriptive & inferential statistics); NURS 605 (or concurrent).

Description: Analysis of the value of research in advanced nursing practice. Focus is on the research theory and process, ethics, critique of the literature, and dissemination of findings.

NURS 653. Advanced Practice Roles 2 Units

Prerequisite(s): Admission to the Graduate Program in Nursing.

Description: This web-enhanced course focuses on the advanced practice roles of educator, consultant, researcher, leader, and expert practitioner. Scope of practice, credentialing, reimbursement and future issues are also addressed.

NURS 654. Informatics in Health Care 3 Units

Description: National Nursing Informatics (NI) competencies will be covered as well as core NI principles, knowledge acquisition, process, generation and dissemination. Students will be prepared at the level of informatics innovators.

NURS 655. Advanced Pathophysiology: Clinical Decision Making 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): Understanding of normal anatomy and physiology as well as basic pathophysiology.

Description: The focus of this foundational course is on understanding pathological processes common among individuals of all ages.

NURS 656. Advanced Clinical Assessment3 Units*Prerequisite(s): NURS 655.Fee: An additional $100.00 is charged for this course.Description: This course builds upon the basic critical thinking and psychomotor skills that professional nurses use in client care. Emphasis is on the physical, psychosocial, and cultural assessment of individuals and families.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)NURS 657. Health Promotion and Disease Prevention in Culturally Diverse and Vulnerable Populations*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerFee: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.Description: This course focuses on the analysis of the social and economic infrastructure that affects population health and disease prevention. Included is discussion of socioeconomic position, social capital/resources, access to healthcare, and work conditions that impact the health status of all populations including vulnerable urban and rural populations.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)NURS 658. Prerequisite(s): NURS 550 or NURS 605, NURS 611, NURS 651, NURS 655, and NURS 656; NURS 653 (or concurrent).
Description: This course provides an opportunity to synthesize cancer-specific epidemiology and pathophysiology concepts for critical thinking and decision-making by the nurse in an advanced practice role in caring for patients with cancer and their families across the cancer-care continuum. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- NURS 671. Evidence-Based Cancer Treatment 3 Units
Description: This course provides the student an opportunity to integrate knowledge and principles of cancer treatment, associated responses and symptom management, and the late-effects of cancer treatment. Emphasis is placed on current theory and research in examining evidence-based nursing interventions to improve outcomes for clients with cancer and their families. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- NURS 672. Advanced Oncology Clinical Practice I 6 Units
Prerequisite(s): NURS 605, NURS 611, NURS 651, NURS 655, and NURS 656; NURS 653 (or concurrent) and NURS 671 (or concurrent).
Fee: An additional $200.00 is charged for this course.
Description: This course entails didactic classroom instruction and a mentored clinical practicum, which will provide students an opportunity to synthesize and apply knowledge in the clinical management of complex physical, cognitive, and psychosocial responses to cancer and its treatment. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- NURS 673. Advanced Oncology Clinical Practice II 7 Units
Prerequisite(s): NURS 605, NURS 611, NURS 651, NURS 655, and NURS 656; NURS 653 (or concurrent), NURS 671 (or concurrent), and NURS 672 (or concurrent).
Description: This didactic and clinical course will provide the student with an opportunity to develop expertise in clinical judgment and consultation, facilitation of learning; intra-and inter-disciplinary collaboration; systems thinking and care-delivery models; and advocacy and moral agency. A case-study approach will be used to analyse and systematically evaluate the multiple roles of the advanced oncology nurse. - NURS 674. Adult-Gerontology Acute Care Nurse Practitioner I 4 Units
Prerequisite(s): NURS 611, NURS 655, and NURS 656.
Description: This course is an introduction to the acute care of adult-gerontology patients. Emphasis is placed on health promotion, health protection, problem identification, and management of complex health problems. The advanced practice nurse's role will be examined both as an individual practitioner and as a member of a collaborative interprofessional healthcare team. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- NURS 675. Advanced Clinical Practice: Adult-Gerontology Acute Care Practitioner, Clinical I 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): NURS 611, NURS 655, and NURS 656.
Fee: An additional $200.00 is charged for this course.
Description: This clinical course places an emphasis on the assessment, diagnosis and collaborative management of adult clients who are acutely/critically ill or experiencing an exacerbation of a chronic health problem. The clinical focus is on the Adult-Gerontology Acute Care Nurse Practitioner performing health assessments, interpretation of data and the implementation of a collaborative plan of care. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- NURS 676. Adult-Gerontology Acute Care Practitioner II 4 Units
Prerequisite(s): NURS 674.
Description: This course provides an in-depth analysis of adult acute-gerontology care. Emphasis is placed on differentiating signs and symptoms, formulating diagnoses, and developing culturally competent plans of care for acute complex health problems. The advanced practice nurse's role will be examined both as an individual practitioner and as a member of a collaborative interprofessional healthcare team. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

NURS 677. Advanced Clinical Practice: Adult-Gerontology Acute Care Practitioner, Clinical II 3 UnitsPrerequisite(s): NURS 675.

Description: This clinical course emphasises advanced assessment, advanced diagnosis, and collaborative management of adult clients who are acutely/critically ill or experiencing an exacerbation of a chronic health problem. The clinical focus is on the Adult-Gerontology Acute Care Nurse Practitioner in performing complex health assessments, interpretation of data, and the implementation of a collaborative plan of care. This course builds on the clinical experiences in NURS 675.

NURS 678. Advanced Leadership in Nursing Education 4 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer

Prerequisite(s): NURS 668; NURS 669 This course is designed to apply nursing education and leadership principles in academic and healthcare environments.

Description: Through didactic and clinical activities, students will participate in curriculum design and facilitation of learning, apply clinical expertise, and implement and evaluate strategies as an academic or clinical nurse educator and leader.

NURS 679. Finance and Resource Management for the Nurse Leader 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer

Description: This course prepares the nurse leaders to perform a variety of financial and resource management processes. Concepts such as operations, revenue, expense, budget development and management will be explored.

Description: Selected topics in nursing and health care. Semester topic will be indicated in Schedule of Courses. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

NURS 696. Independent Study Prerequisite(s): Departmental approval. Description: Provides opportunity for the student, under the supervision of a departmental faculty member, to develop objectives and protocol for independent work related to the practice of nursing. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	1-3 Units	NURS 712. Nursing Measurement Prerequisite(s): NURS 711; two doctoral-level statistics courses. Description: This course focuses on measurement of health-related phenomena. Measurement methods and instrument development are discussed. The psychometric and biometric properties of instruments used in research are evaluated. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
NURS 698. Research Project Prerequisite(s): NURS 651. Description: Provides the student an opportunity to develop, implement and present results of a research study of limited scope. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	2 Units	NURS 714. Analysis of Existing Data Prerequisite(s): NURS 712; two doctoral-level statistics courses or consent of the instructor. Description: This course focuses on the analysis, interpretation, and presentation of existing quantitative data. Students will develop skills in the application of a variety of quantitative analysis strategies using existing data. Students will identify hypotheses and/or research question, test them using statistical methods, and interpret the results. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
NURS 699. Thesis Prerequisite(s): NURS 651. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	1-6 Units	NURS 715. Designing Mixed Methods Research in Nursing and Healthcare Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Prerequisite(s): NURS 710 and NURS 711 or equivalent Foundations, designs, and applications of mixed methods research through study of relevant existing literature and proposal development in nursing and healthcare. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
NURS 700. Theoretical Basis of Nursing Prerequisite(s): Admission to PhD in Nursing program. Description: The course examines the theoretical basic of nursing science and facilitates the refinement of critical skills necessary for evaluating theories, synthesizing theoretical components into conceptual models or middle range theories, and developing testable hypotheses. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	NURS 720. Seminar in Advanced Leadership Description: Students will synthesize leadership concepts and theories with personal, professional, and organizational values within the changing political, ethical and sociocultural context in which leadership is practiced. NURS 731. Clinical Practicum for the MSN NP VI
1 Unit
Grading Basis: Pass/Fail

Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer

Fee 1: An additional $250.00 is charged for this course.

Fee 2: An additional $50.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This clinical experiences focuses on synthesis of theoretical, scientific, clinical knowledge and practice-based skills in the diagnosis and management of existing and potential health problems. Emphasis will be placed on the collaborative and leadership roles of the advanced practice nurse in health care delivery.

NURS 735. Socialization into the Role of the Nurse Scientist
1 Unit
Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Prerequisite(s): Admission to PhD Program or consent of instructor.

Description: Explore issues critical to socialization into the role of a nurse scientist.

NURS 736. Dissemination of Research Findings	1 Unit	NURS 743. Epidemiology	3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Admission to PhD Program or consent of instructor.		Fee: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.
Description: Examine approaches to successful dissemination of research findings.		Description: This course will focus on the theory and concepts of epidemiology and social determinants of health, and how they can be applied to the field of nursing. This course will apply and integrate the principles and tools of epidemiology to the decision-making in a health care environment. The student will identify the different study designs and how each of them can be applied to answer specific questions related to population-based health care. Emphasis will also be placed on the application of appropriate analytic methods for these different designs and questions.

NURS 737. Grant Proposal Development	1 Unit	NURS 744. Synthesis and Evaluation of Evidence in Practice	3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Admission to PhD Program or consent of instructor.		Prerequisite(s): NURS 607.
Description: Examine approaches to writing successful grant proposals.		Fee: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.
NURS 738. Responsible Conduct of Research	1 Unit	For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
Prerequisite(s): Admission to PhD Program or consent of instructor.		NURS 746. Program Development & Evaluation	3 Units
Description: Discuss essential elements for the responsible conduct of research.		Prerequisite(s): NURS 744.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)		Fee: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.
NURS 740. Advanced Pharmacology	3 Units	Description: This course explores techniques and strategies used for designing, implementing and evaluating programs. Students will assess population needs, develop appropriate goals, determine intervention strategies and resource needs, and implement evaluation mechanisms.
Fee: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.		For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
Description: Prerequisites or corequisites: NURS 741 This course is designed to provide advanced practice nursing students with a sound basis for the clinical application of pharmacology. Core drug knowledge, including pharmacotherapeutics, pharmacodynamics and pharmacokinetics are discussed. Emphasis is placed on learning drug classifications by clinical indication with an advanced understanding of potential drug interactions, side effects, and goals of pharmacologic therapy.		NURS 747. Finance Management	2 Units
NURS 741. Advanced Pathophysiology	4 Units	Description: This course focuses on the financial and business aspects of health care delivery. An emphasis is on the instruments and concepts used for analysis of practice initiatives and the development and implementation of effective plans to improve health outcomes.
Fee: An additional $200.00 is charged for this course.		For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
Description: This course provides the student an opportunity to synthesize pathophysiological concepts essential for critical thinking and clinical decision-making by the nurse in an advanced practice role. The focus of this foundational course is on understanding pathological processes common among individuals of all ages by using knowledge from genetics, the biophysical and psychosocial sciences, and current research.
NURS 742. Advanced Physical Assessment	3 Units
Fee 1: An additional $300.00 is charged for this course.
Fee 2: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.
Description: This advanced health assessment course will focus on both normal and normal variant finding in the population of patients from adolescence to geriatrics.

Description: In this course students will implement their DNP Project. The DNP Project will require the student to synthesize and apply the competencies learned throughout the curriculum to improve outcomes in health care systems.

Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

NURS 752. DNP Project III: Project Evaluation, Analysis and Dissemination3 Units*Grading Basis: Pass/FailPrerequisite(s): NURS 751.Fee 1: An additional $300.00 is charged for this course.Fee 2: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.

Description: In this course students will complete an evaluation and analysis of the DNP Project. Students will disseminate the completed DNP Project. The DNP Project will require the student to synthesize and apply the competencies learned throughout the curriculum to improve outcomes in health care systems.

Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

NURS 753. Adolescent Well Child Theory1 Unit*Fee: An additional $50.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This course is an introduction to advanced practice nursing. It provides a theoretical and practical base for the health care management of pediatric and adolescent clients. Emphasis is on the analysis and the implementation of the advanced practice nurse's role in the identification, prevention, and management of common pediatric health concerns.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

NURS 754. Clinical Reasoning in Advanced Practice Nursing1 Unit*Fee: An additional $50.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This course will prepare the advanced practice nurse to make clinical decisions using a variety of decision making modalities.

NURS 755. Diagnosis and Management of Adult Health in Primary Care 4 Units

Prerequisite(s): NURS 740; NURS 741; NURS 742.

Fee: An additional $200.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This course provides an in depth analysis of primary care of the adolescent and adult. Emphasis is on differentiating signs and symptoms, formulating diagnoses, and management of acute and chronic conditions commonly encountered in primary care. The advanced practice nurse's role will be examined both as an individual practitioner and as a member of a collaborative inter-professional healthcare team. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

NURS 756. Procedures & Diagnostics for Adult Health 1 Unit

Grading Basis: Pass/Fail

Prerequisite(s): NURS 742 and NURS 754.

Fee: An additional $50.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This course introduces the advanced psychomotor and diagnostic skills used in procedures that are commonly performed in the primary care setting. Emphasis is placed on indications, procedural techniques, and potential complications. Skills are taught in laboratories with a hands-on approach before application in the clinical setting. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

NURS 757. Diagnosis and Management of Women's Health in Primary Care 2 Units

Prerequisite(s): NURS 740; NURS 741; and NURS 742.

Fee: An additional $100.00 is charged for this course.

Description: The focus of this course is to the health and well-being of girls and women across the life-span. It emphasizes the application of concepts, theories, principles, and findings needed to provide care for common, well-defined obstetric and gynecologic health processes and problems of female adolescents and adults frequently encountered by nurse practitioners. The focus of this course is identifying between normal and abnormal, and in making differential diagnosis. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

NURS 758. Diagnosis and Management of Mental Health in Primary Care 2 Units

Prerequisite(s): NURS 740; NURS 741; NURS 742.

Fee: An additional $100.00 is charged for this course.

Description: The focus of this course is on the mental health and well-being of individuals across the life-span. It emphasizes the application of concepts, theories, principles, and research findings needed to provide care for common psychiatric conditions encountered in the primary care setting. The focus of this course is identification of psychiatric conditions as well as treatment strategies and the recognition of situations where a referral is needed.

NURS 759. Diagnosis and Management of the Older Adult in Primary Care 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): NURS 755 This course provides an in-depth analysis of primary care of the older adult.

Fee: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.

Description: Emphasis is on assessment, interpretations and management of age-related functional and cognitive changes. The advanced practice nurse's role will be examined both as an individual practitioner and as a member of a collaborative inter-professional healthcare team.

NURS 761. Pediatric & Adolescent Well Child Theory 2 Units

Fee: An additional $100.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This course is an introduction to advanced practice nursing. It provides a theoretical and practical base for the health care management of pediatric and adolescent clients. Emphasis is on the analysis and the implementation of the advanced practice nurses role in the identification, prevention, and management of common pediatric health concerns.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

NURS 762. Diagnosis & Management of Pediatrics in Primary Care 2 Units

Prerequisite(s): NURS 740; NURS 741; NURS 742.

Fee: An additional $100.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This course provides in depth analysis of primary care of the child. Emphasis is on differentiating signs and symptoms, formulating diagnoses, and management of acute and chronic conditions commonly encountered in primary care. The advanced practice nurses role will be examined both as an individual practitioner and as a member of a collaborative interprofessional healthcare team.

NURS 763. Advanced Neonatal Physiology & Pathophysiology I 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): NURS 785.

Fee: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This course provides a foundation in the cellular processes upon which neonatal pathophysiology occurs. Synthesis of topics in human embryology is the foundation for understanding specific neonatal pathophysiologic processes. Common pathophysiologic neonatal disease and how they deviate from normal physiology are presented using a systems approach.

NURS 764. Neonatal Diagnostic Reasoning I1 Unit*Prerequisite(s): NURS 785.Fee: An additional $50.00 is charged for this course.

Description: An advanced health assessment class emphasizing the processes and techniques of diagnostic reasoning with critically-ill neonates. Students will evaluate presenting clinical signs in the neonate requiring intensive care, determine the differential diagnosis, identify appropriate diagnostic tests and exams, and determine the appropriate diagnosis and treatment in neonates with a variety of problems.

NURS 765. Advance Neonatal Physiology & Pathophysiology II 3 Units*Prerequisite(s): NURS 763.Fee: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This course is the second of two courses that provides the student with didactic preparation in the concepts of advanced neonatal pathophysiology based upon normal neonatal physiology. Synthesis of topics in human embryology, genetics, and advanced neonatal pathophysiology and clinical management provides the foundation for understanding complex neonatal pathophysiologic processes. Complex pathophysiologic neonatal diseases and how they deviate from normal physiology are presented using a systems approach. Integrated into the course is the diagnostic reasoning needed to manage the care of a critically ill neonate. Topics addressed in this course include those recommended to prepare the student for national certification as a neonatal nurse practitioner.

NURS 766. Neonatal Diagnostic Reasoning II1 Unit*Prerequisite(s): NURS 765.Fee: An additional $50.00 is charged for this course.

Description: An advanced health assessment class emphasizing the processes and techniques of diagnostic reasoning with critically-ill neonates with diagnoses of advanced complexity and builds upon skills learned and applied Neonatal DDX I. Students will evaluate presenting clinical signs in the neonate requiring intensive care, determine the differential diagnosis, identify appropriate diagnostic tests and exams, and determine the appropriate diagnosis and treatment in neonates with a variety of problems.

NURS 767. Neonatal Residency I3 Units*Grading Basis: Pass/FailPrerequisite(s): NURS 765.Fee 1: An additional $250.00 is charged for this course.Fee 2: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.Fee 3: An additional $300.00 is charged for this course.

Description: The purpose of the NNP Residency is to provide neonatal nurse practitioner students with learning opportunities that facilitate continued development in the Neonatal Nurse Practitioner role. Students will work with preceptors in a Level III-IV NICUs to advance the knowledge and skills acquired in previous coursework. This course provides the student with an immersion into the Neonatal Nurse Practitioner (NNP) role that allows development of increased skill and independence in decision-making as a NNP. Students are expected to identify, interpret, and apply current evidence to their practice and clinical decision-making in the care of critically ill infants.

Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

NURS 768. Neonatal Residency II3 Units*Grading Basis: Pass/FailPrerequisite(s): NURS 767.Fee 1: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.Fee 2: An additional $300.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This is the second clinical residency course for the NNP students. The purpose of the NNP Residency is to provide students with learning opportunities that facilitate continued development in the Neonatal Nurse Practitioner role. Students will work with preceptors in a Level III-IV NICUs to advance the knowledge and skills acquired in previous coursework. This course provides the student with an immersion into the Neonatal Nurse Practitioner (NNP) role that allows advance their skills and independence in decision-making as a NNP working with infants with increasingly complex medical problems. Students are expected to identify, interpret, and apply current evidence to their practice and clinical decision-making in the care of critically ill infants.

Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

NURS 769. Neonatal Residency III

Grading Basis: Pass/Fail

Prerequisite(s): NURS 768.

Fee 1: An additional $300.00 is charged for this course.

Fee 2: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This is the third and final clinical residency course for NNP students. The purpose of the NNP Residency is to provide students with learning opportunities that facilitate continued development in the Neonatal Nurse Practitioner role. Students will work with preceptors in a Level III-IV NICUs to apply the knowledge and skills acquired in previous residency semesters and coursework. This course provides the student with an immersion into the Neonatal Nurse Practitioner (NNP) role that allows them to advance their skills and independence in decision-making as a NNP working with infants with increasingly complex medical problems. Students are expected to identify, interpret, and apply current evidence to their practice and clinical decision-making in the care of critically ill infants.

Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

NURS 770. Adv. Psychiatric Assessment of Psychopathology and Clinical Interviewing Across the Lifespan

2 Units

Prerequisite(s): NURS 742.

Fee: An additional $100.00 is charged for this course.

Description: The focus of this course is the use of clinical interviewing techniques and psychiatric assessment in diagnosing psychopathology in psychiatric mental health patients across the lifespan. The course builds upon the undergraduate psychiatric assessment course as well as the advanced physical assessment course. Further diagnostic reasoning skills will be developed based on a comprehensive study of essential developmental psychopathology across the lifespan. Students will apply advanced nursing knowledge of neurobiology, genetics, and environmental factors that contribute to the development of psychopathology. Normal and abnormal psychological development of the individual and how illness manifests as psychopathological given the right set of variables or circumstances are reviewed. Psychopathologies are addressed with an understanding the complexity of clinical presentation and refining the student's ability to assess patients in a multicultural context.

3 Units

NURS 771. Foundations of Individual and Group Psychotherapy for the Adv. Practice Psychiatric Mental Health NP

2 Units

Prerequisite(s): NURS 740 and NURS 741.

Fee: An additional $100.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This course will introduce the role of psychotherapist and foundations of psychotherapy essential for safe and effective practice for the psychiatric-mental health nurse practitioner (PMHNP). Students will be able to select and provide appropriate psychotherapeutic modalities in the delivery of culturally relevant care to persons with psychiatric-mental health concerns. We will explore evidence-based individual and group psychotherapies through relevant literature, professional guidelines, and current best practices.

NURS 772. Psychopharmacology

2 Units

Prerequisite(s): NURS 740 and NURS 741.

Fee: An additional $100.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This course is a comprehensive study of essential psychopharmacology used across the lifespan. Clinical theory, standards of practice, neurobiology, genomic, generic, and environmental influences will be examined in multicultural contexts.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

NURS 773. Diagnosis and Management of Children and Adolescents in Adv. Psychiatric-Mental Health Nursing

3 Units

Prerequisite(s): NURS 770, NURS 771, NURS 772.

Fee: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This course will introduce the role and foundations essential to safe, effective, and culturally relevant practice for the psychiatric-mental health nurse practitioner (PMHNP) working with children, adolescents, and their families within different care settings. Developmental theories and mental and developmental disorders observed in the pediatric population will be discussed. Students will learn evidence-based individual and group psychotherapies and safe and effective medication management strategies as we explore relevant literature, professional guidelines, and current best practices. The course will employ online and active learning tools such as Perusall, Blackboard Discussion Board, podcasts, brief lectures, as well as in-person case studies and role-plays.

NURS 777. The Adult/Gerontology Acute Care NP Role 1 UnitTerm Typically Offered: Spring OnlyFee: An additional $50.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This course focuses on the role of the Adult/Gerontology nurse practitioner in the Acute Care setting as a leader and member of an inter-professional team and expert practitioner. Historical development of the nurse practitioner role, current scope of practice regulations, inter-professional communication, and clinical privileges are addressed.

NURS 778. DNP Project Completion 1-3 UnitsGrading Basis: Pass/FailTerm Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerFee 1: An additional $300.00 is charged for this course.Fee 2: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.

Description: In this course students will continue to implement and evaluate their capstone project. The capstone project will require the student to synthesize and apply the competencies learned throughout the curriculum to improve outcomes in health care systems. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

NURS 779. Diagnosis & Management in Acute Care I 5 UnitsPrerequisite(s): NURS 740; NURS 741; NURS 742.Fee: An additional $250.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This course provides an in-depth analysis of adult-gerontology acute care in the areas of heart, lungs, bleeding disorders and x-ray interpretation. Emphasis is placed on differentiate signs and symptoms, formulating diagnoses, and developing culturally competent plans of care in adolescents or adults with acute, complex and/or critical illnesses or acute exacerbation of chronic or comorbid conditions. The advanced practice nurse's role will be examined both as an individual practitioner and as a member of a collaborative healthcare team. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

NURS 780. Procedures and Diagnostics for the Acute Care NP 2 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): NURS 740 and NURS 741.Fee: An additional $100.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This course introduces the advanced psychomotor and diagnostic skills used to procedures that are commonly performed in the acute care setting. Emphasis is placed on clinical indications, procedural techniques, and potential complications. Skills are taught in laboratories with a hands-on approach before application in the clinical setting.

NURS 790. Special Topics: Research, Theory, Policy, Leadership or Educational Concepts for Doctoral Students 1-6 Units

Prerequisite(s): Admitted to the Doctoral Program; Completion of all coursework at the master's degree level.

Description: This course is an opportunity for Doctoral Students to focus study in an area of interest germane to their dissertation work.

NURS 791. Applied Statistics for Evidence Based Practice 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall, Summer

Fee: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.

Description: The focus of this course is on the application of quantitative analysis strategies and statistical interpretation of existing evidence for quality improvement. Descriptive and inferential statistics including commonly used parametric and non-parametric tests will be covered. Students will also gain experience presenting findings via narrative, tabular, and oral formats.

NURS 792. Pharmacology for the Acute Care APRN 1 Unit

Term Typically Offered: Summer Only

Prerequisite(s): NURS 740; NURS 741.

Description: This course is designed to introduce the Advanced Practice Registered Nurse (APRN) acute care nurse practitioner student to the application of pharmacologic principles to special populations and specialized therapeutic areas.

NURS 793. State of Science Review 1-3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer

Prerequisite(s): All required PhD course work prior to qualifying exams.

Description: Course provides the opportunity for the PhD student to develop a State-of-Science review of the literature of research relevant to nursing science in the student's focused area for dissertation under the supervision of the PhD students' Dissertation Chair.

NURS 794. The Psychiatric Mental Health Nurse Practitioner Role 2 Units

Term Typically Offered: Summer Only

Description: This course will introduce the role and foundations essential to safe, effective, and culturally relevant practice for the psychiatric-mental health nurse practitioner (PMHNP) working with children, adolescents, and their families within different care settings. Developmental theories and mental and developmental disorders observed in the pediatric population will be reviewed. Evidence-based individual and group psychotherapies and safe and effective medication management strategies as we explore relevant literature, professional guidelines, and current best practices. Online and active learning tools such as Perusall, Blackboard Discussion Board, podcasts, brief lectures, as well as in-person case studies and role-plays will be used.

NURS 800. Pathophysiology for Pediatric Acute Care 1 Unit

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Fee: An additional $50.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This course is designed to build on the general principles of pathophysiology. Physiologic manifestations commonly occurring in the acutely ill pediatric population will be discussed.

NURS 801. Pharmacology for Pediatric Acute Care 1 Unit

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Fee: An additional $50.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This course is designed to build on the general principles of advanced pharmacology by preparing the Advanced Practice Registered Nurse (APRN) student to apply pharmacologic principles to the pediatric acute care population.

NURS 802. Procedures for Pediatric Acute Care 1 Unit

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Fee: An additional $50.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This course introduces the principles and psychomotor skills necessary to perform various procedures and diagnostic tests that are common in the pediatric acute care setting. Emphasis is placed on indications, procedural techniques, and potential complications. Skills will be taught via simulation-based technology.

NURS 803. Diagnosis and Management for Pediatric Acute Care I: Special Needs in Chronic Illness 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Fee: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This course provides an in-depth analysis of care of the pediatric patient with acute exacerbations of chronic illnesses. Emphasis is placed on differentiating signs and symptoms, formulating diagnoses, and developing culturally competent plans of care in infants thru adolescents. The advanced practice nurse's role will be examined both as an individual practitioner and as a member for a collaborative healthcare team.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

NURS 804. Diagnosis and Management for Pediatric Acute Care II: Acute Illness 2 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Fee: An additional $100.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This course provides an in-depth analysis of the pediatric patient with acute medical conditions. Emphasis is placed on differentiating signs and symptoms, formulating diagnoses, and developing culturally competent plans of care in infants thru adolescents. The advanced practice nurse's role will be examined both as an individual practitioner and as a member for a collaborative healthcare team. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

NURS 805. Diagnosis and Management for Pediatric Acute Care III: Critical Illness 3 Units

Fee: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This course provides an in-depth analysis of the pediatric patient who is critically ill. Emphasis is placed on differentiating signs and symptoms, formulating diagnoses, and patient stabilization while developing culturally competent plans of care in infants thru adolescents. The advanced practice nurse's role will be examined both as an individual practitioner and as a member for a collaborative healthcare team. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

NURS 806. The Pediatric Acute Care Nurse Practitioner Role 1 Unit

Fee: An additional $50.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This course focuses on the role of the Pediatric nurse practitioner in the Acute Care setting as a leader and member of an inter-professional team and expert practitioner. Historical development of the nurse practitioner role, current scope of practice regulations, inter-professional communication, and clinical privileges are addressed. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

NURS 807. The Professional Role of the Advanced Practice Nurse 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring

Fee: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.

Description: The role and critical issues that define Advanced Practice Nursing will be examined. Topics related to scope of practice, interprofessional collaboration, leadership and health policy will be explored. Guidelines and standards for legal, ethical, and financial issues that are often confronted in APRN practice will be analyzed. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

NURS 809. Advanced Anatomy and Physiology for Anesthesia I 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Fee: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.

Description: The first of two courses designed to provide the Nurse Anesthesia Resident with an in-depth study of the structure and function of the human body, through lecture, small group laboratory, and independent study, using Digital Human Software, cadavers, prosections, radiograph images, and static models. All organ systems will be covered, with a focus on those most relevant to the field of nurse anesthesia. Special emphasis will be given to cell structure and function, membrane physiology, microcirculation, hematology, renal, and acid base balance. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

NURS 810. Advanced Anatomy & Physiology for Anesthesia II 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Prerequisite(s): NURS 809 The second of two courses designed to provide the Nurse Anesthesia Resident with an in-depth study of the structure and function of the human body, through lecture, small group laboratory, and independent study, using Digital Human Software, cadavers, prosections, radiograph images, and static models.

Fee: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.

Description: All organ systems will be covered, with a focus on those most relevant to the field of nurse anesthesia. Special emphasis will be given to the cardiovascular, respiratory, endocrine, gastrointestinal, central, and autonomic nervous systems, as well as the physiology of pain.

NURS 811. Chemistry and Physics for Anesthesia 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Prerequisite(s): Admission to Nurse Anesthesia Program This course examines fundamental principles of chemistry, biochemistry, and physics applying to anesthesia practice and pharmacological agents.

Fee: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.

Description: The scientific laws predicting behaviors of solids, liquids, gases, and vapors are emphasized. Other topics include anesthesia delivery systems, anesthetic agents, flammability, CO₂ absorption, electricity, radiation, and radioactivity.

NURS 812. Advanced Pharmacology for Anesthesia 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Fee: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.

Description: The focus of this course is on drugs used in clinical anesthesia practice. Major content will include the pharmacokinetics and pharmacodynamics of general anesthetic agents, analgesics, opioids, muscle relaxants, local anesthetics and adjunctive agents used in anesthesia. The course builds upon knowledge gained in previous courses, specifically Chemistry and Physics for Anesthesia, and Advanced Pharmacology I and incorporates gas laws and principles of flow in delivering inhalation anesthetic agents. Pharmacogenomics and the importance of cultural context will be emphasized when considering the use of various pharmacologic therapies in the treatment of individual patients.

NURS 813. Business & Leadership in the Nurse Anesthesia Role 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Summer OnlyFee: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This course will review the foundations and historical context of the Doctor of Nurse Anesthesia Practice specialization. The underpinnings of the advanced nursing practice clinical doctorate and the nurse anesthesia specialty will be reviewed through exploration of the AACN DNP Essentials, AANA professional organization, and the COA Standards for Accreditation of Nurse Anesthesia Programs: Practice Doctorate. The professional role of the CRNA in independent practice and as a leader in the profession will be highlighted. Fundamental tools and concepts used in the financial and business management within nurse anesthesia practice will be reviewed; to include an overview of informatics and the role it plays in the delivery of evidence-based care, and technological concepts related to data acquisition and analysis, data security, and telehealth. These concepts will be reviewed within the context of delivering optimal patient care and enhancing the Nurse Anesthesia Resident's ability to.

NURS 814. Intro to Anesthesia 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Fall Only

Prerequisite(s): Admission to Nurse Anesthesia Program - NURSDNPAN
This course introduces the Nurse Anesthesia Resident to the OR suite and the role of the nurse anesthetist.

Fee: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.

Description: Content focuses on the professional role of the anesthetist in the operating suite including the ethics of consent; sterile technique; preoperative preparation; anesthesia equipment, instrumentation, and technology; airway equipment; fluid/blood monitoring and replacement equipment; interpretation of data; positioning; patient safety; induction of general anesthesia; and documentation. Patient simulation labs will be utilized for developing psychomotor skills.

NURS 815. Foundational Principles of Anesthesia I 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Spring Only

Prerequisite(s): NURS 814 The first of two foundational principles courses that focuses on the fundamental principles of anesthesia management and practice.

Fee: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.

Description: AANA Standards for Nurse Anesthesia Practice and theory are synthesized emphasizing culturally competent individualized care across the life span. This course will provide Nurse Anesthesia Residents with knowledge regarding best practices and the safe use of anesthesia delivery systems and related equipment. Anesthetic states from sedation to general anesthesia, including regional anesthesia, and the standards of practice, including monitoring and the safe care of the patient along this continuum will be discussed. Critical thinking, patient safety principles, communication, and the professional role will be threaded throughout.

NURS 816. Foundational Principles of Anesthesia II 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Summer Only

Prerequisite(s): NURS 815 The second of two foundational principles courses that focuses on the beginning application of anesthesia management and practice.

Fee: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.

Description: The AANA Standards for Nurse Anesthesia Practice and theory are synthesized emphasizing culturally competent individualized anesthesia care across the life span. This course will provide Nurse Anesthesia Residents with knowledge related to the perianesthesia continuum including post anesthesia care and pain management. Critical thinking, patient safety principles, communication, and the professional role in practice environment will be threaded throughout.

NURS 817. Advanced Principles and Practice of Anesthesia I 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): NURS 816.Fee: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.

Description: The first of three advanced principles of anesthesia courses which builds on prior Foundational Principles of Anesthesia I & II. The AANA Standards for Nurse Anesthesia Practice and theory are synthesized with an emphasis on providing culturally competent individualized anesthesia care across the life span. This course will provide knowledge for Nurse Anesthesia Residents related to providing anesthesia care across the perianesthesia continuum to obstetrical, neonate, and pediatric populations with and without coexisting diseases. The course will also examine anesthetic and nursing considerations for patients with pathophysiologic disruptions requiring surgical interventions in orthopedic, endocrine, trauma, burn, and cancer populations. Critical thinking, patient safety principles, communication, and the professional role will be threaded throughout.

NURS 818. Advanced Principles and Practice of Anesthesia II 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): NURS 817.Fee: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.

Description: The second of three advanced principles of anesthesia courses which builds on prior Foundational Principles of Anesthesia I & II. AANA Standards for Nurse Anesthesia Practice and theory are synthesized with an emphasis on providing culturally competent individualized anesthesia care across the life span. This course will provide Nurse Anesthesia Residents with the knowledge to provide anesthesia care across the perianesthesia continuum to a diverse population with and without coexisting diseases undergoing surgical/medical procedures related to the following organ systems: cardiovascular, respiratory, neurosurgical, hepatic, gastrointestinal, and renal. The course will also examine anesthetic and nursing considerations for patients with hematologic and immune disruptions requiring surgical interventions. Critical thinking, patient safety principles, communication, and the professional role will be threaded throughout.

NURS 819. Advanced Principles and Practice of Anesthesia III 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): NURS 818.Fee: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.

Description: The third of three advanced principles of anesthesia courses which builds on prior Foundational Principles of Anesthesia I & II. AANA Standards for Nurse Anesthesia Practice and theory are synthesized with an emphasis on providing culturally competent individualized anesthesia care across the life span. This course will provide Nurse Anesthesia Residents with the knowledge to provide anesthesia care across the perianesthesia continuum to a diverse population with and without coexisting diseases undergoing specialty surgical procedures including pain control in non-operating room settings. Procedures and techniques related to interventional radiology will be reviewed. Information regarding the treatment of pain syndromes including acute and chronic pain management will be provided. The professional role of the CRNA in preventing and recognizing signs and symptoms of chemical abuse as well as referral strategies for at-risk patients will also be examined. Critical thinking, patient safe

NURS 821. Clinical Practicum for NA I 2 UnitsGrading Basis: Pass/FailTerm Typically Offered: Summer OnlyFee 1: An additional $500.00 is charged for this course.Fee 2: An additional $100.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This is the first of seven clinical practicum courses designed to integrate evidence-based practice and clinical skills into the art and science of anesthesia. Nurse Anesthesia Residents (NARs) will demonstrate progressive acquisition of cognitive, affective, and psychomotor knowledge and skills relevant to the advanced practice role of the nurse anesthetist. The practicum follows AANA Standards for Nurse Anesthesia Practice affording the NAR the opportunity to provide anesthesia care to the family/individual across lifespan for a variety of surgical/medical procedures. Clinical integration conferences are included weekly. Expected NAR performance is at the Novice Level.

NURS 822. Clinical Practicum for NA II 4 UnitsGrading Basis: Pass/FailTerm Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): NURS 821.Fee 1: An additional $1000.00 is charged for this course.Fee 2: An additional $200.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This is the second of seven clinical practicum courses designed to integrate evidence-based practice and clinical skills into the art and science of anesthesia. The practicum is a continuation of Clinical Practicum I with Nurse Anesthesia Residents (NARs) demonstrating progressive acquisition of cognitive, affective, and psychomotor knowledge and skills relevant to the advanced practice role of the nurse anesthetist. The practicum follows AANA Standards for Nurse Anesthesia Practice affording the NAR the opportunity to provide anesthesia care to the family/individual across lifespan for a variety of surgical/medical procedures. Clinical integration conferences are included weekly. Expected NAR performance is at the Advanced Beginner Level.

NURS 823. Clinical Practicum for NA III 5 UnitsGrading Basis: Pass/FailTerm Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): NURS 822.Fee 1: An additional $250.00 is charged for this course.Fee 2: An additional $1250.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This is the third of seven clinical practicum courses designed to integrate evidence-based practice and clinical skills into the art and science of anesthesia. The practicum is a continuation of Clinical Practicum II with Nurse Anesthesia Resident (NARs) demonstrating progressive acquisition of cognitive, affective, and psychomotor knowledge and skills relevant to the advanced practice role of the nurse anesthetist. The practicum follows AANA Standards for Nurse Anesthesia Practice affording the NAR the opportunity to provide anesthesia care to the family/individual across lifespan for a variety of surgical/medical procedures. NURS 824. Clinical Practicum for NA IV 5 UnitsGrading Basis: Pass/FailTerm Typically Offered: Summer OnlyPrerequisite(s): NURS 823.Fee 1: An additional $1250.00 is charged for this course.Fee 2: An additional $250.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This is the fourth of seven clinical practicum courses designed to integrate evidence-based practice and clinical skills into the art and science of anesthesia. The practicum is a continuation of Clinical Practicum III with Nurse Anesthesia Residents (NARs) demonstrating progressive acquisition of cognitive, affective, and psychomotor knowledge and skills relevant to the advanced practice role of the nurse anesthetist. The practicum follows AANA Standards for Nurse Anesthesia Practice affording the NAR the opportunity to provide anesthesia care to family/individual across lifespan for a variety of surgical/medical procedures. Clinical integration conferences are included weekly. Expected NAR performance is at the Advanced Competent Level.

NURS 825. Clinical Practicum for NA V 6 UnitsGrading Basis: Pass/FailTerm Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): NURS 824.Fee 1: An additional $1500.00 is charged for this course.Fee 2: An additional $300.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This is the fifth of seven clinical practicum courses designed to integrate evidence-based practice and clinical skills into the art and science of anesthesia. The practicum is a continuation of Clinical Practicum IV with Nurse Anesthesia Residents (NARs) demonstrating progressive acquisition of cognitive, affective, and psychomotor knowledge and skills relevant to the advanced practice role of the nurse anesthetist. The practicum follows AANA Standards for Nurse Anesthesia Practice affording the NAR the opportunity to provide anesthesia care to family/individual across lifespan for a variety of surgical/medical procedures. Clinical integration conferences are included weekly. Expected NAR performance is at the Competent Level.

NURS 826. Clinical Practicum for NA VI5 Units*Grading Basis: Pass/FailTerm Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): NURS 825.Fee 1: An additional $1250.00 is charged for this course.Fee 2: An additional $250.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This is the sixth of seven clinical practicum courses designed to integrate evidence-based practice and clinical skills into the art and science of anesthesia. The practicum is a continuation of Clinical Practicum V with Nurse Anesthesia Residents (NARs) demonstrating progressive acquisition of cognitive, affective, and psychomotor knowledge and skills relevant to the advanced practice role of the nurse anesthetist. The practicum follows AANA Standards for Nurse Anesthesia Practice affording the NAR the opportunity to provide anesthesia care to family/individual across lifespan for a variety of surgical/medical procedures. Clinical integration conferences are included weekly. Expected NAR performance is at the Proficient Level. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

NURS 827. Clinical Practicum for NA VII5 Units*Grading Basis: Pass/FailTerm Typically Offered: Summer OnlyPrerequisite(s): NURS 826.Fee 1: An additional $250.00 is charged for this course.Fee 2: An additional $1250.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This is the last of seven clinical practicum courses designed to integrate evidence-based practice and clinical skills into the art and science of anesthesia. The practicum is a continuation of Clinical Practicum VI with Nurse Anesthesia Residents (NARs) demonstrating progressive acquisition of cognitive, affective, and psychomotor knowledge and skills relevant to the advanced practice role of the nurse anesthetist. The practicum follows AANA Standards for Nurse Anesthesia Practice affording the NAR the opportunity to provide anesthesia care to family/individual across lifespan for a variety of surgical/medical procedures. Clinical integration conferences are included weekly. Expected NAR performance is at the Proficient Level. NURS 828. Nurse Anesthesia Seminar I2 Units*Grading Basis: Pass/FailTerm Typically Offered: Summer OnlyFee: An additional $100.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This first of three seminar courses facilitates the start of a structured, comprehensive review of the body of knowledge necessary to enter Nurse Anesthesia practice. This course will identify and engage resources available to the Nurse Anesthesia Resident in preparation for the NBCRNA National Certification Examination. This seminar is designed to foster life-long teaching and learning for the professional Nurse Anesthetist and promote the CRNA role and practice to the public. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

NURS 829. Nurse Anesthesia Seminar II1 Unit*Grading Basis: Pass/FailTerm Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): NURS 828.Fee: An additional $50.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This second of three seminar courses facilitates the start of a structured, comprehensive review of the body of knowledge necessary to enter Nurse Anesthesia practice. This course will also provide continued preparation for the NBCRNA National Certification Examination. This seminar is designed to foster application of current evidence-based literature in clinical practice, encouraging discussion and critical review of clinical experiences. The professional role of the CRNA and self-care including wellness and substance abuse risk and disorders will be reviewed.

NURS 830. Nurse Anesthesia Seminar III2 Units*Grading Basis: Pass/FailTerm Typically Offered: Summer OnlyPrerequisite(s): NURS 829.Fee: An additional $100.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This final of three seminar courses allows Nurse Anesthesia Resident to continue with a structured, comprehensive review of the body of knowledge necessary to enter Nurse Anesthesia practice. This review will also serve as final preparation for the NBCRNA National Certification Examination. This seminar is designed to foster application of current evidence-based literature in clinical practice, encouraging discussion and critical review of clinical experiences.

NURS 840. Clinical Seminar I1 Unit*Grading Basis: Pass/FailTerm Typically Offered: Fall, SpringFee: An additional $50.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This co-requisite course to clinical will enable students to meet competencies related to patient centered clinical care and reflect on unique aspects of the clinical experience. Skills regarding inter-professional teamwork, communication, ethical care, and application of technology will be applied to care provided in the clinical setting. Reflection of the application of these skills will allow for appraisal and growth of the student as a professional nurse practitioner. The importance of self-care for the NP professional will be highlighted throughout.

Note: Students must be enrolled in a clinical course at the same time as enrolling in a clinical seminar course.

NURS 841. Clinical Seminar II1 Unit*Grading Basis: Pass/FailTerm Typically Offered: Spring OnlyFee: An additional $50.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This co-requisite course to clinical will enable students to meet competencies related to patient centered clinical care and reflect on unique aspects of the clinical experience. An emphasis will be placed on recognizing preconceptions in the delivery of care. Students will analyze factors such as cost, access, patient motivation, as well as social and cultural influences when developing a patient-centered plan of care. Reflection on fiduciary and social factors in the delivery of care will allow for appraisal and growth of the student as a professional nurse practitioner. The importance of self-care for the NP professional will be highlighted throughout.

Note: Students must be enrolled in a clinical course to be enrolled in a clinical seminar course.

NURS 842. Clinical Practicum in the Advanced Practice Role1 Unit*Grading Basis: Pass/FailTerm Typically Offered: Spring OnlyFee: An additional $50.00 is charged for this course.

Description: The purpose of this course is to provide clinical experiences focused on formation and cultivation of a personal NP professional identity, including accountability in leadership and practice, collaborative disposition, service to the profession and a commitment to social policy and justice which reflects nursing's characteristics and values. Through activities and self-reflection students will foster individual growth in the nurse practitioner professional role contributing to lifelong learning and a commitment to personal growth and to the profession of advanced practice nursing.

Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

NURS 843. Legal and Professional Topics in the APRN Role3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyFee: An additional $150.00 is charged for this course.

Description: This course will examine critical issues that define the APRNs scope of practice and nurse practitioner competencies. Regulatory processes that guide APRN practice at the national and state level will be discussed. Use of the electronic medical records, along with the ethical and legal implications of access, security, and interprofessional communication of patient data will be examined. Ethical issues in the delivery of healthcare including professional ethical standards, the impact of social determinates of health on equitable distribution of care, and barriers to healthcare delivery will also be examined.

NURS 844. Advanced Practice Care: Birth to 2 years of age2 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Description: This course focuses on the care of the neonate and infants to 2 years of age. Emphasis is placed on the identification of normal and abnormal growth and development milestones, in both the primary and acute care settings. This course is designed to develop critical thinking skills as they relate to health promotion, immunizations, preventative care, routine developmental and physiologic screenings, and safety issues. Additionally, the care of high-risk-infants with chronic disorders will be addressed, along with common primary care disorders encountered in this age group.

NURS 845. Introduction to the DNP Project and Data Management1 Unit*Grading Basis: Pass/FailTerm Typically Offered: Summer Only

Description: This course serves as an introduction to the Doctor of Nursing Practice project. Students will examine the process of selecting a site, identifying a problem, and classifying stakeholders. Steps for critically evaluating literature for evidence-based practice changes and synthesizing evidence will as be reviewed. Other aspects of project implementation such as data management, barriers to change, ethical considerations and approval processes will also be discussed.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

NURS 890. Dissertation for the PhD in Nursing3-6 Units*Grading Basis: Pass/FailTerm Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer

Prerequisite(s): Successful completion of the Qualifying Examination
This structured dissertation course allows students time and consistent communication with their Chair and committee members to ensure the student will progress through the steps of the dissertation process in a timely manner.

Description: Following the University of Louisville School of Nursing PhD student handbook and under the guidance of dissertation chair and committee members, PhD students apply culminating knowledge and skills based on sound ethical, theoretical, and methodological principles to conduct independent, high quality, and in-depth research to generate new knowledge in their specialty area.

Oral Biology (OBIO)

Subject-area course lists indicate courses currently active for offering at the University of Louisville. Not all courses are scheduled in any given academic term. For class offerings in a specific semester, refer to the Schedule of Classes (https://csprd.louisville.edu/psp/ps_class/EMPLOYEE/PSFT_CS/c/COMMUNITY_ACCESS.CLASS_SEARCH.x/?state=62dab551a0d600a5e8237359c50704e59007&duo_code=sjUx20STj21bIWVEU)

500-level courses generally are included in both the undergraduate- and graduate-level course listings; however, specific course/section offerings may vary between semesters. Students are responsible for ensuring that they enroll in courses that are applicable to their particular academic programs.

Course Fees

Some courses may carry fees beyond the standard tuition costs to cover additional support or materials. Program-, subject- and course-specific fee information can be found on the Office of the Bursar website (<https://louisville.edu/bursar/tuitionfee/university-fees/>).

OBIO 611. Craniofacial Osteology 1-3 Units

Grading Basis: Pass/Fail

Term Typically Offered: Not Offered

Prerequisite(s): OPGD 801, OPGD 805, RARD 805 or equivalents.

Description: Explores the hard tissue interrelationships of the craniofacial complex. Includes the mechanical properties, origins and maturation of facial bones. Complements the cephalometric course; designed to link clinical applications to anatomic locations.

OBIO 612. Craniomaxillofacial Diagnostic Imaging 2-4 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Prerequisite(s): Admission to the Graduate School for students in Oral Biology, a DMS/DDS degree or its foreign equivalent, or a MD/DO degree or its foreign equivalent.

Description: Principles of safety, quality assurance, selection criteria and interpretation for current diagnostic imaging modalities of interest to the healthcare provider treating the craniomaxillofacial complex.

Note: 2 lecture, 2-4 lab.

OBIO 613. The Diagnosis & Treatment of Temporomandibular Disorders 1 Unit

Grading Basis: Pass/Fail

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Prerequisite(s): DMD or DSD DDS degree or instructor approval.

Description: Will present the basic concepts of Temporomandibular Disorders. Emphasis is on Etiology, Examination, Recognition, Diagnosis and Treatment of Facial Pain/TMJ Disorders and Occlusal Abnormalities.

OBIO 614. Advanced Oral Diagnosis and Oral Medicine 1 Unit

Grading Basis: Pass/Fail

Term Typically Offered: Not Offered

Prerequisite(s): Admission to the MS Oral Biology program, a DDS or DMD degree or its foreign equivalent, or consent of the instructor.

Description: Will present advanced topics on diagnostic methods and therapy relative to oral-maxillofacial and systematic diseases, and the inter-relationships between oral and systemic disease.

OBIO 615. Advanced Clinical Pharmacology 1 Unit

Grading Basis: Pass/Fail

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Prerequisite(s): One of the following: Admission to the MS Oral Biology program; a DDS or DMD degree or its foreign equivalent; consent of the instructor.

Description: To present advanced topics in clinical pharmacology with specific emphasis on antibiotics, analgesics, local anesthetics, anxiolytic, antifungal and antiviral drugs.

OBIO 616. Overview of Medical Genetics in Oro-Facial Disease 1.5 Units

Grading Basis: Pass/Fail

Term Typically Offered: Not Offered

Prerequisite(s): Admission to the MS Oral Biology program, a DDS, DMD or MD degree or its foreign equivalent, or consent of the instructor.

Description: The student will study the medical genetic influence on development and growth as well as dysmorphology and disease, of the human body. Risk factors, probabilities and clinical outcomes are emphasized.

OBIO 617. Advanced Oral Pathology 1 Unit

Grading Basis: Pass/Fail

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Prerequisite(s): Admission to the MS Oral Biology program, a DDS, DMD, or MD degree or its foreign equivalent, or consent of the instructor.

Description: Introduction to the clinical and radiographic manifestations of diseases of the oral cavity and para-oral region. Also included will be the clinical differential diagnosis oral lesions and the etiology and histology of common oral lesions. Clinical evaluation and management of oral lesions will be discussed as well.

OBIO 622. Multiple-Disciplinary Seminars 1 Unit

Grading Basis: Pass/Fail

Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring

Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in the MS in Dentistry, GPR, OMFS programs, or MS in Oral Biology programs.

Description: Case-based multi-disciplinary seminar where topics of clinical interest are presented by postgraduate students/residents in the Master of Science in Dentistry program, as well as OMFS and GPR residents. Discussion is facilitated by faculty. The course is continuous for both the Fall and Spring semesters and students must enroll in both semesters to receive credit. The course provides interdisciplinary discussion of diagnosis and treatment of oral pathologies.

OBIO 623. Advanced ImplantologyGrading Basis: Pass/FailTerm Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): Enrollment in the MS in Dentistry program or MS in Oral Biology program.Description: Seminar review of the fundamental concepts of implantology including both surgical and restorative phases, the biologic basis of implantology, the advantages and disadvantages of different implant systems, and practice sessions placing implants and complete preparation for the clinical use of implants.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)1 Unit

Oral Immunology and Infectious Diseases (OIID)

Subject-area course lists indicate courses currently active for offering at the University of Louisville. Not all courses are scheduled in any given academic term. For class offerings in a specific semester, refer to the Schedule of Classes (https://csprd.louisville.edu/ps/ps_class/EMPLOYEE/PSFT_CS/c/COMMUNITY_ACCESS.CLASS_SEARCH.x/?state=62dab551a0d600a5e8237359c50704e59007&duo_code=sjUx20STj21BwVLEUC321Vrjhmtpqdv).

500-level courses generally are included in both the undergraduate- and graduate-level course listings; however, specific course/section offerings may vary between semesters. Students are responsible for ensuring that they enroll in courses that are applicable to their particular academic programs.

Some courses may carry fees beyond the standard tuition costs to cover additional support or materials. Program-, subject- and course-specific fee information can be found on the Office of the Bursar website (<https://louisville.edu/bursar/tuitionfee/university-fees/>).

OIID 501. Biomedical Data Analysis: Experimental Design and Statistics3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): Acceptance to a graduate program or permission of course director.Description: OIID 501 is designed for graduate and professional students in health sciences who require a working knowledge of the experimental design and statistical methods most often utilized in the biomedical sciences. The focus is upon the initial evaluation of scientific literature, the formulation of research protocols, and the interpretation of data. Special attention is given to those areas of data interpretation most common in the health sciences.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)OIID 600. Concepts in Oral Immunology*2 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): Students should have previously taken a basic immunology course or consent of instructor.Description: To provide an in-depth analysis of how the host's immune system within the oral cavity is involved in mediating host immunity against periodontal pathogens, as well as defining the immunological events underlying the initiation and progression of periodontal diseases. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)OIID 601. Introduction to Oral Biology Research*2 Units*Prerequisite(s): Acceptance to an Oral Biology degree program or consent of course director.Description: An introduction to modern research methodology in oral biology. Designed to acquaint the student with a broad spectrum of experimental techniques and concepts which will help prepare for successful design of a research project. Major emphasis is placed on research design, research methodology, critical evaluation of basic research literature, and scientific writing.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)OIID 604. Oral Infections*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): Acceptance to an Oral Biology degree program or consent of course director.Description: This course explores the etiology and pathogenesis of oral infections, and host-microbe interactions.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)OIID 605. Oral Health Seminars*0.5 Units*Grading Basis: Pass/FailPrerequisite(s): Acceptance to the MSOB program or consent of course director.Description: Biomedical research seminars describing basic and clinical research by internal and external faculty and postdoctoral research associates. Students will learn about the breadth of faculty biomedical research, providing context for their own research. The seminars are at least monthly, and the course is continuous through the fall and spring semesters.Note: A required course for most students in the Master of Science in Oral Biology (MSOB) program.Note: Students must enroll in both Fall and Spring semesters to receive full credit.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

OIID 606. Oral Biology Communication2 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): OIID 601.

Description: Provided to MS and PhD students, and to dental residents. The goal of this course is for students to develop their research plan and to become familiar with presenting and defending research findings in a scientific setting. The students will: prepare a scientific abstract in the style of the Journal of the American Dental Association; give a 15-minute seminar describing their research project; answer questions on their talk; and contribute to discussions and feedback on the research of classmates.

OIID 610. Advanced Topics in Oral Biology1-4 Units*Prerequisite(s): OIID 601 or OBIO 601; consent of Graduate Program Director.

Description: This course allows graduate credit to be obtained for guided readings or other specialized studies needed to enhance the student's understanding of their thesis research project. This course can be used for a student to read and discuss a series of advanced publications with a faculty guide other than their primary mentor, in order to build expertise in a specialized area relevant to their research project. Guided readings with a Thesis Committee faculty (other than the mentor) can be particularly important for an interdisciplinary project. This course is intended for specialized in depth studies beyond what is appropriate in a classroom setting. The faculty and student must obtain approval from the Graduate Program Director for this course prior to registering. The faculty guide should send an email to the Graduate Director at the beginning of the semester describing the goals and expected effort and number of credits. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

OIID 619. Graduate Research1-8 Units*Grading Basis: Pass/FailPrerequisite(s): Acceptance to a graduate degree program or consent of course director.

Description: Allows graduate credit to be obtained for performing biomedical research. The student will perform research under the supervision of a primary mentor who is specifically named in the Thesis Committee Form that is required to be completed by all students during their first semester and signed by student, committee members and the Program Director. Research hours and duties are as defined by the mentor in conjunction with the student.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

OIID 620. Thesis1-8 Units*Grading Basis: Pass/FailTerm Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): Acceptance to an Oral Biology degree program or consent of course director.

Description: This course allows graduate credit to be obtained for all aspects of writing the students thesis or writing a research article suitable for publication.

OIID 800. Correlated Sciences1 Unit*Grading Basis: Pass/FailPrerequisite(s): Acceptance to the DMD program.

Description: OIID 800 is provided in the first semester of the DMD program. The diverse range of didactic lectures in OIID 800 is intended to introduce the concept of the need to maintain a holistic scientific view of the body when providing dental care. The course will introduce anatomical, historical, immunological, biochemical, physiological, microbiological, pharmacological and pathological research concepts that will ultimately, lead to improvements in the examination, evaluation, diagnosis and/or treatment of dental patients. OIID 800 will introduce the wide range of clinical, basic and translational research that currently takes place in the School of Dentistry and how you can become actively involved.

OIID 804. DMD Research2-8 Units*Grading Basis: Pass/FailPrerequisite(s): Acceptance to the DMD program and to a research program.

Description: OIID 804 gives credit to DMD students participating in a research program such as the ULSD Summer Research Program. Students should apply for a Summer Research Program during the spring semester, participate in research during the summer, and present at Research Louisville in the Fall semester. Applications are through the ULSD Associate Dean for Research + Enterprise. Students receive 2 credits for each semester doing research.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

PAS 622. Theories of the Pan-African Diaspora3 Units*Prerequisite(s): PAS 602 and PAS 614; special permission is required for any Social Sciences prerequisite waivers.Description: The course gives students a foundation on which to build their intellectual base, challenge the social construction of knowledge, and provide an epistemological stance for Black Studies. The course also highlights the role of human agency in research and scholarship as well as in political, social, and cultural movements.

PAS 623. Qualitative Research Strategies and Pan-African Research3 Units*Prerequisite(s): PAS 601.Description: Introduction to the process elements, the tools and the analytical skills required to collect and analyze qualitative data. Approaches qualitative research designs and various qualitative research methodologies and modes of inquiry. (Social Sciences)

PAS 624. Quantitative Research Strategies and Pan-African Research3 Units*Prerequisite(s): PAS 601.Description: Principles of quantitative methodology. Specifically, students learn how to craft a research question, identify an appropriate sample, conduct a quantitative analysis, and interpret the results. (Social Sciences)

PAS 625. African Americans in Contemporary American Society3 Units*Description: An intensive, multi-disciplinary examination of the status of African Americans in the Post-Civil Rights Era (since 1970). Focus specifically on the demography, politics, social-cultural, educational and economic realities of contemporary African Americans.

- PAS 632. Africana Perspectives in Research 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall Odd Years
Prerequisite(s): none This is a 3-credit hour course for all first year PAS PhD students.
Description: The purpose of the course is to expose new students to the research expertise of PAS faculty and PAS affiliated faculty. Sessions will be co-led by our faculty who will explain their methodological approach present on their ongoing research for students.
- PAS 633. Research for Publication Workshop 6 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring
Prerequisite(s): PAS 623, PAS 607/608, PAS 632 In this course, students will work with their faculty advisors and the faculty instructor of the course to write a research paper of 8-10,000 words on a topic of their choice suitable for submission to an academic journal.
Description: The fall semester focuses on the student's identification of a legitimate research topic and compilation of an acute bibliography. In the spring the student will execute the paper, with regular feedback from the advisor and assigned faculty instructor.
- PAS 639. Public History in African Diaspora 3 Units
Description: Key issues, primary and secondary sources, and research methods for studying the experiences of persons of African ancestry in the Caribbean, Europe, Latin America, and Brazil. Examination of the challenges and strategies related to interpreting and preserving the Diasporic experience at historic sites, in museums and other public settings. (Social Sciences)
- PAS 643. Black Women's Voices 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Graduate standing.
Description: Global synopsis of black women's studies and social thoughts. Highlights roadblocks and bridges experienced. Captures race, gender, class and spatial dimensions.
Note: Cross-listed with WGST 643.

Peace, Justice and Conflict Transformation (PEAC)

Subject-area course lists indicate courses currently active for offering at the University of Louisville. Not all courses are scheduled in any given academic term. For class offerings in a specific semester, refer to the Schedule of Classes (https://csprd.louisville.edu/psp/ps_class/EMPLOYEE/PSFT_CS/c/COMMUNITY_ACCESS.CLASS_SEARCH.x/?state=62dab551a0d600a5e8237359c50704e59007&duo_code=sjUx20STj21bIWVEuQ3Z1YRjHmfxpqoV).

500-level courses generally are included in both the undergraduate- and graduate-level course listings; however, specific course/section offerings may vary between semesters. Students are responsible for ensuring that they enroll in courses that are applicable to their particular academic programs.

Course Fees

Some courses may carry fees beyond the standard tuition costs to cover additional support or materials. Program-, subject- and course-specific fee information can be found on the Office of the Bursar website (<https://louisville.edu/bursar/tuitionfee/university-fees/>).

PEAC 525. Peace, Justice & Conflict Transformation3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Occasionally OfferedPrerequisite(s): Graduate standing.Description: Introduces fundamental issues within the broad realm of Peace Studies and deepens student skills in critical thinking, conflict analysis, and problem solving. Core issues: conflict analysis, non-violent action, violence prevention, warism, peacebuilding, and gender and peace.

PEAC 545. Basic Mediation & Conflict Transformation3 Units*Prerequisite(s): Graduate standing.Description: Basic skills include understanding the place and role of mediation as a conflict resolution tool; applying techniques for constructive negotiation; understanding sources of conflict and recognizing conflict management styles; gaining practical experience in conflict resolution techniques and skill building; understanding stages of mediation; acquiring listening and communication skills; understanding directive, facilitative, and transformative styles of mediation.

PHTX 606. Seminar1 Unit*Description: The fall semester of Pharmacology seminar is designed to introduce first- and second-year graduate students to the formal organization of a scientific presentation.Note: Graded on a Pass-Fail basis.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHTX 616. Advanced Pharmacology*1-12 Units*Description: Work conducted outside the thesis area and with a preceptor other than the thesis director. By special arrangement.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHTX 617. Laboratory Rotation Research*1 Unit*Description: The purpose of this course is to provide students in search of a laboratory in which to perform thesis/dissertation research the opportunity to become acquainted with the research of particular faculty and the techniques used in that faculty's laboratory. Students will approximately 10-15 hours per week conducting literature surveys and conducting experiments under the direction of graduate faculty mentor. They will function as a member of the laboratory for the duration of the rotation. Rotations are for one-half semester each. Students will do two rotations in a semester. Course may be retaken once.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHTX 618. Topics in Pharmacology & Toxicology*1-12 Units*Prerequisite(s): Department majors only.Description: Topics of current interest in Pharmacology and Toxicology. By special arrangement.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHTX 619. Research*1-12 UnitsFor class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHTX 625. Scientific Writing*2 Units*Description: This course is to give students hands-on experience with writing and critiquing scientific papers and proposals. The course will involve both didactic lectures and student presentations and workshops. Students will be graded on their class involvement, presentations, and homework assignments. No special restrictions or conditions are stipulated.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHTX 631. Risk Assessment*1 Unit*Description: This one-hour course will introduce students to the historical underpinnings of risk assessment, and to methods, policies, and procedures used by risk assessors in today's governmental bodies. At the conclusion of the course, students should understand how peer-reviewed publications, especially those demonstrating close response, are used in the derivation of acceptable exposure limits. Emphasis will be placed on the estimation of acceptable exposure limits for non-carcinogenic effects of orally encountered chemicals.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHTX 632. Analysis of Parametric & Non-parametric Data*2 Units*Description: An introduction to descriptive and inferential statistics including exploratory analysis, graphing, descriptive methods, estimation, confidence intervals, hypothesis testing, correlation, and regression. Students will be introduced to the theory and application of one-, two- and multi-group parametric and non-parametric methods. In addition, students will learn how to calculate the odds or risk of developing disease given an exposure using simple logistic regression analysis. Students will give an oral presentation that incorporates statistical principles learned to their individual graduate research projects.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

PHTX 633. Career Opportunities in the Biomedical Sciences1 Unit*Grading Basis: Pass/Fail

Description: The goal of this course is to expose biomedical trainees to a range of diverse career options so that they can make confident and informed decisions about the way that they will move their career. Students will have the opportunity to hear from and to interact with professionals that hold positions in non-academic biomedical or biomedically related career fields. Students will complete an Individual Development Plan and learn how to compose a curriculum vita and a resume.

PHTX 634. Introduction to Medical Product Regulatory Affairs1 Unit*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): Permission of the course director.

Description: This is a graduate-level course that will familiarize students with basic concepts of regulatory compliance during drug, biologic, and medical device development. Basic concepts to be taught are: 1) Product development life-cycles, focusing on phases of development and stages for interactions with regulatory agencies; 2) Quality control and assurance in the laboratory, manufacturer, and clinic the basis of good practices; 3) Familiarization with FDA guidance documents, ICH guidelines, and the code of federal regulations. Upon completion of the course, students should have an understanding of the relationship between regulators, drug or device developers (bench scientists and clinicians), manufacturers, and patients.

PHTX 641. Principles of Pharmacology3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): First-year Pharmacology graduate student or permission of course director.

Description: This is a graduate level course that will provide a foundation of the general principles of pharmacology upon which the students can subsequently build their knowledge in pharmacology. Major topics that will be covered include pharmacodynamics, receptor types and drug-receptor interactions, pharmacokinetics, biotransformation, and pharmacogenomics. The course will progress through the relevant portions of Katzung's Basic & Clinical Pharmacology to introduce these fundamental areas.

PHTX 642. Principles, Applications, and Research Methods in Pharmacology3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): First-year Pharmacology graduate student or permission of course director.

Description: This is a Graduate level course providing a foundation of the general principles, applications, and research methods of pharmacology. The course will progress through Basic & Clinical Pharmacology chapters to introduce the fundamental areas of applied Pharmacology. This will be supplemented by faculty lectures on current research methods in Pharmacology. In addition, student presentations and discussion of assigned research articles will be used to reinforce the fundamental pharmacological principles, applications and research methods. Importantly, research papers and "flipped lectures" presented by students will also give them opportunities to practice presentation skills in delivering formal Pharmacology lectures/research results.

PHTX 643. Environmental Toxicology3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): First year Pharmacology/Toxicology graduate student or permission of the course director.

Description: This is a graduate level course that will provide a foundation of the general principles of toxicology upon which the students can subsequently build their knowledge in toxicology. A major focus of this course is on basic principles, mechanisms and common methods underpinning the science of toxicology. The major emphasis is for students to develop an understanding of how chemicals cause their effect (i.e. mechanisms of toxicity) including molecular and cellular changes through the lens of environmental toxicology. Students will develop a fundamental understanding of how chemicals may exert toxic effects to cause DNA damage and disrupt DNA repair resulting in various diseases highlighting cancer.

PHTX 644. Organ Toxicology3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): First year Pharmacology graduate student or permission of the course director.

Description: This is a graduate level course that will provide a foundation of the main concepts in organ toxicology and the methods used to study organ toxicology. Major topics that will be covered include common toxicities observed in the main body organs and standard as well as novel techniques for studying them. The course is based on Casarett and Doull's "Toxicology - the basic science of poisons" but may also include several specialist modules outside of the textbook.

PHTX 652. Geriatric Pharmacology1 Unit*Prerequisite(s): PHTX 395 or equivalent.

Description: This course will be offered to senior graduate students and nursing students wishing to expand their knowledge on the pharmacokinetics, drug metabolism, toxicities, distribution and drug dosages and interaction in the elderly.

PHTX 661. Molecular Mechanisms of Toxicology3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyDescription: Molecular interactions of drugs and toxicants on cellular processes; including foreign compound metabolism, signal transduction, cell cycle, DNA repair/DNA replication are covered and put in context topics in molecular epidemiology.Note: Crosslisted with BIOC 661.

PHTX 667. Advanced Cell Biology3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): One quarter of graduate-level Biochemistry or consent of instructor.Description: Advanced treatment of contemporary cell biology including membrane structure and function, cytoskeleton, signal transduction, regulation of cell cycle, apoptosis, and molecular mechanisms of cellular differentiation. Spring semester.Note: Cross-listed with BIOC 667, ASNB 667, BIOL 667 and MBIO 667.

PHTX 671. Nanomedicine 1: Nanopharmacology Fundamentals3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): Admission to the MS in Interdisciplinary Studies, concentration in Nanomedicine.Description: The Nanomedicine I course is designed to provide nanopharmacology principles related to the biophysical characterization, biodistribution, clearance and pharmacokinetic modeling of nanopharmaceuticals. The course is focused on common FDA approved nanopharmaceuticals of clinical relevance including lipid-based, iron oxide, albumin and anti-viral nanotherapeutics that are likely to be encountered by medical science researchers and/or health care providers in patient care settings. Additional classes of nanopharmaceuticals with promising therapeutic potential are integrated throughout the curriculum. The course content emphasizes mastery of the principles required for life-long learning within the field of nanopharmacology. Student-led nanopharmaceutical manuscript presentations and problem-based learning projects integrate course information and provide practical exposure to nanomedicine at the interface of biomedical research and patient care.

PHTX 681. Nanomedicine 2: Nanopharmaceutical Translation3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): PHTX 671.Description: The Nanomedicine 2: Nanopharmaceutical Translation course is designed to build on the nanopharmacology principles presented in the pre-requisite Nanomedicine I course. The Nanomedicine II course is focused on the interface between immunology and nanomedicine, immunotherapeutics, extracellular vesicle-based nanomedicine, nanotoxicology, nanomedicine manufacturing and regulation. The course content emphasizes mastery of the principles required for lifelong learning related to translational nanomedicine. Student-led nanopharmaceutical manuscript presentations and problem-based learning projects integrate and translate the information provided in lectures and provide practical exposure to nanomedicine at the interface of biomedical research and patient care.

PHTX 816. Special Project-Pharmacology1-16 Units*Description: This course is to be arranged to fit individual needs to cover topics of current interest, to participate in research project or to receive some advance training.

Course Fees

Some courses may carry fees beyond the standard tuition costs to cover additional support or materials. Program-, subject- and course-specific fee information can be found on the Office of the Bursar website (<https://louisville.edu/bursar/tuitionfee/university-fees/>).

PHYS 501. Independent Study 1-3 Units*Description: Independent research conducted with the approval and supervision of a faculty member.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHYS 502. Independent Study 1-3 Units*Description: Independent research conducted with the approval and supervision of a faculty member.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHYS 507. Solar System Astronomy 3 Units*Prerequisite(s): PHYS 300; MATH 206 or ENGR 102.Description: This is an advanced course in solar system astrophysics, and will cover orbital mechanics, the nature of light, astronomical instrumentation, solar physics, planetary atmospheres/geophysics, comets/asteroids, interplanetary dust and exo-planets.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHYS 517. Physics of Climate 3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring Odd YearsPrerequisite(s): MATH 206 or ENGR 102 (or equivalent) or permission of instructor.Description: Introduction to the physics of Earth's climate system, including the energy budget of the atmosphere, oceans, and cryosphere, shortwave and longwave radiation, the effects of clouds and aerosols, and models of the greenhouse effect, climate sensitivity, atmosphere-ocean feedbacks, and climate change.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHYS 518. Space Weather 3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring Even YearsPrerequisite(s): MATH 206 or ENGR 102 (or equivalent), or permission of instructor.Description: This course provides a comprehensive overview of the physics and effects of space weather. Space weather refers to conditions on the Sun and in the solar wind, magnetosphere, ionosphere, and thermosphere that can influence the performance and reliability of space-borne and ground-based technological systems, and affect human life or health.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHYS 520. Vibrations and Sound 3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Occasionally OfferedPrerequisite(s): PHYS 298, PHYS 299 and MATH 206.Description: Vibrating bodies, propagation of sound waves, physical acoustics, and ultrasonics.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHYS 530. Thermal Physics 3 Units*Prerequisite(s): PHYS 299; MATH 301 or ENGR 201.Description: The laws of thermodynamics, thermodynamic reasoning, and elements of statistical mechanics.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHYS 531. Introductory Statistical Physics 3 Units*Prerequisite(s): PHYS 530.Description: Elementary probability theory applied to the understanding of properties of macroscopic matter in terms of their microscopic constituents. Kinetic theory of gases, transport phenomena. Equations of state derived from ensemble theory.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

PHYS 541. Electromagnetic Fields Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered Prerequisite(s): PHYS 300; PHYS 350 or MATH 405 or ENGR 205; MATH 301 or ENGR 201. Description: Electrostatic and magnetostatic fields in free space and in material media, solutions of Poisson's equation, time dependent fields, Maxwell's equations. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	PHYS 556. Quantum Theory of Matter Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Prerequisite(s): PHYS 555. Description: Spin and general angular momentum, perturbation theory, variational principle, applications, identical particles, and scattering. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
PHYS 542. Electromagnetic Radiation Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Prerequisite(s): PHYS 541. Description: Poisson's equation and LaPlace's Equation, propagation of electromagnetic fields with applications to optics and microwave physics. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	PHYS 561. Mathematical Physics I Prerequisite(s): PHYS 350 or MATH 405 or ENGR 205. Description: Selected mathematical techniques and their applications to various fields of physics. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
PHYS 545. Advanced Optics Prerequisite(s): PHYS 355 and PHYS 542; or consent of instructor. Description: Topics in optical physics including optical system design, lasers, and quantum optics. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	PHYS 562. Mathematical Physics II Prerequisite(s): PHYS 350 or MATH 405 or ENGR 205. Description: Selected mathematical techniques and their applications to various fields of physics. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
PHYS 546. Advanced Optics Lab Prerequisite(s): PHYS 355 or equivalent. Fee: An additional $25.00 is charged for this course. Description: Laboratory experiments illustrating fundamental optical phenomena, the interaction of light and matter, lasers, and quantum optics. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	1 Unit	PHYS 563. Fluid Dynamics Term Typically Offered: Spring Odd Years Prerequisite(s): MATH 301 or ENGR 201 (or equivalent), or permission of instructor. Description: An introduction to nonlinear fluid dynamics, covering kinematics (strain, rotation, transport), nonlinear conservation laws (mass, momentum, energy; dimensions forms), vorticity dynamics, viscous flows, boundary layers, shear instability, and turbulence. Concepts are illustrated with applications drawn from aerodynamics (lift and drag on airfoils, propulsion of fish and birds), biofluids (flow in blood vessels), compressible flow (shock waves), geophysical fluid dynamics (waves, shear instability), and turbulence (energy cascades, modeling strategies). For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
PHYS 547. Fundamentals of Lasers Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered Prerequisite(s): PHYS 355; and PHYS 542 or ECE 473; or consent of instructor. Description: Topics to be discussed include interaction of light with matter, optical amplifiers, laser resonators, Gaussian and higher order optical beams, non-linear optics, and ultra-fast laser pulses. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	PHYS 565. Advanced Computational and Numerical Methods in Physics Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Prerequisite(s): PHYS 350 or PHYS 561. Fee: An additional $25.00 is charged for this course. Description: Modern computational and numerical methods in physics with application to problems in different branches of physics. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
PHYS 555. Elementary Quantum Mechanics Term Typically Offered: Fall Only Prerequisite(s): PHYS 300; PHYS 350 or MATH 405 or ENGR 205; PHYS 460. Description: General concepts of quantum mechanics. Schrodinger equation and solutions in one, two and three-dimensions, hydrogen atom, and orbital angular momentum. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	PHYS 570. Atomic and Molecular Physics Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered Prerequisite(s): PHYS 541 and PHYS 555; or consent of instructor. Description: The structure of atoms and diatomic molecules, the production of coherent radiation and its interaction with matter. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units

PHYS 575. Solid State Physics Term Typically Offered: Fall Only Prerequisite(s): PHYS 541 and PHYS 555, or consent of instructor. Description: Crystal structure, elastic waves, lattice dynamics, phonons, band theory of solids and conductivity phenomena. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	PHYS 605. Theoretical Mechanics Prerequisite(s): PHYS 460 and PHYS 561, or consent of instructor. Description: Analytical dynamics of systems of particles and rigid bodies. Hamiltonian and Lagrangian formulations, special relativity, canonical transformations, Hamilton-Jacobi theory and action-angle variables. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
PHYS 580. Nuclear Physics Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered Prerequisite(s): PHYS 541 and PHYS 555; or consent of instructor. Description: Phenomenological study of nuclear properties. Nuclear structure and reactions, radioactive decay, interaction of charged particles with matter. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	PHYS 611. Electromagnetic Theory I Prerequisite(s): PHYS 542 and PHYS 561, and consent of instructor. Description: Microscopic and macroscopic Maxwell's equations; the energy-momentum tensor; multipole radiation; radiation from accelerated charges; scattering and dispersion; and covariant formulation. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
PHYS 585. Elementary Particle Physics Term Typically Offered: Spring Even Years Prerequisite(s): PHYS 541 and PHYS 555, or consent of instructor. Description: Properties of elementary particles. Detectors and accelerators. Weak and electromagnetic interactions. Quark model of hadrons, strong interactions. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	PHYS 612. Electromagnetic Theory II Prerequisite(s): PHYS 542 and PHYS 561, and consent of instructor. Description: Microscopic and macroscopic Maxwell's equations; the energy-momentum tensor; multipole radiation; radiation from accelerated charges; scattering and dispersion; and covariant formulation. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
PHYS 589. General Relativity Term Typically Offered: Spring Even Years Prerequisite(s): PHYS 460; MATH 301 or ENGR 201. Description: Review of classical gravitation and special relativity, Riemannian geometry, Einstein field equations, exact solutions, tests of the theory, gravitational collapse and black holes, gravitational waves, cosmology. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	PHYS 621. Quantum Mechanics I Prerequisite(s): PHYS 556 and PHYS 605, and consent of instructor. Description: Nonrelativistic quantum mechanics. Hilbert space formalism, Schrodinger and Heisenberg representations, angular momentum theory, perturbation theory, scattering theory. Systems of identical particles and symmetries. Applications. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
PHYS 590. Astrophysics Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Prerequisite(s): PHYS 307; PHYS 350 or MATH 405 or ENGR 205 (or equivalent). Description: Physics applied to the interstellar medium; the atmospheres, structure, and evolution of stars; galaxies. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units	PHYS 622. Quantum Mechanics II Prerequisite(s): PHYS 556 and PHYS 605, and consent of instructor. Description: Nonrelativistic quantum mechanics. Hilbert space formalism, Schrodinger and Heisenberg representations, angular momentum theory, perturbation theory, scattering theory. Systems of identical particles and symmetries. Applications. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
PHYS 595. Special Topics Description: Introduction to an advanced topic or elaboration of an intermediate topic not treated comprehensively in a regular course. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	1-3 Units	PHYS 625. Statistical Mechanics Prerequisite(s): PHYS 530 and PHYS 555, and consent of instructor. Description: Application of ensemble or information theory to derivation of the laws of thermodynamics for classical or quantum systems. Properties of perfect and imperfect gases, magnetic phenomena, fluctuation phenomena, and the Onsager equations. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units
PHYS 601. Quantum Mechanics Laboratory Prerequisite(s): PHYS 621 or PHYS 555 (may be taken concurrently). Fee: An additional $25.00 is charged for this course. Description: Laboratory exercises demonstrating the principles of Quantum Mechanics. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	3 Units

PHYS 640. Solid State Physics I 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): PHYS 575, and concurrent registration in Quantum Mechanics, and consent of instructor.

Description: Quantum mechanical foundation of the theory of solids, the many-body problem, the band approximation, and other approximate methods. Electron-photon interaction, theory of superconductivity, electronic transport processes.

PHYS 641. Solid State Physics II 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): PHYS 575, and concurrent registration in Quantum Mechanics, and consent of instructor.

Description: Quantum mechanical foundation of the theory of solids, the many-body problem, the band approximation, and other approximate methods. Electron-photon interaction, theory of superconductivity, electronic transport processes.

PHYS 650. Research Methods in Physics & Astronomy 3 Units

Grading Basis: Pass/Fail

Fee: An additional $25.00 is charged for this course.

Description: A survey of research methodologies. Topics may include modeling and simulation, experimental, theoretical, and computational techniques used in any branch of Physics and Astronomy, particle detector technologies, advanced handling of data statistics, data mining, laboratory safety, and research ethics.

PHYS 665. Advanced Scientific Computing and Data Analysis 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Prerequisite(s): Admission to the Graduate School Advances physics-based modeling and analysis of scientific data using high-level programming languages (e.

Description: g., Python, Matlab, Mathematica). Students learn how to prepare input data for discovery of correlations and systematic behavior, how to effectively employ linear and multi-parameter regressions, error propagation and mitigation, and how to objectively evaluate model fits. Students will become familiar with Monte-Carlo and Fourier data-analysis techniques. Students should have familiarity with Python at the introductory level.

Note: PHYS 665 and PHYS 375 are typically offered at the same time and place.

PHYS 670. Special Topics 1-12 Units

Prerequisite(s): Concurrent or previous registration in PHYS 605, PHYS 611, or PHYS 621; and consent of instructor.

Description: One or more advanced topics not treated comprehensively in the regular courses.

PHYS 690. Independent Study 1-12 Units

Prerequisite(s): Consent of instructor.

Description: Advanced study conducted under the direction of a faculty member.

PHYS 695. Research Seminar 1-12 Units

Prerequisite(s): Consent of instructor.

Description: Regular but informal meetings of faculty members and graduate students active in an area of research to discuss problems of mutual interest, and to review the current literature.

PHYS 699. Research 1-12 Units

Prerequisite(s): Consent of instructor.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

PHZB 602. Physiological Concepts for General Life Sciences 2 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Description: This course covers the fundamental function of membranes; autonomic (ANS), hypothalamic, and central (CNS) neural control; and for integrated function of muscle, heart, circulatory, renal, endocrine, reproduction, and gastrointestinal organ systems. Emphasis is placed on physiological mechanisms for integrated feedback control of organ and tissue function in humans. Overall, this course offers a solid basis in physiological concepts for post-baccalaureate life-science graduate students to enhance their advanced studies of life sciences. This course teaches by combined didactic lecture and student problem-solving class sessions, and by concept-problem reviews. This course is offered only on a letter-grade basis. The Course Faculty reserves the right to make changes in this syllabus when necessary to meet learning objectives and course management.

PHZB 604. Stem Cell Biology and Regenerative Medicine 2 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Prerequisite(s): Permission from the Department of Physiology & Biophysics This course will provide a comprehensive overview on this intriguing and highly debated topic.

Description: The course will focus on the biology of stem cells and their role in health and disease with emphasis on development, carcinogenesis and tissue engineering. Lectures on various aspects of stem cells from renowned experts will cover both embryonic, induced pluripotent and adult stem cells. Specific lectures will include stem cell types present in the blood, liver, brain, muscle, kidney, pancreas, prostate, lung, gut, skin, and eye. Fellows/graduate students will also be educated on therapeutic cloning as well as bio-ethical issues and existing laws governing stem cell research.

PHZB 605. Systemic Physiology I 5 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Prerequisite(s): Admitted into SIGS.

Description: The first of two human physiology courses that are offered the first year of the graduate programs in the Department of Physiology and Biophysics and other basic science departments at the SOM. This course contains four lectures and one hour of recitation/application of the preceding four lectures per week. Mandatory attendance is required for all class sessions.

PHZB 606. Systemic Physiology II 5 Units
Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Prerequisite(s): Admitted into SIGS.

Description: The second of two human physiology courses that are offered the first year of the graduate programs in the Department of Physiology and Biophysics. This course contains four lectures and one hour of recitation/application of the preceding four lectures per week. Mandatory attendance is required for all class sessions.

PHZB 607. Principles of Presentations: Self, Science, Interviews 2 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Prerequisite(s): Permission of the Dept.

Description: of Physiology & Biophysics This course will provide instruction in best practices for oral-based presentations. There will be multiple oral presentation topics covered, including: Basic Presentations; Using Visual Aids, Charts and Figures; Distilling and Presenting a Clear and Understandable Hypothesis and Specific Aims; Interviews; and Scientific Poster Presentations. Students will attend lectures, participate in small group discussions and present five different types of oral-based presentations. A mid-term and final exam (each 50% of overall grade) will be used to assess student understanding of the knowledge centered on making clear, concise and purposeful oral presentations.

PHZB 608. Physiological Concepts Related to the Metabolic Syndrome 2 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Description: This course will provide students with the basic physiological and biochemical concepts necessary to understand the factors involved in the development of the Metabolic Syndrome. Students will 1) learn the risk factors for metabolic syndrome; 2) learn the diseases and medical complications associated with metabolic syndrome; 3) understand the role of insulin resistance, obesity, hypertension and atherosclerosis in the onset of metabolic syndrome; and 4) survey the current and future approaches to diagnosis and treatment of the metabolic syndrome.

PHZB 609. Integrated Systemic Physiology 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Description: Designed to provide reinforcement, expansion and integration of basic physiologic concepts of human organ systems.

PHZB 611. Advanced Human Cardiovascular Physiology 2 Units
Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Description: Utilizes lectures on the physiological and biochemical processes in the heart, blood vessels and blood elements to provide more detailed mechanisms from molecular to systematic levels and normal to pathological states.

PHZB 616. Selected Topics in Physiology and Biophysics 1-12 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer

Description: Detailed discussion of physiological and biophysical problems of particular interest to students and staff. Topics will be announced in the schedule.

PHZB 617. Seminar in Physiology and Biophysics 1 Unit
Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

PHZB 619. ResearchTerm Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer

PHZB 620. Thesis

PHZB 621. Physiological Adaptions to Exercise, Immobility and Inactivity 2 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Spring Only

Description: This course is an in-depth study of the physiological adaptations that occur due to exercise, immobilization, and physical inactivity. The course expands the knowledge on how the body responds, adjusts, and adapts to stress. Health aspects of exercise will be emphasized.

PHZB 625. Experimental Physiology Methods 1 UnitTerm Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): Admitted into SIGS.

Description: Experimental Physiology Methods is a first course available to matriculating students in the initial year of graduate physiology programs. This course is designed to broadly introduce the use of the scientific methods on studying hypothesis-related research in physiology. This course is now designed to be taken by all matriculating graduate students, but only 1 credit hour (instead of the previous listing for 3). Beginning doctoral students will take this course in concurrence with the general "methods course" by the Interdepartmental Programs in Basic Science each fall semester.

PHZB 630. Biomedical Applications of Physiology in the Eye 2 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Fall, Spring

Description: This course gives the basic physics and advanced physiologic principles that relate to function of the eye as an organ system, uncovers the physics behind basic instruments used for diagnostics of eye health, introduces the student to various professions that are involved in eye health, and discusses the biomedical aspects of several problems that are frequently encountered in medical eye health. Overall, this course offers a solid background in physiology, pathophysiology, measurements methods, and biomedical aspects of the eye to well-prepare a student for pursuit of a career in professions related to eye health.

PHZB 640. Systemic Membrane, Nerve, and Muscle Physiology 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Fall Only

Description: This course covers Cell-Membrane, Nerve, and Muscle Physiology and incorporates molecular, cellular, and systemic mechanisms to teach physiological processes. The course uses a team-taught, integrative organ-systems approach to emphasize the systemic physiological function that arises from interaction among individual cellular and organ level components. Lectures, post-lecture quizzes, interactive group exercises (GEs) and team-based learning sessions (TBLs), and examinations with multiple learning methods foster student-directed self-learning. Students are highly encouraged to take both PHZB 640 and 641 in the same semester.

PHZB 641. Systemic BF, Heart, and Circulatory Physiology 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Fall Only

Description: This course covers Body-Fluid (BF), Cardiac and Circulatory Physiology and incorporates molecular, cellular, and systemic mechanisms to teach physiological processes. The course uses a team-taught, integrative organ-systems approach to emphasize the systemic physiological function that arises from interaction among individual cellular and organ level components. Lectures, post-lecture quizzes, interactive group exercises (GEs) and team-based learning sessions (TBLs), and examinations with multiple learning methods foster student-directed self-learning. Students are highly encouraged to take both PHZB 640 and 641 in the same semester.

PHZB 642. Systemic Respiratory, Renal, & Acid -Base Physiology 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Fall Only

Description: This Course covers respiratory, Renal, and Acid-base (AB) Physiology and incorporates molecular, cellular, and systemic mechanisms to teach physiological processes. The course uses a team-taught, integrative organ systems approach to emphasize the system's physiological function that arises from interaction among individual cellular and organ-level components. Lectures, post-lecture quizzes, interactive group exercises (GEs) and team-based learning sessions (TBLs), and examinations with multiple learning methods foster student-directed self-learning. Students are highly encouraged to take both PHZB 642 & 643 in the same semester.

PHZB 643. Systemic Endocrine, Reproductive, and Gastrointestinal Physiology3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Description: This course covers Endocrine, Reproductive, and Gastrointestinal (GI) Physiology and incorporates molecular, cellular, and systemic mechanisms to teach physiological processes. The course uses a team-taught, integrative organ-systems approach to emphasize the systemic physiological function that arises from interaction among individual cellular and organ level components. Lectures, post-lecture quizzes, interactive group exercises (GEs) and team-based learning sessions (TBLs), and examinations with multiple learning methods foster student-directed-self-learning. Students are highly encouraged to take both 642 & 643 in the same semester.

PHZB 644. Cardio Pulmonary Clinical Physiology3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Summer Only

Description: This 3-credit hour course uses clinical situations to examine and reinforce mechanisms important to understanding systemic physiology related to 1) Heart Electrical function, 2) Myocardial Blood Flow, and 3) Pulmonary compliance and breathing. This course utilizes a combination of faculty-lead teaching techniques that include team-based learning (TBL), problem-based learning (PBL), and in-class exercises. All course materials have been prepared by the supervising faculty and will be available to students as needed.

PHZB 645. Gastrointestinal Renal Endocrine Clinical Physiology3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Summer Only

Description: This 3-credit hour course uses clinical situations to examine and reinforce mechanisms important to understanding systemic physiology related to 1) gastrointestinal blood flow and acid production, 2) renal control of arterial blood pressure, and 3) control of endocrine functions. - PSYC 600. Research in Cognition 1-3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Consent of area coordinator.
Description: Supervised research on topics in cognition.
Note: May be repeated.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 601. History of Modern Psychology 3 Units
Description: An advanced course in the history and development of theories and systems of modern psychology.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 602. Research in Experimental Psychology 1 Unit
Prerequisite(s): Restricted to doctoral students in Psychological & Brain Sciences.
Description: Covers topics related to research in Experimental Psychology.
Note: May be repeated.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 603. Master's Degree Research 1-6 Units
Prerequisite(s): Consent of instructor.
Description: Research leading to master's degree, to be planned and carried out under the guidance and direction of a committee of faculty members. This research can take the form of either a master's thesis project or a research portfolio as specified by the student's program. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 604. Independent Study (Reading) 1-6 Units
Grading Basis: Pass/Fail
Prerequisite(s): Consent of instructor.
Description: Opportunity for the student, under the supervision of a sponsoring faculty member, to pursue individualized study. Pass/Fail grading.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 605. Independent Study (Research) 1-9 Units
Prerequisite(s): Consent of instructor.
Description: Opportunity for the student, under the supervision of a sponsoring faculty member, to pursue individualized study/research. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 606. Professional Development Lab 1-3 Units
Grading Basis: Pass/Fail
Prerequisite(s): Clinical psychology program.
Description: An orientation course for newly-enrolled graduate students in clinical psychology. Covers tools needed to succeed in graduate school (e.g., computer technology and library skills), introduces faculty research areas, provides discussion of issues related to clinical supervision and ethical behavior, and provides students with assistance in developing and implementing research ideas for their thesis projects.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 607. Statistics 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): PSYC 301 or equivalent or consent of instructor.
Description: Analysis of psychological data for masters students. Topics surveyed include analysis of variance and multiple regression. Use of statistical computer packages is emphasized.

PSYC 609. Topical Seminar in Psychology 3 Units Prerequisite(s): Major in psychology or related area and consent of instructor. Description: Seminars dealing with interdisciplinary issues of modern psychology. Subject matter to be indicated in semester schedules. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)		PSYC 621. Cognitive Processes 3 Units Prerequisite(s): Consent of instructor. Description: Discussion of attention, memory, thinking, and concept learning; language; and problem solving. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
PSYC 610. Advanced Statistics I 3 Units Prerequisite(s): Admission to the doctoral program or consent of instructor. Description: Review of elementary statistics from a theoretical point of view; probability theory including sample spaces, random variables, density and distribution functions, expectations, and moments; estimation and properties of estimators; hypothesis testing, regression and correlation, and nonparametric methods. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)		PSYC 622. Proseminar in Cognition 1-3 Units Prerequisite(s): Consent of area coordinator. Description: Critical study of theory and research in cognitive psychology. Note: May be repeated. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
PSYC 611. Advanced Statistics II 3 Units Prerequisite(s): PSYC 610. Description: A second course for graduate students in experimental design and statistical analysis. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)		PSYC 624. Language and Cognition 3 Units Prerequisite(s): LING 325 or LING 327 or graduate standing. Description: Examination of the theory and research on the relationship between fundamental processes of cognition and linguistics processes, e.g., organization of thought, memory, discourse, and text. Note: Cross-listed with LING 624. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
PSYC 612. Advanced Statistics III 3 Units Prerequisite(s): PSYC 610 and PSYC 611. Description: Develops a facility on the part of the student in the application of the techniques of multivariate analysis of variance, regression analysis, multidimensional scaling. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)		PSYC 631. Sensation and Perception 3 Units Prerequisite(s): Graduate doctoral program standing or permission of instructor. Description: An introductory course to human perception. Course covers perception from neurophysiological encoding and processing of physical stimulation to conscious perception. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
PSYC 613. Research Methods in Vision and Hearing Science 3 Units Description: Survey of basic research methods in vision and hearing science. Includes signal detection theory; information theory, psychophysics, analysis techniques; measurement of light and sound, recording and imaging techniques, and clinical methods. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)		PSYC 632. Principles of Visual Science 3 Units Prerequisite(s): PSYC 631, or PSYC 642, or PSYC 643, or consent of instructor. Description: An introduction to the structure and functioning of the visual system including normal and disrupted visual performance. Surveys and integrates findings from neuroanatomical, electrophysiological, psychophysical and clinical research. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
PSYC 614. Advanced Multivariate Modeling 3 Units Prerequisite(s): SOC 610, or PSYC 612, or equivalent. Description: Multivariate statistical techniques in both theoretical and applied sociological research settings. Note: Cross-listed with SOC 616. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)		PSYC 633. Visual Processes 3 Units Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in doctoral program or consent of instructor. Description: A consideration of the low-level processes and mechanisms of seeing, including: 1) the sampling and filtering of the image in the eye, 2) the neural representation of the image, and 3) the interpretation of this representation. Emphasis is on form, color and motion abilities. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
PSYC 620. Human Learning 3 Units Prerequisite(s): Consent of instructor. Description: Analysis of basic concepts of conditioning and discussion of major theoretical issues. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)

- PSYC 634. Intermediate-Level Vision 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in doctoral program or consent of instructor.
Description: The following topics covered in this course will emphasize the integration of the various approaches such as psychophysics, cognition, neuroscience, computational theory, etc; Stereopsis and 3-D Space Perception; Texture Segregation and Visual Search; Visual Surface Perception; Structure from Motion.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 635. Sensory Neuroscience 3 Units
Description: Consideration of sensory systems, towards the goal understanding how multisensory input is integrated to form perceptions. Major topics include transduction and neuron coding principles; development, plasticity, and cross-modal plasticity; visual-motor interactions; eye movements, attention and consciousness.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 636. Human Memory 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Two semesters of cognitive psychology.
Description: Survey of major theories and research pertaining to memory, including memory disorders, memory development, and related cognitive processes.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 637. Thinking and Problem Solving 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Consent of instructor.
Description: Analysis of major research and theory pertaining to concept learning, deductive reasoning, and problem solving.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 638. Cognitive and Behavioral Decision Sciences 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in Psychology PhD Program or Permission of Instructor.
Description: Study of information processing and cognitive theories of decision-making and reasoning.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 642. Behavioral Neuroscience 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in doctoral program or consent of instructor.
Description: Survey of the neural and physiological factors which influence behavior.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 643. Principles of Neuroscience 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): PSYC 642 and PSYC 531, or consent of instructor.
Description: A survey of the processes underlying the functioning of neurons and neural systems.
- PSYC 645. Cognitive Neuroscience 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Consent of instructor.
Description: Neuroanatomical basis of cognitive and motor functions, including attention, memory, and language. Primary focus on brain imaging studies of cognition in normal adults.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 646. Principles of Hearing Science I 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Permission of instructor.
Description: The first in a two-course sequence in Hearing Science. It will survey contemporary theory and research in audition, with emphasis on modern mathematical and psychological methods. Major topics will include the anatomy and physiology of the auditory system, measurement and control of sound, auditory signal analysis, and basic auditory abilities such as detection, discrimination, and masking.
Note: Cross-listed with AUDI 648.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 647. Principles of Hearing Science II 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): PSYC 646 or consent of instructor.
Description: This is the second course in a two-course sequence in Hearing Science. It will survey research on phenomena in audition that are thought to result from high-level processing in the brain and auditory pathway. Topics will include loudness perception, pitch perception, space perception, auditory object and pattern perception, music perception, and speech perception.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 651. Introduction to Computer Programming for Psychology 3 Units
Description: The objective of this course is a broad introduction to how the MATLAB programming language is used in psychology. No prior knowledge of programming languages will be assumed.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 656. Professional and Ethical Issues in Clinical Psychology 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Admission to the Clinical Psychology Doctoral Program or consent of instructor.
Description: An examination of the ethical principles and professional issues in the field of clinical psychology, including aspects related to clinical research. Emphasis is on developing ethical decision-making skills through case-based practice
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 661. Advanced Developmental Psychology 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Consent of instructor.
Description: Survey of the major areas of developmental psychology and of special problems encountered in research with infants and children.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

- PSYC 670. Advanced Social Psychology 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): PSYC 372 or consent of instructor.
Description: Advanced study of major areas in social psychology: social learning, person perception, attitudes and attitude change, group dynamics, social structure, and change.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 673. Advanced Personality Theory 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): PSYC 375 and consent of instructor.
Description: A selective and critical examination of current theory and research in the area of personality.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 675. Social Psychology Methods 1-3 Units
Description: Presentation and use of current methods in the field of social psychology. Emphasis on developing professional skills.
Note: May be repeated.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 679. Introduction to Assessment and Clinical Skills 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in psychology doctoral program or permission of director of training.
Description: A general introduction to psychological assessment, test development, psychometric theory, basic interviewing, legal considerations, theories of prediction and clinical judgment.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 680. Intellectual and Cognitive Assessment 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): PSYC 679 and clinical psychology program, or permission of director of clinical training.
Description: Administration, scoring, and interpretation of intelligence, aptitude, and academic achievement tests. Psychometric properties and applications are considered.
Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 681. Behavioral and Personality Assessment 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Clinical psychology program or permission of Director of Clinical Training.
Description: Covers administration, scoring, and interpretation of the MMPI/Rorschach (Exner system), and principles of cognitive and behavioral assessment techniques.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 683. Advanced Research Methods in Psychology 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in psychology doctoral program or permission of director of graduate studies.
Description: Advanced research methods employed in clinical and experimental psychology.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 684. Psychological Interventions 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall Only
Prerequisite(s): Consent of Clinical Psychology Doctoral Program Director of Clinical training.
Description: Presents theory and techniques in one or more major therapeutic intervention orientations, along with considerations in applying these interventions such as special populations and varying modalities. Integrated laboratory allows students to apply techniques. Emphasis on empirically validated techniques.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 685. Clinical Psychology Practicum 3 Units
Grading Basis: Pass/Fail
Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in clinical psychology doctoral program.
Description: Supervised experience in psychological assessments and interventions utilizing various evaluation techniques and treatment approaches.
Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 686. Assessment Practicum 1-6 Units
Grading Basis: Pass/Fail
Prerequisite(s): PSYC 685 and enrollment in clinical psychology doctoral program.
Description: Supervised experience in psychological assessments utilizing various evaluation approaches.
Note: May be repeated.
Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 687. Topical Seminar in Clinical Psychology 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Consent of instructor.
Description: Survey in depth of current theories, practice, and research in selected areas relevant to clinical psychology.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

- PSYC 689. Clinical Psychopathology 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Consent of instructor; non-psychology majors must receive permission of instructor to enroll.
Description: A review of the causes and manifestations of psychopathology, with particular emphasis on the relevance of the research literature to the analysis and treatment of clinical cases. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 690. Practicum in College Teaching 1-3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Permission of instructor.
Description: Guidance and training in college teaching of undergraduate psychology courses. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 691. Program Evaluation 2-3 Units
Description: Review of issues and methods for the assessment of services or treatment efficacy, program effectiveness, and organizational performance in the health and human service areas. Prepares students for conceiving, planning and budgeting, reporting, and implementing program evaluations, need assessments, and client satisfaction studies. Includes preparation for application. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 692. Program Evaluation Project 1 Unit
Prerequisite(s): PSYC 691.
Description: Focus is on using the evaluation methods and organizational approaches reviewed in prerequisite coursework for students to carry out actual program evaluation projects. Includes writing proposals, collecting and analyzing data, preparing reports, and working with organizations to help in the utilization of findings for organizational decisions and policies. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 693. Interviewing Skills Practicum 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Acceptance into doctoral clinical program or consent of instructor.
Description: For first-year clinical doctoral students to receive training in basic interviewing skills, on which all future assessment and psychotherapy skills build. Involves a series of skills modules and videotaped role-play interviews, culminating in a live client interview in the Psychological Services Center. Some supervision and training in this course is provided by advanced doctoral students under the supervision of a faculty member.
Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.
- For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 694. Supervision Practicum 1 Unit
Grading Basis: Pass/Fail
Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer
Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in doctoral clinical program.
Description: Students registered for this course will be fourth-year or above doctoral clinical students (in exceptional cases, third-year students) to develop their supervisory skills. Under the supervision of a faculty member, students will train a peer acquiring therapy skills in PSYC 685. Students who wish to further develop their supervisory skills will train first-year students acquiring interviewing skills in PSYC 693 under the supervision of a faculty member. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 696. Clinical Aspects of Child Psychopathology 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Consent of instructor or enrollment in clinical psychology doctoral program.
Description: A review of current diagnostic and therapeutic techniques used by clinical psychologists in treating children. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 697. Psychotherapy Research 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): PSYC 683 or PSYC 684, or consent of instructor.
Description: An examination of psychotherapy research designed to evaluate the current status of psychotherapy and to develop psychotherapy research techniques. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 701. Dissertation Research 1-12 Units
Prerequisite(s): Satisfactory completion of preliminary examination and permission of dissertation director. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PSYC 785. Clinical Psychology Practicum in Professional Settings 10 Units
Grading Basis: Pass/Fail
Prerequisite(s): Clinical psychology program.
Description: Experience in clinical psychology in professional settings under the supervision of professional clinical psychologists.
Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.
- For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

PSYC 791. Multicultural Counseling Skills: Psychotherapy with Ethnically & Racially Diverse Clients 1-3 Units

Description: This course will help students learn to connect with and engage racially diverse clients in treatment, with an emphasis on culturally competent counseling skills. Students will demonstrate an ability to conceptualize cases from a CBT orientation, incorporating relevant ethnic, racial, social, cultural and economic factors in to the conceptualization. Students will demonstrate reliable use of Functional Analytic Psychotherapy (FAP) to improve rapport and connect with racially different clients. Students will be able to incorporate FAP into CBT approaches for the treatment of psychopathology and other difficulties in an individualized and culturally competent manner.

PSYC 792. Power, Privilege, and Psychopathology 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): Consent of Clinical Psychology Doctoral Program Director of Clinical Training.

Description: This course is designed for clinical psychology graduate students hoping to advance their research and clinical skills related to issues of power and privilege. Topics include coverage of how issues of power and privilege influence the conceptualization of psychopathology and play a role in the development and implementation of psychological interventions, as well as identification of biases and oppressive ideologies that may influence research and clinical work with individuals from marginalized groups. Course assignments include papers, presentations, essays, and discussion questions.

PSYC 793. Treatment of Trauma in Diverse Populations 1-3 Units

Description: This course will introduce students to clinical assessment and treatment issues as they relate to culture, race, and trauma. Students will demonstrate an ability to conceptualize cases from a CBT orientation, incorporating relevant ethnic, racial, social, cultural and economic factors in to the conceptualization. Students will demonstrate reliable use of structured interviews and self-report measures, with an understanding of the limitations of such measures in minority populations. Students will be able to assess trauma-related symptomology and differentiate it from other psychopathological conditions. Students will apply empirically validated CBT approaches to the treatment of trauma and common comorbidities in an individualized and culturally competent manner.

PSYC 795. Clinical Internship 0 Units

Grading Basis: Credit/No Credit

Prerequisite(s): Doctoral candidacy and classification is GD or GC; program plan is PhD in Clinical Psychology.

Description: This non-credit course is for clinical psychology doctoral students completing their one-year required internship.

Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

Public Administration (PADM)

Subject-area course lists indicate courses currently active for offering at the University of Louisville. Not all courses are scheduled in any given academic term. For class offerings in a specific semester, refer to the Schedule of Classes (https://csprd.louisville.edu/psp/ps_class/EMPLOYEE/PSFT_CS/c/COMMUNITY_ACCESS.CLASS_SEARCH.x/?state=62dab551a0d600a5e8237359c50704e59007&duo_code=sjUx20STj21bIWVEU)

500-level courses generally are included in both the undergraduate- and graduate-level course listings; however, specific course/section offerings may vary between semesters. Students are responsible for ensuring that they enroll in courses that are applicable to their particular academic programs.

Course Fees

Some courses may carry fees beyond the standard tuition costs to cover additional support or materials. Program-, subject- and course-specific fee information can be found on the Office of the Bursar website (<https://louisville.edu/bursar/tuitionfee/university-fees/>).

PADM 610. Administrative Law and Process 3 Units

Description: Study of processes of law-making and application by governmental executive departments. Encompasses substantive issues facing agencies in designing and implementing effective regulation and court efforts to interpret and control agencies' activities.

Note: Cross-listed with POLS 615/UPA 662.

PADM 621. Urban Demography and GIS 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Description: This course will introduce students to geographic information systems (GIS) as an analytical tool with which to study urban demographic issues. The material will be geared towards students in the urban planning, public administration, and urban studies programs, with a focus on demographic data and issues frequently encountered by planners, policymakers, and policy analysts. Topics that will be covered include migration, housing and neighborhood development, segregation, and land use.

Note: Cross-listed with SUST 518, PLAN 618, URBS 518.

PHST 500. Introduction to Biostatistics for Health Sciences I 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Prerequisite(s): Enrolled as a student in the PH MPH, MSc or Certificate in Clinical Investigation Sciences program.

Description: An introduction to descriptive and inferential statistical methods, including descriptive and graphical methods, estimation, calculation of confidence intervals, and 1- and 2-sample hypothesis testing, one-way analysis of variance (ANOVA), and simple linear regression. The R statistical software environment will be used to introduce data management and descriptive and inferential statistical methods.

Note: Students interested in this course that do not meet the stated prerequisites should contact the department of Bioinformatics and Biostatistics.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

PHST 501. Introduction to Biostatistics for Health Sciences II 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): PHST 500.

Description: This course is a continued graduate level introduction to inferential statistical methods, covering multi-way analysis of variance, multiple regression, the chi-square analysis of frequencies and logistic regression, survival analysis, and nonparametric statistical methods.

A statistical software package will be used to execute the descriptive, graphical, and inferential statistical techniques on real data sets.

PHST 520. Statistical Computing and Data Management with SAS 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Prerequisite(s): PHST 301, or equivalent (MATH 109, SOC 301, PSYC 301, PAS 408).

Description: This course will introduce students to the fundamental of data management and analysis using SAS. It will give an overview of the SAS system under MS Windows and provide a fundamental grounding in the data step and Base SAS procedure. We will cover elementary statistical analyses such as measures of location and spread, correlation, detection of outliers, graphical displays, comparison of groups, as well as additional specialized studies.

PHST 561. Mathematical Tools I 1 Unit

Term Typically Offered: Summer Only

Prerequisite(s): Conditional or full admission to the MS or Certificate in Biostatistics programs.

Description: This course covers mathematical tools required for sound comprehension of mathematical probability and statistics concepts included in methodological portions of coursework in the MS in Biostatistics degree. Course topics include: (1) functions and graphs with particular focus on polynomials and roots, rational functions, and exponential and logarithmic functions, and (2) limits and continuity of functions.

PHST 603. Biostatistics Public Health Practicum I 1-2 Units

Prerequisite(s): Enrolled in MS in Biostatistics, PH MPH or Math major in Graduate School.

Description: Practical experience in biostatistical collaboration at the master's level, in which a student works with one or more investigators in the health sciences. Students typically engage in the statistical analysis of investigator data sets and are required to generate and present a report to the collaborating investigators.

Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

PHST 620. Introduction to Statistical Computing 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Prerequisite(s): PHST 500 or enrolled in MS or Certificate in Biostatistics or MS in Health Data Analytics programs.

Description: This course provides an introduction to SAS. It will give students an overview of the SAS system under MS Windows and provide fundamental grounding in the environment for accessing, structuring, formatting and manipulating data. Students will learn how to summarize and display data, and the inference between data steps and procedures to get information out of data.

Note: Students interested in this course that do not meet the stated prerequisites should contact the department of Bioinformatics and Biostatistics.

PHST 624. Clinical Trials I: Planning and Design 2 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in the MS or Certificate in Biostatistics or the MSc or Certificate in Clinical Investigation Sciences.

Description: Phases of Trials, Ethical Issues, Basic Design, Inclusion and Exclusion criteria, Randomization and Blinding, Sample Size, Monitoring Response Variables, and Issues in Data Analysis

PHST 625. Clinical Trials II 2 Units

Prerequisite(s): PHST 624.

Description: Sample Size and Power Analysis, Survival Analysis, Sequential Design, Meta Analysis, Reporting and Interpreting of Results, Multicenter Trials. SPSS will be used.

PHST 631. Data Collection for Clinical Research 2 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Prerequisite(s): Enrolled in the MSc in Clinical Investigation Sciences or the Certificate in Clinical Investigation Sciences program and PHST 500 completed or concurrent.

Description: This course covers the identification and selection or design and analysis of instruments for collecting data used in clinical research. Psychometric/biometric properties of data collected using instruments are addressed extensively. REDCap (Research Electronic Data Capture) and SPSS will be used extensively.

PHST 640. Statistical Methods for Research Design in Health Sciences 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in the MS or Certificate in Biostatistics, or PHST 500.

Description: Statistical methods for clinical research and interpretation of the literature.

PHST 645. Health Sciences Data Collection Instrumentation 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in the MS in Biostatistics, or PHST 500 completed or concurrent.

Description: This course covers the identification and selection or design and analysis of instruments for collecting data used in health sciences research and evaluation. Psychometric/biometric properties of data collected using instruments are addressed extensively. Epi Info 7 will be used to develop data collection instruments and SPSS will be used for data management and analysis. This will be taught as a hybrid course.

PHST 650. Advanced Topics in Biostatistics 1-3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer

Prerequisite(s): Permission from the instructor.

Description: A treatment of one or more topics in advanced biostatistics not usually covered in a regularly offered course.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

- PHST 655. Basic Statistical Methods for Bioinformatics 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall Only
Prerequisite(s): Must earn higher than a C- in PHST 681 and enrollment in MS in Biostatistics degree program.
Description: This course provides an introduction to some core topics in bioinformatics. Topics will include pairwise and multiple sequence alignment algorithms; gene expression profiling using microarrays; introduction to next generation sequencing; analyzing RNA-Seq data and phylogenetics. Students are expected to be familiar with some elementary statistics and probability concepts.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PHST 660. Mathematical Tools 4 Units
Prerequisite(s): Enrolled in MS in Biostatistics and MATH 190 or equivalent.
Description: This course focuses on the basic techniques of differential and integral calculus, and matrix algebra. Topics include the chain rule, higher-order derivatives, partial derivatives, improper integrals, multiple integrals, sequences and series, vector and matrix arithmetic, and eigenvalues.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PHST 661. Probability 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall Only
Prerequisite(s): Full admission to the MS in Biostatistics or Math major in Graduate School or enrolled in the MS in Health Data Analytics program.
Description: Introduction to probability theory. Topics include axioms of probability, conditional probability, discrete and continuous random variables, probability distributions and joint distributions, moments, moment generating functions, mathematical expectation, transformations of random variables, limit theorems (Law of Large Numbers and Central Limit Theory).
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PHST 662. Mathematical Statistics 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring
Prerequisite(s): Must earn higher than a C- in PHST 661 and enrolled in the MS in Biostatistics program.
Description: A first course in statistical theory. Topics include limiting distributions, maximum likelihood estimation, least squares, sufficiency and completeness, confidence intervals, Bayesian estimation, Neyman-Pearson Lemma, uniformly most powerful tests, likelihood ratio tests and asymptotic distributions.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PHST 666. Master's Thesis Research 1-6 Units
Prerequisite(s): Enrolled in the MS in Biostatistics or Math major in Graduate School; accumulation of at least 18 hours of PHST credit hours.
Description: Mentored research; Thesis Preparation.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PHST 671. Special Topics in Biostatistics 1-3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Enrolled in the MS in Biostatistics or Math major in Graduate School.
Description: A treatment of one or more topics in advanced Biostatistics not usually covered in a regularly offered course. May be repeated under different subtitles.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PHST 675. Independent Study in Biostatistics 1-3 Units
Prerequisite(s): PHST 661 and enrolled in the MS in Biostatistics or Math major in Graduate School.
Description: Course allows students to pursue advanced study with faculty guidance on a topic related to biostatistics.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PHST 680. Biostatistical Methods I 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall Only
Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in the MS or Certificate in Biostatistics or Math major in Graduate School, or PHST 501.
Description: A mathematically sophisticated presentation of statistical principles and methods. Topics include exploratory data analysis, graphical methods, point and interval estimation, hypothesis testing, and categorical data analysis. Matrix algebra is required. Data sets drawn from biomedical and public health literature will be analyzed using statistical computer packages.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PHST 681. Biostatistical Methods II 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Spring Only
Prerequisite(s): Must earn higher than a C- in PHST 680.
Description: This course offers a mathematically sophisticated introduction to simple regression models and analysis of variance. Matrix algebra is required and data analysis will be illustrated drawing examples from biomedical and public health literature.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PHST 682. Multivariate Statistical Analysis 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring
Prerequisite(s): Must earn higher than a C- in PHST 662.
Description: The topics covered in this course include the multivariate normal distribution, inference for mean vectors, inference for covariance and correlation matrices, analysis of covariance structure, analysis of serial measurements, factor analysis, and discriminant analysis. Statistical methods and models that are most useful in multivariate data analysis will be introduced. Instruction will also be given in the proper use of R to carry out these analyses.

PHST 683. Survival Analysis	3 Units	PHST 710. Advanced Statistical Computing I	3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall Only		Term Typically Offered: Fall Only
Prerequisite(s): Must earn higher than a C- in PHST 662 and PHST 681.		Prerequisite(s): Enrolled in the MS or PhD in Biostatistics and earn higher than a C- in PHST 681.
Description: Statistical methods for analyzing survival data. Parametric and nonparametric methods for complete and incomplete data, life-table, KM estimator, accelerated lifetime models, proportional hazard models, log-rank tests, and goodness-of-fit tests.		Description: The intent of this course is to develop knowledge of a statistical programming language and computational methods that are essential to statistics. The course primarily focuses on the R programming language and covers a variety of programming topics related to R (vectorization, data I/O, object-oriented programming, and building R packages). Statistical and computational methods that are covered include visualization (basic and lattice graphics), data smoothing, optimization (Newton-Raphson and EM-algorithm), matrix factorization, simulation (inverse transform and acceptance-rejection methods, power and size of a test), numerical integration, resampling (bootstrap and permutation tests), and other modern statistical methods.

PHST 684. Categorical Data Analysis	3 Units	PHST 711. Advanced Statistical Computing II	3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Spring Only		Prerequisite(s): Enrolled in the MS or PhD in Biostatistics and PHST 710.
Prerequisite(s): Must earn higher than a C- in PHST 680.		Description: This is a continuation of the statistical programming techniques, skills, and theory covered in PHST 710. The intent of this course is to further develop your ability to perform statistical programming. This includes carrying-out computational tasks, interfering with diverse data types and formats, and writing functions to implement statistical methods. Potential topics include multivariate optimization, C++ programming in R, statistical learning methods, non-parametric smoothing, dimension reduction/variable selection, and Markov Chain Monte Carlo (MCMC) methods. Additionally, the course may cover computing concepts such as cross-validation/resampling, regular expressions, and computing on the R language.
Description: Topics include inference for two-way contingency tables, models for binary response variables, log-linear models, models for ordinal data, multinomial response data, Poisson regression and analysis of repeated categorical response data. Emphasis will be placed on methods and models most useful in biomedical and public health research. PHST 702. Biostatistics-Decision Science Seminar	1 Unit	PHST 724. Advanced Clinical Trials	3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer		Prerequisite(s): Enrolled in the PhD in Biostatistics and PHST 624 and PHST 681 or equivalent.
Prerequisite(s): Enrolled in the Ph.		Description: Advanced statistical methods for design and analysis of clinical trials are explored. Content includes design and analysis of complex clinical studies, including phases I, II, and III clinical trials for dichotomous, normally distributed and time-to-event outcomes. SAS, R and EAST will be extensively used.
Description: D. in Biostatistics major or Ph.D. in Mathematics major in Graduate School. Weekly seminar series for PhD students in Biostatistics and PhD students in Mathematics. Students will hear speakers present their current research in bioinformatics and biostatistics and report on the work. PHST 750. Statistics for Bioinformatics3 Units*Prerequisite(s): Enrolled in the PhD in Biostatistics and PHST 661.

Description: This course focuses on the statistical methods and computational tools for analyzing data generated from DNA and protein sequences, genetic maps, and polymorphic marker data. This course will review the basics of genetics/molecular biology and statistical inference and probability needed for analyzing DNA and protein sequences. Covered topics include introduction to stochastic processes, analysis and motif discovery within a single DNA/protein sequence, comparison and alignment of two or more DNA/protein sequences, the foundations of substitution matrices, the statistical underpinnings of BLAST, hidden Markov models, evolutionary models, and phylogenetic trees. This course is developed for individuals interested in pursuing research in computational biology, genomics, and bioinformatics. Students are expected to be familiar with some elementary statistics and probability concepts.

PHST 751. High-throughput Data Analysis3 Units*Prerequisite(s): Enrolled in the PhD in Biostatistics and PHST 661.

Description: The array of high speed, high dimension and highly automated biotechnical equipment including next generation DNA sequencers (NGS), microarray, and metabolomics and proteomic analyzers (mass spectrometers) are all designed to capture and process vast amounts of biological data. All these data generation platforms require customized statistical analyses dealing with high dimensional data. In this course we will introduce the statistical methodologies needed to analyze the data generated by these high-throughput technologies. Covered statistical topics include modern methods for classification, dimension reduction/variable selection methods, and clustering. The course will also cover practical aspects of high-throughput data analysis including microarray data, NGS data, and proteomic mass-spectrometer data.

PHST 752. Statistical Genetics3 Units*Prerequisite(s): Enrolled in the PhD in Biostatistics and PHST 681.

Description: This course covers the principles of Mendelian genetics, linkage analysis, association analysis, and quantitative trait models. The main goal is to provide the students a foundation of the statistical theory of inheritance and enough expertise to analyze and interpret genetic association studies.

PHST 762. Advanced Statistical Inference3 Units*Prerequisite(s): Enrolled in the PhD in Biostatistics and PHST 662.

Description: This course is a mathematically sophisticated introduction to the theory and methods of statistical inference, including point and interval estimation and hypotheses testing. Students will learn fundamental technical tools that are essential to carry out methodological research in the field of Biostatistics. Emphasis will be placed on how to correctly propose statistical methods with desirable properties in a general setting including asymptotic unbiasedness, robust variance estimation and efficiency.

PHST 777. Dissertation Research1-12 Units

Prerequisite(s): Enrolled in the PhD in Biostatistics, satisfactory completion of PhD qualifying examination, and permission of dissertation director.

Description: The PhD student may take a total of up to 24 hours credit for the planning, data collection, analysis, and writing of the research project that results in the doctoral dissertation. PHST 777 must be taken under the direction of the student's major professor. Dissertation research hours are seen as a major component of the doctoral program.

PHST 780. Advanced Nonparametrics3 Units*Prerequisite(s): Enrolled in the PhD in Biostatistics and PHST 662.

Description: This course is a mathematically advanced introduction to theory and methods of nonparametric statistics. The first part of the course covers topics including theory of distribution-free statistics based on ranking, U-statistics, Kolmogorov-Smirnov one-sample statistics, Chi-square goodness-of-fit test, asymptotic relative efficiency. The second part of the course covers nonparametric density and regression estimation based on kernel, splines, local polynomial and wavelet methods.

PHST 781. Advanced Linear Models3 Units*Prerequisite(s): Enrolled in the PhD in Biostatistics and PHST 662.

Description: An introduction to the theory of linear models, with an emphasis on health sciences applications. Topics include projections, distributions of quadratic forms under normality, estimation procedures, general linear hypotheses, estimating and testing linear parametric functions, simultaneous inference, multifactor ANOVA models, and covariance.

PHST 782. Generalized Linear Models3 Units*Prerequisite(s): Enrolled in the PhD in Biostatistics and PHST 781.

Description: The course covers the advanced statistical methods and inferences based on the exponential family of distributions, with linear model, logistic regression model, and log-linear as its special cases. Generalized estimating equations for correlated responses are also covered.

PHST 783. Advanced Survival Analysis3 Units

Prerequisite(s): Enrolled in the PhD in Biostatistics; PHST 662 and PHST 683.

Description: This course is a mathematically advanced introduction to the theory and methods of survival analysis. It offers an in-depth analysis of parametric and non-parametric models for general event-time data. It also provides a brief overview of complex models like multi-state models and competing risks.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

PHST 785. Nonlinear Regression3 Units*Prerequisite(s): Enrolled in the PhD in Biostatistics and PHST 781.Description: The course covers advanced statistical methods for non-linear regressions. Linear models, generalized linear models, and least squares estimates will be reviewed. The least squares estimates, algorithm for obtaining the estimates, statistical inferences, and model diagnostic tests for nonlinear regression models will be covered. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHST 791. Bayesian Inference and Decision*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): PHST 681 and enrolled in the PhD or MS in Biostatistics or Math major in Graduate School.Description: This is a core course for PhD students in Bioinformatics and Biostatistics. We will focus on the use of Bayesian probability and statistics in both scientific inference and formal decision analysis. The frequency and subjective interpretations of probability are explored, as well as probability and decision making. Starting from the basic principle of Bayes' Theorem, the course will explore inference for both single-parameter, multiple-parameters, and hierarchical models. A significant amount of time will be devoted to exploring the important Bayesian computational methods: Markov chain Monte Carlo, the Gibbs sampler, and the Metropolis-Hastings algorithm.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

Public Health - Environmental Health (PHEH)

Subject-area course lists indicate courses currently active for offering at the University of Louisville. Not all courses are scheduled in any given academic term. For class offerings in a specific semester, refer to the Schedule of Classes (https://csprd.louisville.edu/psd/ps_class/EMPLOYEE/PSFT_CS/c/COMMUNITY_ACCESS.CLASS_SEARCH.x/?state=62dab551a0d600a5e8237359c50704e59007&duo_code=sjUx20STj215WVLR321WjDmXp009)

500-level courses generally are included in both the undergraduate- and graduate-level course listings; however, specific course/section offerings may vary between semesters. Students are responsible for ensuring that they enroll in courses that are applicable to their particular academic programs.

Some courses may carry fees beyond the standard tuition costs to cover additional support or materials. Program-, subject- and course-specific fee information can be found on the Office of the Bursar website (<https://louisville.edu/bursar/tuitionfee/university-fees/>).

PHEH 526. Nutrition and Maternal and Child Health3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyDescription: This course covers the scientific foundations of human nutrition and digestion, methodologies for nutritional assessment in at-risk populations, and the impact of food scarcity/nutritional inadequacy on maternal/child.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHEH 610. Occupational Health and Safety*3 Units*Prerequisite(s): PHEH 500 and enrollment in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences.Description: This course will focus on the prevention of work-related injuries and illnesses as well as the management and control of work place hazards. Information on the identification of workplace hazards, governmental regulations and issues pertaining to specific industries, and safety management programs will also be presented. The course will also include discussion of principles of ergonomics, including the role of job design in maximizing productivity and injury prevention. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHEH 620. Global Issues in Environmental and Occupational Health*3 Units*Prerequisite(s): PHEH 500 and enrollment in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences.Description: This course will focus on the nature, impact and determinants of health problems among disadvantaged populations in developing countries.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHEH 640. Environmental Risk Assessment*3 Units*Prerequisite(s): PHEH 500 and PHEP 501 (or equivalent courses); student must also be enrolled in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences.Description: This course Introduces students to the nomenclature, concepts, and basic skills of quantitative environmental risk assessment (QRA). The goal is to provide an understanding necessary to read and critically evaluate QRA. Emphasis is on the intellectual and conceptual basis of risk assessment, particularly its dependence on toxicology and epidemiology, rather than its mathematical constructs and statistical models. Specific cases consider the use of risk assessment for setting environmental exposure limits and quantifying the hazards of environmental exposures to chemicals in air and drinking water.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHEH 651. Advanced Environmental Health Services*3 Units*Prerequisite(s): PHEH 500 and enrollment in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences.Description: This course is an in-depth examination of current topics in environmental health issues and practice and builds on principles presented in the prerequisite introductory course. Current topics within the broad category of environmental health will be explored with emphasis on environmental toxicology and nutrition. Specific topics include introduction to toxicological concepts, pulmonary toxicology, air pollution, susceptible populations, biosafety, public health nutrition including malnutrition and the environmental impact of agriculture. The course includes a traditional lecture format as well as in-class and online discussion groups for selected topics.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

Course Fees

Some courses may carry fees beyond the standard tuition costs to cover additional support or materials. Program-, subject- and course-specific fee information can be found on the Office of the Bursar website (<https://louisville.edu/bursar/tuitionfee/university-fees/>).

PHEP 501. Introduction to Epidemiology3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): Enrollment in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences.Description: Basic epidemiological methods are presented: terminology; study design; issues of contemporary practice; basic skills for interacting with epidemiologists, reading disease control literature, and drawing on epidemiological concepts.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHEP 602. Introduction to Epidemiologic Methods*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): PHEP 501 and enrollment in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences.Description: This course is focused on the design, performance, and analysis of epidemiological research studies. Classes will be conducted as lectures with sample analyses. The course aims to provide a thorough orientation to the fundamentals of the design, performance, and analysis of epidemiological research studies.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

- PHEP 604. Epidemiology of Infectious Disease 2 Units
Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences.
Description: This course will discuss the epidemiology and prevention of infectious disease.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PHEP 605. Research in Infectious Disease 1 Unit
Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences.
Corequisite(s): Concurrent enrollment in PHEP 604.
Description: This course provides students with an opportunity to expand the content of epidemiology of infectious disease with a research project.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PHEP 606. Genetic and Molecular Epidemiology 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences.
Description: The course examines basic principles of Mendelian inheritance in humans and the fundamentals of genetic action in relation to disease etiology.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PHEP 607. Epidemiology of Cancer 2 Units
Term Typically Offered: Spring Only
Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences and successful completion of PHEP 616 or PHEP 622.
Description: This course reviews the epidemiology of selected cancers and the relationship between environmental and genetic factors in cancer etiology. The roles of risk assessment and screening for cancers in selected organ systems are also addressed.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PHEP 608. Research in Cancer 1 Unit
Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences.
Corequisite(s): Concurrent enrollment in PHEP 607.
Description: This course provides students with an opportunity to expand the content of epidemiology of cancer with a site-specific, directed research experience.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PHEP 609. Epidemiology of Cardiometabolic Disease 2 Units
Term Typically Offered: Spring Only
Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences and successful completion of PHEP-616 or PHEP-622.
Description: This course focuses on the epidemiology of metabolic syndrome, and related disorders, including hypertension, dyslipidemia, atherosclerosis, heart disease, stroke, diabetes, kidney disease, and dementia.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PHEP 610. Research in Cardiovascular Disease 1 Unit
Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences.
Corequisite(s): Concurrent enrollment in PHEP 609.
Description: This course provides students with an opportunity to expand the content of epidemiology of cardiovascular disease with a research project.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PHEP 611. Nutritional Epidemiology 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences.
Description: This course examines epidemiologic methodology in relation to nutritional measures and the epidemiology of nutritional diseases and disorders.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PHEP 612. Statistics for Epidemiologic Research and Practice 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall Only
Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in the MS program in Epidemiology.
Description: This course introduces students to essential statistical concepts and problem-solving skills for epidemiologists. In this course, students will conduct statistical analyses and present results for practical or research settings.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PHEP 613. Epidemiology of Aging and Disability 3 Units
Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences.
Description: This course covers the principles and methods of epidemiology as applied to the study of aging. Major research issues in aging epidemiology and methods to study them will be presented.
For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)
- PHEP 614. Introduction to Clinical Epidemiology 2 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring
Prerequisite(s): Enrolled in the MS in Clinical Investigation Sciences, the Certificate in Clinical Investigation Sciences, or the MS in Epidemiology.
Description: This course introduces the student to the basic concepts of clinical epidemiology, including epidemiological study designs and methods applied in clinical research for determining the sensitivity and specificity of diagnostic criteria, efficacy of treatments and interventions, and evaluating prognosis and outcomes.

PHEP 615. Foundations of Global Maternal and Child Health 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): Enrollment in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences.Description: This course provides an overview of global maternal and child health (MCH), including both international and U.S. contexts. The course introduce the main components of MCH, MCH history, programs and policies, data sources, epidemiologic issues, and specific MCH challenges for the future. The primary goals of the course are to introduce masters and doctoral students to the issues that affect the health of women and children. This course will incorporate various theories and perspectives, such as the life course perspective; human growth and development; biological, environmental, and social factors related to maternal and child health. This is a survey course that will cover MCH theory, policy, programs, epidemiology, child growth and development, maternal health, and environmental aspects of health. Cross-cutting themes will include socioeconomic aspects, data and epidemiology, and policy.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHEP 616. Disease Surveillance and Health Statistics 3 Units*Prerequisite(s): PHEP 501 and enrollment in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences.Description: This course reviews the basic concepts and terminology of disease surveillance and covers the spectrum of health statistics, including population censuses, health surveys and disease reporting systems.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHEP 617. Field Epidemiology 3 Units*Prerequisite(s): PHEP 501 and enrollment in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences.Description: This course focuses on the practical aspects of doing field epidemiology.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHEP 618. Epidemiologic Methods I 4 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): Enrollment in the MS in Epidemiology program.Description: This course provides an intensive review of epidemiologic methods used in a variety of study designs.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHEP 619. Biology of Disease in Populations 3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): Enrolled in the MS program in Epidemiology and successful completion of PHEP 618 and PHEP 612, or permission of instructor.Description: This course provides a broad overview of the biology and basic anatomy, biochemistry, physiology, and pathophysiology of common acute and chronic diseases and conditions from the epidemiologic perspective.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHEP 620. Environmental and Occupational Epidemiology 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): Completion of or concurrent enrollment in PHEP-602 Epidemiological Methods or enrolled in the MS in Epidemiology program.Description: This course offers an overview of selected topics in environmental and occupational epidemiology and methods for studying environmental and occupational determinants of disease.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHEP 621. Statistical Foundations for Epidemiology 4 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): Enrollment in the PhD in Public Health Sciences specialization in Epidemiology program.Description: This course introduces essential statistical concepts and foundations for epidemiologists. It is designed for epidemiology students to exercise statistical theory and computer programming using statistical software as applied to epidemiologic problem-solving.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHEP 622. Population Pathology 3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): Enrollment in the Public Health Sciences PhD program with specialization in Epidemiology.Description: This course introduces students to the physiologic measures and biomarkers that are used by public health researchers and practitioners to assess the health status of populations.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHEP 623. Theoretical Foundations of Epidemiology 3 Units*Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in the MS program in Epidemiology or the Public Health Sciences PhD program specialization in Epidemiology.Description: This course provides an overview of the history of epidemiology, the development of theory, study designs and methods, and ethical and legal issues in the translation of epidemiologic findings into public health policy.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHEP 624. Methods in Reproductive and Perinatal Epidemiology 3 Units*Prerequisite(s): Successful completion of, or concurrent enrollment in, PHEP 501.Description: This course allows students to pursue foundational studies in the epidemiology of reproduction and maternal/child health with an emphasis on the biology of reproduction, epidemiological studies, and maternal and perinatal health.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

PHEP 625. Child Health & Development3 Units*Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences.Description: This course focuses on the core processes of human health and development from infancy through adolescence in global contexts covering the developed and developing worlds. This course covers developmental theories, issues and research findings related to physical growth and cognitive, emotional, and social development. This course also covers evaluation and efficacy of popular early intervention programs and policies designed to enhance development in at risk populations of children. Cross-cutting themes will include socioeconomic and cultural aspects of growth and development, epidemiology of disease, data sources, and policy considerations.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHEP 626. Introduction to Social Epidemiology*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Occasionally OfferedPrerequisite(s): Enrollment in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences.Description: This course is an introduction to Social Epidemiology, with an emphasis on the theoretical underpinning of social epidemiology and methodologic issues, including definition/measurement of social constructs, appropriate research designs, and analytic approaches. Topics used as lens for understanding social epidemiologic theory and methods focus on global and domestic maternal and child health.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHEP 627. Survey Research Methods*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyDescription: This course will provide students with a comprehensive understanding of survey research methods. It will focus on all aspects of the survey research process, from sampling, design of instruments prior to data collection, including online instruments, and including analysis of survey data and reporting. Students will learn about sources of bias, psychometrics (assessing validity and reliability), measurement theory, and ethical issues. They will also gain first-hand experience of survey analysis using applied techniques.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHEP 628. Computational Epidemiology with SAS*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): Enrolled in the MS program in Epidemiology and Population Health and successful completion of PHEP 618 and PHEP 612, or permission of instructor.Description: This course provides an overview of data management using SAS statistical software, as well as common statistical methods used in epidemiology with hands-on application to existing or simulated datasets under a variety of study designs.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHEP 629. Computational Epidemiology with R*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): Enrolled in the MS program in Epidemiology and Population Health and successful completion of PHEP 618 and PHEP 612, or permission of instructor.Description: This course provides an overview of data management using R statistical software, as well as common statistical methods used in epidemiology with hands-on application to existing or simulated datasets under a variety of study designs.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHEP 630. Study Coordination Skills for Epidemiologic Research*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): Enrolled in the MS program in Epidemiology and Population Health and successful completion of PHEP 618 and PHEP 612, or permission of instructor.Description: This course will provide students with an introduction to the basic and skill-based practical methods needed for the coordination and management of a population-based epidemiologic research study. This will include research ethics and associated Internal Review Board (IRB) submissions and amendments, coordination and tracking of study processes and progress, instruments for data collection, and other skills necessary for the management of a successful epidemiologic research study.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHEP 632. Epidemiologic Methods II*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): Enrollment in the Public Health Sciences PhD program with specialization in Epidemiology and successful completion of or concurrent enrollment in PHEP 621.Description: This is an intermediate course in epidemiologic methods with a focus on epidemiologic measures of disease occurrence and measures of association and their confidence intervals, study designs including cross-sectional, randomized control trials, cohorts, and case-control studies. Sample size and power calculations are also addressed for designing epidemiologic studies.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHEP 633. Epidemiologic Methods III*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): Enrollment in the Public Health Sciences PhD program with specialization in Epidemiology and successful completion of PHEP 621 and PHEP 632.Description: This course provides an intensive orientation and assessment of epidemiologic biases and epidemiologic concepts with hands-on application to existing or simulated datasets under a variety of epidemiologic study designs.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

PHEP 647. Epidemiology Data Management & Analytics Lab 2 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): PHEP 602 or concurrently.Description: Graduate student in public health services will learn to analyze epidemiologic data using the Epi info and SAS statistical packages for Windows.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHEP 650. Advanced Topics in Epidemiology 1-3 Units*Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences.Description: The purpose of this course is to provide an opportunity to address issues in Epidemiology not covered in the regularly offered curriculum.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHEP 655. Emerging Issues in Epidemiology 3 Units*Prerequisite(s): PHEP 501 and enrollment in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences.Description: This course is an overview of emerging topics in epidemiology. Emphasis is on the role that practicing epidemiologists have played or are playing in current public health events.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHEP 666. Master's Independent Study in Epidemiology and Population Health 1-6 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): Enrolled in the MS in Epidemiology or the MPH concentration in Epidemiology and Population Health.Description: Course allows master's students to pursue advanced study with faculty guidance on a topic related to epidemiology and population health.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHEP 701. Advanced Epidemiologic Methods 3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): Enrollment in the Public Health Sciences PhD program with specialization in Epidemiology and successful completion of PHEP 621, PHEP 632, and PHEP 633.Description: This course provides an intensive review of common and advanced statistical methods used in epidemiology with hands-on application to existing or simulated datasets under a variety of study designs.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHEP 702. Epidemiologic Research Management 4 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): Enrollment in the Public Health Sciences PhD program with specialization in Epidemiology and successful completion of PHEP 621, PHEP 632 and PHEP 633.Description: This course provides a comprehensive introduction to the practical methods necessary for conducting epidemiologic research including study design, regulations, databases, sampling, recruitment and tracking, instrument design, and data quality control.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHEP 703. Computational Epidemiology 3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): PHEP 621, PHEP 623, PHEP 618, and PHEP 701; instructor permission is required for MS Epidemiology students.Description: This course provides an intensive review of common and statistical and machine learning techniques used in computational epidemiology with hands-on application to existing or simulated datasets under a variety of study designs.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHEP 750. Seminar I in Epidemiology 3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): Enrollment in the Public Health Sciences PhD program with specialization in Epidemiology.Description: This course provides doctoral students the opportunity to engage with faculty as junior-peers and discuss a variety of topics related to the professional practice of epidemiology. The content of this course will vary from semester to semester based on the instructor and needs of the students.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHEP 751. Seminar II in Epidemiology 3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): Enrollment in the Public Health Sciences PhD program with specialization in Epidemiology and successful completion of PHEP-750 Seminar I in Epidemiology.Description: This course provides doctoral students the opportunity to engage with faculty as junior-peers and discuss a variety of topics related to the professional practice of epidemiology.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHEP 752. Seminar III in Epidemiology 1 Unit*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): Enrollment in the Public Health Sciences PhD program with specialization in Epidemiology and successful completion of PHEP 751 Seminar II in Epidemiology.Description: This course provides doctoral students the opportunity to engage with faculty as junior-peers and discuss a variety of topics related to the professional practice of epidemiology.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

PHEP 777. Dissertation Research 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): Completion of Doctoral Qualifying Examination for Public Health Sciences PhD program with specialization in Epidemiology.

Description: This course is for mentored dissertation research in the PhD Program in Epidemiology.

PHEP 778. Doctoral Independent Study in Epidemiology and Population Health 1-6 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer

Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in the PhD program in Public Health Sciences with specialization in Epidemiology.

Description: Course allows doctoral students to pursue advanced study with faculty guidance on a topic related to epidemiology and population health.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

Some courses may carry fees beyond the standard tuition costs to cover additional support or materials. Program-, subject- and course-specific fee information can be found on the Office of the Bursar website (<https://louisville.edu/bursar/tuitionfee/university-fees/>).

PHPB 501. Introduction to Public Health Behavior 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences.

Description: This course reviews theoretical constructs of the causation of health-related behavior, including preventive, early diagnosis, treatment and rehabilitative behavior.

PHPB 611. Community-Centered Engagement and Assessment 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in the MPH program in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences or instructor permission.

Description: Students in this course develop and apply the knowledge, skills, and methods for conducting community health assessments. Students will identify factors that affect the health of a population and discuss the assessment process as a tool for community organizing.

PHPB 612. Health Communication: Theory and Practice 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Description: This course uses health communication theories and methods to design and evaluate health communication materials that capitalize on opportunities afforded by the current context. Students will learn the concepts of effective public health communication across multiple media and levels of the social ecology, considering a variety of audiences, and achieving multiple purposes. Students will also learn to critically analyze examples of communication and develop culturally responsive communication material oriented towards public health interventions. The course will emphasize the development of delivering health information in a meaningful, actionable, and accessible manner.

Note: Cross-listed with COMM 652.

PHPB 614. Public Health Intervention Design, Implementation, and Sustainment 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Description: The course establishes basic skills for public health program planning and implementation. Students will learn how to apply the results of a community assessment to create a theory of change, and to design and describe the implementation of public health interventions to enhance population health and promote health equity. In this course, students will develop skills regarding the purpose, procedures, terminology, and specific techniques in public health intervention design and implementation at multiple levels of the social ecology. Students will also consider factors that impact interventions sustainment and achieve health outcomes.

PHPB 615. Program Evaluation 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Prerequisite(s): Completion of PHPB 614 or instructor permission.

Description: This graduate level course presents advanced concepts in program evaluation and builds on PHPB-614 Public Health Intervention Design, Implementation and Sustainment. Students who enroll in this seminar-oriented course will complete a program evaluation project and apply program theory, principles and methods in program evaluation. Students will learn about formative research, process evaluation, impact assessment, cost analysis, and theory-based evaluations. Students will gain experience by designing a logic model, selecting indicators and data sources, and designing an evaluation plan to measure both processes and impacts of interventions.

PHPB 630. Social and Structural Determinants of Health 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in the MPH program in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences or instructor permission.

Description: The purpose of this course is to introduce social and structural factors that impact health, including theories and evidence that support multiple underlying determinants of health in populations. This course will explore how social influences such as socioeconomic status, the natural and physical environment, education, employment, gender, race/ethnicity, sexual orientation, and housing/neighborhood quality affect population health. This course will also consider intervention approaches to improve population health outcomes and address health inequities. This course examines structural factors that impact population health in the US as well as structural interventions to address health inequities.

PHPB 635. Health Promotion Policy Development 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in the MPH program in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences or instructor permission.

Description: This seminar and lab-structured course will provide a review of social justice as a foundation of public health. We will focus on equity and inclusion in the policy process as core principles and a mechanism toward health equity. Policy development is a process and an outcome and in this course, students will also learn by doing field-based research. Finally, students will understand how principles of political sociology can apply to population health and inform policy development.

PHPB 650. Advanced Topics in Health Promotion and Behavioral Sciences 1-3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered

Description: An in-depth treatment of one or more advanced topics in health promotion and behavioral sciences, designed to advance the student's understanding in the field and not covered in other courses.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

PHPB 651. Equitable Leadership and Program Management in Public Health 4 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Description: This course exposes students to the principles of effective leadership, applying leadership and ethical principles and theories to enhance professional capabilities in the context of creating an equitable work setting and intervention delivery. The course will examine the design, management, and leadership of teams in organizational settings focusing on the interpersonal processes and structural characteristics that influence the effectiveness of teams, the dynamics of intra-team relationships, and sharing of knowledge and information in teams. Students will also learn to manage resources within a framework of managing people, processes, budgets, and organizational design focused on diversity, equity, and inclusion. The course covers the role of grants in funding, implementing, and evaluating public health interventions with particular emphasis on identifying grant opportunities, understanding the components of a grant, and developing a grant to fund a public health interventions.

PHPB 652. Evidence-Based Practices in Public Health 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Description: This course provides an overview of the design and conduct of research in the social and behavioral sciences as applied to public health. Students will learn how to write a literature review, including where to find public health literature and how to critique presented evidence as it influences evidence-based practice. Students will also examine the formulation of a research question, selection of a research design, selection of a study site and population, methods of data collection, and measurement validity and reliability. The aim is to give students a broad background and an understanding of strengths and weaknesses of research designs used in the social sciences so they can be thoughtful producers, and/or critical and skeptical consumers of research.

PHPB 701. Theoretical Basis of Health Promotion 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): Doctoral student in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences PhD in Public Health Sciences, Health Promotion Specialization program or instructor permission.

Description: Explores historical developments in the health promotion, current state of the health promotion discipline and main emphases are PRECEDE/PROCEED and other planning models, and research issues for the future.

PHPB 703. Health Promotion Research Methods and Design 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): Doctoral student in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences PhD in Public Health Sciences, Health Promotion Specialization program or instructor permission.

Description: Behavioral sciences, such as health promotion are dependent on rigorous studies carried out by well-trained researchers. In this course, we will explore the commonly used research designs. Students will learn how the validity of information and data gathered is limited by, among other factors, the research methods chosen, the carefulness and attentiveness of the researcher, the willingness of the participant, and the selection of statistical analyses.

PHPB 705. Policy to Advance Health Equity 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Even Years

Prerequisite(s): Doctoral student in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences PhD in Public Health Sciences, Health Promotion Specialization program, or instructor approval.

Description: This seminar-structured course provides a review of the extent and nature of community health problems requiring community-based solutions, as opposed to solutions for individuals. Included in the course will be concepts of community organizing, empowerment and processes of policy advocacy and formation. The course will develop practitioner competencies as well as an agenda for addressing the issues.

PHPB 709. Philosophy of Science & Evaluation Theory 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer

Prerequisite(s): Doctoral student in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences PhD in Public Health Sciences, Health Promotion & Behavioral Sciences Specialization program or instructor permission.

Description: Students in this course develop a deeper understanding of the ethics and politics surrounding epistemology and ontology and apply this to the theoretical underpinnings of evaluating public health programs.

PHPB 710. Social Justice and Health Equity Research 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Prerequisite(s): Doctoral student in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences PhD in Public Health Sciences, Health Promotion Specialization program, or instructor approval.

Description: This course presents concepts and approaches in Social Justice and Health Equity Research. Students will learn about emancipatory approaches to research, social justice movements in health, and community-engaged research practices.

PHPB 711. Qualitative Research Methods in Public Health 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): Doctoral student in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences PhD in Public Health Sciences, Health Promotion Specialization program, or instructor approval.

Description: The course presents theories and methods in qualitative research design and inquiry. Students will apply qualitative data collection, coding, and analysis skills to public health problems. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

PHPB 722. Health Risk Communication 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): Doctoral student in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences PhD in Public Health Sciences, Health Promotion Specialization program, or instructor approval.

Description: This course presents the principles and theories of health risk communication and promotes an understanding of the psychological responses to risk and risk messages.

PHPB 730. Teaching Seminar in Health Promotion and Behavioral Sciences 1 Unit

Grading Basis: Pass/Fail

Term Typically Offered: Summer Only

Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in the PhD program in Public Health Sciences or instructor permission.

Description: This course will introduce students to a variety of pedagogical theories and practices. In addition, students will be introduced to concepts regarding trauma-informed and culturally responsive educational practice.

PHPB 731. Teaching Lab in Health Promotion and Behavioral Sciences 2 Units

Grading Basis: Pass/Fail

Term Typically Offered: Summer Only

Prerequisite(s): Completion of or concurrent enrollment in PHPB 730.

Description: This course is designed as a practice lab for doctoral students interested in teaching at the college level. Building upon the Teaching Seminar course, this lab will provide students with a guided forum to develop and test classroom and learning tools, activities, and assessments to further their teaching skills, and will address classroom management topics and strategies. This course is required for PhD students in Health Promotion and Behavioral Sciences to be able to teach a course for the department independently at the undergraduate level.

Subject-area course lists indicate courses currently active for offering at the University of Louisville. Not all courses are scheduled in any given academic term. For class offerings in a specific semester, refer to the Schedule of Classes (https://csprd.louisville.edu/psp/ps_class/EMPLOYEE/PSFT_CS/c/COMMUNITY_ACCESS.CLASS_SEARCH.x/?state=62dab551a0d600a5e8237359c50704e59007&duo_code=sjUx2OSTj21bIWVEuQ3Z1YRjHmfxpqoV).

500-level courses generally are included in both the undergraduate- and graduate-level course listings; however, specific course/section offerings may vary between semesters. Students are responsible for ensuring that they enroll in courses that are applicable to their particular academic programs.

Course Fees

Some courses may carry fees beyond the standard tuition costs to cover additional support or materials. Program-, subject- and course-specific fee information can be found on the Office of the Bursar website (<https://louisville.edu/bursar/tuitionfee/university-fees/>).

PHMS 501. Introduction to Public Health Practice and Administration3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): Enrolled in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences.Description: This course emphasizes the practical application of the principles of health care organizations to public health at the national, state and local levels.Note: Taught only at the graduate level.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHMS 505. Governance and Management of Healthcare Organizations*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): Enrolled in the MS in Health Administration or the undergraduate Minor in Healthcare Management program in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences.Description: This course seeks to provide the student with an understanding of organizations and leadership from dominant ways of thinking about them to ways informed by a complexity perspective. Course participants will read about and discuss a broad range of perspective about what constitutes an organization and leadership of it. Particular attention will be given to the organizational experiences of the student and the experience of the class in being together. Course is held on the Health Sciences Campus and is co-scheduled with the graduate credit section of this course.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHMS 509. Health Finance and Financial Management*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): Enrolled in the MS in Health Administration, Graduate Certificate in Healthcare Financial Management, MPH, or the undergraduate Minor in Healthcare Management program in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences.Description: This course is designed to provide an overview of health finance and financial management, including context of health finance and the approaches and processes involved in managing the health enterprise. Course is held on the Health Sciences Campus and is co-scheduled with the graduate credit section of this course.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

PHMS 520. Foundations of Public Health in Health Management 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Prerequisite(s): Enrolled in the MS in Health Management program in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences.

Description: This course is designed to introduce new students in the Masters of Science in Health Administration (MSHA) to the field of Public Health in the United States. It provides a broad overview of the field of public health. With a population health focus, we look at protecting and promoting the health needs of a community using the tools of public health like the community needs assessment, and including core areas of epidemiology, biostatistics, health promotion, environmental health, and health care administration as well as introducing students to the Foundational Public Health Knowledge Competencies as prescribed by the Council for Education in Public Health (CEPH).

PHMS 530. Comparative Health Systems 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Description: This course examines health delivery and public health systems from a global perspective. The course focuses on teaching students to describe elements of these systems, the environment in which the systems exist, and the internal and external forces through which systems change. Although the structure of different health systems vary, most also have substantial similarities especially in the areas of improving access and quality, while minimizing costs. The course focuses on health systems, using examples of health systems in different countries to demonstrate system similarities and differences. The course will provide a framework for analyzing different models of organizing health care and public health in settings around the world. The course will engage students in examining health systems outside the United States, focusing specifically on how a country's history, geography, government, and economy influence the delivery of health services.

PHMS 610. Health Policy and Analysis 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Description: This course is designed to introduce students to health policy, mechanisms through which policy is made at the state and federal level, and strategies for health policy analysis.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

PHMS 615. Introduction to Health Systems 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Description: This course will provide an introduction to the health sector as it currently operates in the US. A systems-theory based approach, informed by complexity theory, will be used to present health systems as complex adaptive networks. Through a review of the history of the health sector the student will learn how the industry has evolved (adapted) to where it is today, and where it may be going in the future.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

PHMS 620. Healthcare Strategic Management 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in the MS in Health Administration, the Certificate in Healthcare Management, or the Certificate in Healthcare Quality and Project Management in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences.

Description: This course offers an introduction to strategic management within contemporary healthcare organizations and markets. Lectures and assignments will focus on various topics including organizational strategy formulation, implementation, and evaluation.

Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

PHMS 625. Population Health Management 3 Units

Description: This course will provide an introduction to managing the health of populations. Population health can be defined by geography and demographics. Examples of defined populations include: the population within the catchment area of a hospital, the members of a health maintenance organization, the persons served by an accountable care organization, and the population employed in a workplace. Improving the health of populations has always been a high priority for public health professionals but has been less of a priority for managers of health care organizations, with their focus on the acute-care needs of individual patients.

PHMS 630. Human Resource Management in the Public Health Sector 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in the School of Public Health and Information Sciences.

Description: The purpose of this course is to provide the master's degree/ PhD student in public health and health care fields an overview of Human Resources Management. This will include looking at the framework of human resources management in various settings; planning and developing a competent workforce in various settings; and practice in techniques for training, mentoring and evaluating employees as well as a range of disciplinary actions.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

PHMS 635. Health Law and Ethics 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in the Master of Science in Health Administration or MPH concentration in Health Policy program.

Description: This course provides an overview of major contemporary legal and ethical issues related to administrative decision making in health care and population health.

PHMS 637. MSHDA Capstone Course 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in the Master of Science in Health Data Analytics program. Description: This course is an integrative learning experience drawing on all companies presented in the MSHDA program. It requires the students to work independently as a member of a team to complete a comprehensive and relevant health data analytics for a healthcare-related organization and to successfully pass a competency examination. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	PHMS 642. Data Mining II 3 Units Prerequisite(s): PHMS 641. Description: This is the second of a two semester graduate level course on data mining/big data analytics. It focuses on practical implementation and interpretation of the most commonly used techniques in analysis of very large datasets. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
PHMS 638. Data Security & Electronic Health Records 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Fall Only Prerequisite(s): Enrolled in MS in Health Data Analytics program. Description: The course will focus on the framework, the real-world use, and the critical data security issues in deployment of Electronic Health Records, (EHRs) to improve the quality of health care delivery. Students will learn functionality of EHRs through hands-on labs, technical infrastructures require for EHRs (e.g., architecture, network, security design), understand how EHRs change health care delivery workflows, best practice for deploying EHRs (e.g., project management, typical budgets, system selection, HIPAA governmental requirements, funding), and data security-related issues critical to EHRs implementation. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	PHMS 643. Data Management in Health Service Research 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in the MS in Health Data Analytics or PhD in PHS specialization in Health Management & Policy program. Description: Course allows students to pursue study with faculty guidance on data management in health service research. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
PHMS 639. Health Data Analytics Practicum 1-3 Units Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): Enrolled in MS in Health Data Analytics program. Description: The practicum experience is designed to bridge the gap between academia and health data analytics practice by providing field experience at a health data analytics-related worksite. Each MSHDA student identifies a practice site, develops a learning agreement in consultation with the practice site mentor and faculty mentor, works at the site to address the components of the learning agreement and to gain experience within the organization, prepares a written characterization of the practice site, and prepares written and oral reports describing the practicum experience. Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	PHMS 644. Biomedical Foundations for Health Analytics 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Fall Only Prerequisite(s): Enrolled in MS in Health Data Analytics program. Description: This course will offer an integrative molecular and biological perspective on public health problems and health data analytics. Students will explore population biology and ecological principles underlying public health and reviews molecular biology in relation to public health biology. Lectures focus on specific diseases of viral, bacterial, and environmental origin. Instructors will use specific examples of each type to develop the general principles that govern interactions among susceptible organisms and etiologic agents and devotes special attention to factors that act in reproduction and development. The course will focus on common elements including origin and dissemination of drug resistance, organization and transmission of virulence determinants, modulation of immune responses, disruption of signal transduction pathways, and perturbation of gene expression. Also considers the role of the genetic constitution of the host. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
PHMS 641. Data Mining I 3 Units Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in any of the following programs: MS in Health Data Analytics, MS in Biostatistics concentrations in Biostatistics or Bioinformatics, MS in Artificial Intelligence in Medicine, or PhD in PHS specialization in Health Management & Policy. Description: The course is first in a two semester sequence graduate level introduction to data mining/big data analytics. It focuses on practical implementation and interpretation of the most commonly used techniques in analysis of very large datasets. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	PHMS 645. Health Services Research Methods I 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Prerequisite(s): Successful completion of PHMS 670 and PHMS 671. Description: The course is designed to introduce students to quantitative techniques and considerations appropriate for observational studies in Health Services Research. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
	PHMS 646. Health Services Research Methods II 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Fall Only Prerequisite(s): Successful completion of PHMS-645 Health Services Research Methods I. Description: This course is designed to prepare students to answer and critically examine questions regarding casual inference in Health Services and Health Policy Research as well as other research settings using observational data. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)

PHMS 650. Advanced Topics in Health Management and Systems Science3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): Enrollment in the PhD in Public Health Sciences specialization in Health Management & Policy.Description: This course will usually focus on one topic in advanced health management and systems sciences, not usually covered in a regularly offered course (or if offered in a regularly offered course, not covered in-depth).For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHMS 662. Health Economics*3 Units*Description: The course uses principles of microeconomic analysis to study health care systems: demand for medical services; role of health insurance; productivity/cost measurement; labor markets and competition.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHMS 670. Statistical Data Management*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, SpringPrerequisite(s): Enrolled in the MS in Health Data Analytics or PhD in Public Health Sciences specialization in Health Management & Policy degree programs, or with instructor permission.Description: The course is designed as an introduction to data management and analysis in SAS (Statistical Analysis System) and Stat (Stat Statistical Software). Data management and graphics will be practiced, and linear regression basics where data summary, regression in levels and logs, correlation analysis, hypothesis testing, specification analysis, prediction, using sampling weights, and model diagnostics will be discussed. This course covers all components of econometric modeling, namely, model selection, estimation, diagnostic checks, and model re-specification. Health data will be used in both midterm and final projects of the course.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)PHMS 671. Statistical Analysis for Population Health*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, SpringDescription: Pre-Requisite: PHMS 670 or Instructor permission.

This course is designed as an introduction to statistical analysis for population health in IBM SPSS Statistics 26.0 software package. The course covers basic components of statistical analysis for population health including linear regression, logistic regression, Cox regression, propensity score analysis, cluster analysis, discriminant analysis, multivariate analysis of covariance, repeated measures, and regression trees. Health data will mainly be used in examples and the final project of the course.

Health Operations & Management Science*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyDescription: This course introduces and reviews the field of operations management as applied to healthcare organizations. It demonstrates the important relationship between operations research and the management science of complex healthcare delivery organizations.For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

PHMS 686. MSHA Practicum Experience I 1 Unit Grading Basis: Pass/Fail Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Prerequisite(s): Enrollment in the Masters of Science in Health Administration program. Description: The MSHA practicum documents students' mid-program administrative experience in a healthcare setting. The practice experience occurs in a carefully selected healthcare organization approved by the MSHA Director. Students are encouraged to select a practicum based on their career interests. A faculty advisor supervises the internship-type experience in tandem with a qualified preceptor at the practicum site. Our goal is that the preceptor serves as a mentor for the student. Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.	PHMS 690. MSHA Capstone Course 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Description: This course is an integrative learning experience drawing on all competencies presented in the MSHA program. It requires the students to work independently as a member of a team to complete a comprehensive and relevant business plan for a healthcare-related organization and to successfully pass an oral examination. PHMS 705. Mixed & Qualitative Research Methods for Health Services Research 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Spring Even YearsPrerequisite(s): Enrolled in the PhD in Public Health Sciences Specialization in Health Management and Policy program and successful completion of PHMS 670 and PHMS 671.

Description: This course will provide an overview of qualitative and mixed methods research with an emphasis on its application in health services research. In this course, students will learn philosophical assumptions and interpretive frameworks, foundations of qualitative and mixed methods research design, and an overview of coding and analysis techniques for qualitative data. Students will work collaboratively to design a one-on-one interview guide, and collect, code, and analyze data. Students will work individually to develop a mixed methods research project proposal that will be submitted as the final course project. The course will have an applied focus, and will consist of brief lectures, student-led discussions and presentations, and presentations of applied research from guest speakers.

MSSW 695. Cultural Context & Social Services with Latinx Individuals Families & Communities 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Fall, Spring

Description: This course surveys a variety of historical & contemporary social justice issues necessary for understanding the culture & well-being of Latinx & Latin American individuals, families, & communities. The legacies of colonization, genocide, & slavery of Indigenous & African populations, will be explored. Particular attention will be paid to the impacts of class, race, & language in contemporary Latinx communities. Transmigration, immigration, refugee status & asylum seeking, & their legal & psychosocial implications, also will be covered. Social justice movements in response to systemic oppression, political unrest, & violence occurring in Latin American & in the United States also will be reviewed. In addition, cultural values that may be particularly salient & meaningful to Latinx peoples as well as techniques identified by grassroots organizations &/or the research literature as culturally-responsive approaches for engaging, assessing, &/or intervening with these populations.

500-level courses generally are included in both the undergraduate- and graduate-level course listings; however, specific course/section offerings may vary between semesters. Students are responsible for ensuring that they enroll in courses that are applicable to their particular academic programs.

Course Fees

Some courses may carry fees beyond the standard tuition costs to cover additional support or materials. Program-, subject- and course-specific fee information can be found on the Office of the Bursar website (<https://louisville.edu/bursar/tuitionfee/university-fees/>).

SW 698. Structured Independent Study 1-4 UnitsPrerequisite(s): Permission of the Director, Instructor/Advisor.

Description: Addresses content not covered in existing courses; provides for the development of content otherwise unavailable. Prescribed content is addressed in seminars, conferences and readings.

SW 729. Pro Seminar I: Foundations of Scholarly Writing 1 UnitTerm Typically Offered: Fall Only

Prerequisite(s): Restricted to students admitted to the PhD Program in Social Work.

Description: This is the 1st of 2 Professional Seminar courses, which bookend the PhD coursework. This course is also aligned with SW 761: Advanced Scholarly Writing to Fund and Disseminate Research to Diverse Audiences, which it taken in the fall of your second year. The goals of this course are to improve your understanding of the process and mechanics of writing within academia and provide a foundation for you to become leaders in the social work profession as researchers, academicians, and advocates. Students will infuse practices that uplift people, families, small groups, organizations, communities and society into their professional development plan and will be encouraged to frame the introduction of their manuscript from a lens that ensures freedom.

SW 732. Theory I: Philosophy of Science & the Development and Application of Theory in Social Work Research 3 UnitsTerm Typically Offered: Fall Only

Prerequisite(s): Restricted to students admitted to the PhD Program in Social Work.

Description: This course explores the nature of knowledge and how it is generated and acquired. We will focus on the nature and role of theory in contemporary social welfare scholarship informed by a central commitment to uplifting people, families and small groups. This is the first of two theory classes that students take and builds on the skills introduced in methods courses. Doctoral students will be introduced to key constructs in the philosophy of social science and how various theories of knowledge inform our work as social scientists. We will explore the nature and role of theory in contemporary social science scholarship; examine a range of epistemologies through examples of associated research products; and evaluate issues of freedom for all within these frames. The course provides a platform to understand underlying assumptions of research methods including analysis of "Big Data," randomized controlled trials (RCTs), ethnographies, and a variety of other methods.

SW 733. Foundation Research Methods3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): This section is restricted to students admitted to the PhD Program in Social Work.

Description: The goals of this course are to teach students: (1) to implement the most appropriate research strategies in the pursuit of knowledge pertinent to social work-relevant topics, (2) to understand and critically assess reports of experimental and observational research studies, (3) to develop methodological strategies for testing important hypotheses and answering salient social work research questions. The course examines the four types of experimental validity [statistical conclusion, internal, construct, and external] and how to minimize threats to each. Issues regarding the selection and evaluation of measures including the various types of reliability and validity, sampling strategies, experimental and quasi-experimental study designs (including their underlying assumptions), and subsequent data analysis strategies are discussed.

SW 734. Introduction to Social Statistics and Data Analysis3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall OnlyPrerequisite(s): This section is restricted to students admitted to the PhD Program in Social Work.

Description: This is the first of two required PhD courses that focuses on quantitative data analysis. This course will focus on how to apply statistical approaches and ethical principles to all dimensions of diversity including ability, age, class, color, culture, ethnicity, family structure, gender identity/gender expression, marital status, national origin, race, religion or spirituality, sex, and sexual orientation. At the end of this course, students will be able to apply univariate and bivariate statistics, as well as analysis of variance, to a social science data set. They will also learn how to choose appropriate statistical analyses that answer research questions and hypotheses, conduct these analyses using STATA, interpret their findings, and communicate their results clearly and effectively.

SW 741. Systemic Change: Identifying and Intervening in Issues of Social Justice3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): This section is restricted to students admitted to the PhD Program in Social Work.

Description: This section is restricted to students admitted to the PhD Program in Social Work. Description: This course will allow students to learn and develop skills in effecting systems-level change with examples of system processes that are problematic and core content to understand issues facing our clients. Current manifestations of systematic change, such as the calls for reform and truth and reconciliation commissions will be covered. Students will also learn concrete strategies for engaging in ways to promote free expression in teaching, research, and community collaboration and advocacy.

SW 742. Theory II: Theory-Driven Analysis of Social Problems to Inform Practice & Social Welfare Policy3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): Restricted to students admitted to the PhD Program in Social Work.

Description: SW 742 is the second of two theory courses in the program, building on the foundation provided in SW 732. The goal of this course is for students to obtain a theoretical and conceptual framework for analyzing and understanding social problems and their implications for macro social work practice and social policy. Students will examine what the empirical literature tells us about a social problem, and compare and contrast the contribution of sociological, sociocultural, philosophical, political, and economic theories to our understanding of it. Another goal is for students to learn how to include the perspectives of everyone and enable a critical analysis of social problems and potential macro solutions which may promote freedom. Students will analyze current social policy and macro practice designed to address social problems and propose alternatives based on the application of theory.

SW 743. Advanced Research Methods3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): SW 733 Foundation Research Methods.

Description: This section is restricted to students admitted to the PhD Program in Social Work. This course is the second of two courses focused on quantitative methods, compliments the two data analysis courses, and prepares students for future independent studies and advanced scholarly writing to fund and disseminate research to diverse audiences. The course focuses on applying research approaches and ethical principles to all dimensions of diversity including ability, age, class, color, culture, ethnicity, family structure, gender identity/gender expression, marital status, national origin, race, religion or spirituality, sex, and sexual orientation. The major goals of this course are to teach students quantitative and mixed methods research designs, how each design addresses threats to validity, when each is most appropriate to answer various types of research questions, and how to execute each type of study ethically.

SW 744. Applied Regression Analysis3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): SW 734 Introduction to Social Statistics and Data Analysis.

Description: This section is restricted to students admitted to the PhD Program in Social Work. This is the second of two required PhD courses focusing on quantitative data analysis. This course covers and introduces a broad class of models often referred to as generalized linear models (GLM). We will discuss five major models within this class: models for continuous outcomes, binary outcomes, categorical outcomes, ordered outcomes, and count outcomes. Upon successful completion of the course, you will be able to: (a) read and evaluate published or presented research that uses regression techniques; (b) use STATA to create your own results from secondary data; (c) translate the results into more useful summaries through tables and figures of predicted outcomes; and (d) use statistics to evaluate practice and policy and promote social justice.

SW 750. Independent Study: Examination of Scholarly Literature 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer

Prerequisite(s): This section is restricted to students admitted to the PhD Program in Social Work.

Description: Student will focus in on a specific topic area for future research by conducting thorough literature reviews on the topics related to the area. The end result will be several tables summarizing the literature read and an integrative summary of the literature and potential gaps. This will set the student up to continue delving into the area over the next year so that by next summer, the topic is narrowed for the doctoral exams and the dissertation.

SW 751. Independent Study: Mentored Research Experience 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer

Prerequisite(s): This section is restricted to students admitted to the PhD Program in Social Work.

Description: Helps students understand the basics of research and statistical procedures so they are prepared to move through the additional research and statistical procedures in the doctoral program. Course will be approached from a dual perspective of client outcomes and program evaluation.

Note: approval granted from the Registrar's Office to re-use the catalog number for a new course.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

SW 752. Qualitative Methods: Design, Data Collection, and Analysis 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Summer Only

Prerequisite(s): This section is restricted to students admitted to the PhD Program in Social Work.

Description: SW 752 examines the philosophical foundations and epistemological perspectives involved in qualitative research. This course is the first part of a two-part series in which students embark on an IRB approved qualitative study which culminates into an analytic memo, which is the beginning of a publishable paper. This course includes study of traditions and methods (e.g., narrative inquiry, case studies, phenomenology, grounded theory, and ethnography); scientific and ethical issues; and techniques of data collection, analysis, and interpretation. Emphasis is given to the contribution of qualitative studies in expanding social work knowledge and anti-racist scholarship. Students will expand upon one of the five qualitative approaches by learning and applying Constructivist Grounded Theory (CGT) techniques to the analysis of data. This process will lead to the development of a conceptual formulation, analytic memos, and set the foundation for further analysis, interpretation, and writing.

Note: approval granted from the Registrar's Office to re-use the catalog number for a new course.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

SW 761. Advanced Scholarly Writing to Fund and Disseminate Research to Diverse Audience 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Description: Facilitates the student's completion of the dissertation prospectus and the dissertation itself. Students make formal presentations on their research plans addressing available literature, measurement and methodological issues, analysis of data, limitations, and the importance of investigation.

Note: Students who are taking the course and NOT in the PhD Social Work Program, should first consult with their program's advisor to ensure the course will count for credit toward their degree in their program, and then seek permission from the instructor of the course before they enroll.

SW 763. Teaching Practicum 3 Units

Prerequisite(s): Consent of instructor.

Description: Experience in planning and teaching a social work course including classroom teaching and evaluation of students' work.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

SW 764. Teaching in Social Work 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Prerequisite(s): This section is restricted to students admitted to the PhD Program in Social Work.

Description: This course is the first of two designed to expose doctoral level students to teaching and social work education. The goals of this course are to assist students in: (1) examining and appraising theories of teaching and learning to develop their own teaching philosophy, (2) designing course materials and integrating evidence-supported teaching methods and strategies into their teaching practice, and (3) evaluating their own teaching practice. The course introduces students to social work curriculum standards; theoretical perspectives of adult learning, teaching, and curriculum development; and various teaching methods, tools, and technology to assist prospective teachers with designing and developing a course, teaching in both online and face-to-face formats, assessing student progress, and embracing anti-racist classroom practices that promote learning among diverse learners.

SW 765. Advanced Qualitative Research: Design, Data Collection, and Analysis 3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Prerequisite(s): SW 752.

Description: This section is restricted to students admitted to the PhD Program in Social Work. Interpretive approaches to systematic inquiry that contrast with the natural science model of social research will be critically examined, focusing on classic and contemporary theories to understand and interpret the social world and the role of qualitative methods in the study and improvement of people's lives. The first part of the courses focuses on qualitative inquiry from the multiple disciplines' views, and the second part examines qualitative inquiry from the social work perspective.

SW 766. Doctoral Foundations1-3 Units*Grading Basis: Pass/Fail

Description: Preparation for entering SW doctoral students for two semesters of study of Advanced Research & Design and Analysis (ARDA I and ARDA II). A rigorous review of research conceptualization, design and sampling procedures will be a major focus of the class. Students will develop basic skills utilizing Predictive Analytics Software (PASW, formerly SPSS) and in addition to be compliant with school, university and federal standards for research by completing all required Institutional Review Board (IRB) trainings.

SW 780. Pro Seminar II: Comprehensive examination Preparation 1 Unit*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): SW 729.

Description: This section is restricted to students admitted to the PhD Program in Social Work. This is the 2nd part of the pro-seminar series. This course emphasizes preparation for the comprehensive exam process as well as knowledge and skills necessary to become leaders in the social work profession as researchers, academicians, and advocates for social justice.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

SW 781. Teaching Practicum3 Units*Grading Basis: Pass/FailTerm Typically Offered: Spring Only

Prerequisite(s): SW 764; restricted to students admitted to the PhD Program in Social Work.

Description: This teaching practicum seminar is a structured opportunity for students who are teaching to engage in dialogue, structured activities, and reflection focused on teaching topics. There are two requirements for this course: 1. Weekly co-teaching with teaching mentor. Students will be partnered with a teaching mentor to co-teach the assigned faculty member's course. 2. Teaching Practicum Seminar. Students will attend and participate in this bi-weekly 2.5-hour seminar while also teaching their undergraduate or graduate class, weekly, under the mentorship of a faculty member. Additional focus will be around the knowledge and skills to prepare one to work with students around anti-racism and whose teaching skills are anti-racist. Grading will be on a pass-fail basis.

Note: Formerly offered as SW 763.

SW 797. Independent Study3-12 Units

Description: Independent studies for doctoral students.

SW 798. Special Topics in Social Work1-6 Units

Prerequisite(s): Kent Doctoral Student, topic cleared by Director or Assistant Director.

Description: Exploration of one or more topics not covered in the regular course offerings. For students after they finish their core courses and are preparing for their comprehensive exam.

SW 799. Dissertation Preparation1-6 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer

Prerequisite(s): Completion of coursework and submission of 'PhD Program Completed Coursework and Comprehensive Exam Committee/Schedule' form to PhD Social Work Program Coordinator.

Description: This section is restricted to students admitted to the PhD Program in Social Work. Research on dissertation project. Full-time students should take the course for 6 credit hours in a single semester, typically with no other courses. Credit hours may vary for part-time students. Connect with the PhD Program Director if there are questions regarding credit hour amount.

Note: Final Exams may be scheduled for and limited to the assigned time in any course type.

Course Fees

Some courses may carry fees beyond the standard tuition costs to cover additional support or materials. Program-, subject- and course-specific fee information can be found on the Office of the Bursar website (<https://louisville.edu/bursar/tuitionfee/university-fees/>).

SOC 604. Proseminar in Sociology-MA1 Unit*Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Description: This course orients students to the graduate program requirements, discusses the expectations for and responsibilities of graduate students, provides information and tools for successful completion of their degree, and encourages professional development, which involves socialization into the department, the field of sociology, and academia at large.

SOC 609. Statistics I3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Description: This is an entry-level graduate course that provides students with the basics of statistical analysis using software (such as Stata and/or SPSS). The course begins by exploring steps for effective data preparation and management, topics which are foundational for accurate analysis and reporting. Next, students treat flexible nonparametric chi-square testing to better understand and make decisions about cross-tabulations of variables and consider additional statistics and tests for reporting associations between variables, including Pearson's r and Spearman's ρ . The course then covers the logic and assumptions of multiple regression modeling for continuous and complete dependent variables, as well as how to interpret regression output. Finally, students are introduced to data visualization principles and common types of charts so that they can "tell the story" of their findings in clear, engaging, and powerful ways.

SOC 615. Research Methods3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Description: This course provides the first step in the process of moving from a consumer to a producer of social research by reviewing fundamental issues in the design of sociological research and issues specific to various types of data collection. Students will be guided through the processes of conceptualizing and developing empirical quantitative and qualitative studies, developing researchable questions and designing methods to answer those questions, assessing common techniques for social science data collection, exploring best practices in social science research, and examining strategies to improve approaches to research. Ultimately, students will be able to work through designs and techniques of a range of methodological approaches and be prepared for more in-depth exploration of quantitative (e.g., survey) and qualitative methods.

SOC 618. Qualitative Research Methods3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): SOC 615 or permission of instructor.

Description: This course is designed to train students in qualitative research methods, sampling, and data analysis techniques using a grounded theory approach. Over the course of the semester, students will have an opportunity to pilot a research study from start to finish, present their work to the class, receive feedback from the professor and classmates, and learn through an active process of constructing new knowledge. By the end of the course, students will have conducted participant observation research, learned to take jottings and turn them into field notes, conducted several in-depth interviews, and learned how to code and analyze data to identify emergent theoretical and/or empirical contributions. By the end of this class, students should be capable of designing and carrying out a qualitative study of their own, using methods that are scientifically appropriate.

SOC 622. Survey Research and Design3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring OnlyPrerequisite(s): SOC 615 or permission of instructor.

Description: This course will cover comprehensive survey planning, including ethical issues paramount to survey-based research; pros and cons of various modes of administration; instrument design (such as operationalizing concepts and constructs into measures, question design considerations, response choices, optimizing layout, etc.); pretesting (such as focus groups and cognitive interviews); sampling; and administration procedures (e.g., follow-up procedures for nonrespondents, strategies to boost response rates, third party survey platforms/tools; privacy issues; data quality checks; transitioning to data analysis, etc.).

SOC 630. Sociology of Education3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered

Description: Education occupies a central role in our society as a site for socialization, social reproduction, and social mobility. This course will consider links between public education goals and prevailing political, economic, and social ideologies; analyze educational processes and structures, such as related to racial, ethnic, class, and gender inequalities; and discuss the ways in which social identities, experiences, resources, conditions, and outcomes interact with school/educational systems. To explore the purpose(s) of schooling, how schools/education systems work, and how they can change, students will examine the historical origins, ideologies, and theories; institutional processes and structures as sources of inequality; and prospects for and debates on reducing educational inequalities.

SOC 631. Sociology of Work3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring Even Years

Description: Examines historical forces which have shaped the social division of labor, various structural arrangements in the workplace, and current occupational trends; the use of sociological theory in the study of industrial society; the social organization of work, alienation, labor relations, personnel policy, the impact of industrialization on social life and culture.

SOC 636. Sociology of Human Sexuality3 Units

Description: Advanced study of the historical, cultural, structural, and social-psychological factors affecting human sexual expression.

SOC 640. Urban Sociology3 Units

Description: Systematic critical examination of the history and application of social theory to the urban place. Specific attention is given to the utility of classical and contemporary theory in predicting and explaining human behavior in the urban environment.

SOC 642. Sociology of Disabilities
3 Units

Description: Intensive examination of sociological perspectives on medicine, culture, and science to examine the meanings, experiences, demographics, and impacts of disability in historical and contemporary social contexts.

Note: Cross-listed with WGST 615.

Note: Credit may not be earned for this course and SOC 442 or WGST 415.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

SOC 645. Environmental Sustainability and Social Change
3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered

Prerequisite(s): SOC 618 or SOC 622; or permission of instructor.

Description: This course provides an overview of U.S. environmental history from both policy and movement perspectives. While the initial focus will be U.S.-based, the course will also examine climate change in the global context. Key areas such as environmental sustainability and the emergent solutions to the "wicked problems" associated with improving and protecting environmental conditions will be explored.

SOC 650. Sociology of Families
3 Units

Description: Study of the institution of the family, including intensive analysis of selected aspects of family group processes.

SOC 655. Social Problems
3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Description: This course offers in an in-depth examination of selected social problems in the Louisville metro and surrounding area and provides student insight into what constitutes a social problem, how to connect data to structural explanations for each social problem, and how two or more social problems are connected. For each social problem, students will read articles/books covering theories and concepts critical for understanding the social problem, explore qualitative and/or quantitative empirical information describing the social problem, discuss local government agencies and non-profit organizations that are attempting to address the social problem, and examine the differential impacts of the social problem from an intersectionality framework.

SOC 665. Sociology of Gender
3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Description: This course examines the ways in which gender structures social life on both the micro level of individual experience and the macro level of social structure. Students will discuss theoretical perspectives on the development of gender and gender stereotypes and explore scientific research and perspectives on gender differences and similarities. The course will also examine the structural foundations and theoretical explanations of gender inequality, as well as the intersectionality of gender and other social locations and identities.

SOC 670. Advanced Demography
3 Units

Description: Advanced study in topics related to population structure, composition, distribution, size, change, and growth.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

SOC 672. Feminist Research and Methods in the Social Sciences
3 Units

Prerequisite(s): Admission to Women's and Gender Studies Graduate Certificate or MA degree program, or admission to Sociology MA program, or permission of instructor.

Description: Through readings across social sciences disciplines (i.e., in sociology, anthropology, psychology, economics, political science), course will analyze many ways feminist theory and methodology have influenced research in the social sciences.

Note: Cross-listed with WGST 602.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

SOC 675. Social Inequality & Stratification
3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring

Description: This course examines the sociology of social stratification and inequality, within, but not limited to, the U.S. context. Social stratification along class, racial, citizenship or legality, and gender lines manifest through inequality within and between social groups in terms of economic, cultural, and social resources, power, and domination. Scholars and policy makers have long been interested in the causes, consequences, and solutions to inequality. Yet, the social complexities that underlie persistent inequality are challenging to understand and address, particularly in the context of economic, political, and social changes. This course will address several key issues, including defining, measuring, and theorizing on social inequality and stratification and how they emerge; why they persist over time; their effects on individual life opportunities and chances; how groups/organizations and societies have worked and continue to work to ameliorate inequality; and how change can occur.

SOC 685. Race and Ethnicity
3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring

Description: Over a century of sociological work on the question of race has led us to a similar conclusion, that race and ethnicity still play a tremendous role in society. Yet, how does and ethnicity matter in today's society? How are ideas about difference strengthened or challenged through social experiences, institutions, and ideologies? What are the social, political, and ethical consequences of mis-understanding the continued salience today? This seminar will focus on the role of race and ethnicity in the production of social ideals, the making of citizens, and our everyday lived experiences. This course will engage in dialogue about historical and contemporary works surrounding race and ethnicity through the exchanges of difference and power and continue toward a deeper sociological appreciation of the contemporary functions through which race and ethnicity continue to be made and remade within society.

SOC 690. Independent Study-MA 1-6 Units Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): Permission of instructor. Description: Students may request permission to conduct an independent study which explores a topic of interest to the student and is in the realm of expertise of a sociology faculty member who has agreed to supervise the study. Students interested in conducting an independent study should contact the graduate advisor in Sociology for details. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	SOC 706. Doctoral Exam Preparation 3-9 Units Grading Basis: Pass/Fail Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): Consent or graduate advisor. Description: This course provides doctoral students the opportunity to prepare for their comprehensive exams. Note: May be repeated for a total of 9 credit hours. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
SOC 691. Topical Seminar in Sociology 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered Description: A special topics course explores a topic not covered in existing courses. Topics will vary but, when offered, will be announced in the Schedule of Classes. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	SOC 710. Statistics II 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Spring Only Prerequisite(s): SOC 609 or permission of instructor. Description: This course surveys multivariate regression techniques (a.k.a., generalized linear models) and provides an introduction to fitting regression models in the social sciences. Students will learn how to select and execute regression models appropriate to several types of dependent variables (ordinary least squares, binary logistic, multinomial logistic, ordered logistic, Poisson, and negative binomial regression models). Students will also learn how to perform key robustness checks for each type of regression and how to approach corrections for problems uncovered. Finally, students will learn how to interpret and communicate results of multivariate regression models to a scientific audience and gain an increased ability to incorporate empirical data analysis into their own work. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
SOC 692. Thesis Administration 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Description: This independent study course requires students to work on their thesis under the direction of their thesis committee chair. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm) SOC 693. Thesis Analysis 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Description: This independent study requires students to conduct the research portion of their thesis, specifically a secondary data analysis, survey research, or qualitative research under the direction of their thesis methodologist. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)	SOC 715. Statistics III 3 Units Term Typically Offered: Fall Only Prerequisite(s): SOC 710 or permission of instructor. Description: This course is intended to help students to carry out research in situations wherein there are two or more dependent variables to be analyzed simultaneously. Presentation of material will have an applied focus in which students will analyze data with Stata and/or SPSS/Amos software and present findings in tabular, graphical, and textual formats. The course begins with students assessing the landscape of possible applications of multivariate statistics, and the first substantive topic will be cluster analysis, which explores how cases may be classified into groups using multiple criteria. The course then segues into exploratory and confirmatory factor analysis, with the latter being especially useful for an in-depth treatment of structural equation modeling (SEM). SEM permits students to estimate statistics for latent variables and perform both causal model testing and exploration. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)
SOC 695. Thesis Research 1-9 Units Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, Summer Prerequisite(s): Consent of graduate advisor. Description: This course provides an opportunity for students to finish their thesis and defend it before a faculty committee. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm) SOC 704. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm)

SOC 735. Classical Theory3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Description: This course focuses on some of the classical sociological theories that have provided the framework for sociological work and will examine the perspectives of influential theorists whose ideas have shaped and are still shaping the discipline of sociology. The course is designed to motivate students to systematically read and comprehend primary texts written by influential social thinkers and explore the social world of the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries and the ramifications of these explanations for today's social world. Ultimately, students will be able to understand some of the fundamental arguments and theoretical texts in sociology by identifying each theory regarding its concepts, logic, analytical assumptions, and implications and developing a comparative understanding of classical theoretical frameworks. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

SOC 738. Contemporary Theory3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Description: This course focuses on key bodies of contemporary sociological theory that expand, challenge, and/or lie outside the bounds of classical sociological theories and is designed to motivate students to systematically read and comprehend primary texts written by influential social thinkers and develop a sense of how theory emerges from socio-historical context. Ultimately, students will be able to understand some of the fundamental arguments and theoretical texts in sociology by identifying each theory regarding its concepts, logic, analytical assumptions, and implications and developing a comparative understanding of contemporary theoretical frameworks. For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

SOC 740. Social Policy3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Spring Only

Description: This course examines the main areas of social policy from an interdisciplinary perspective with emphasis on a variety of sociological approaches to policy-making and analysis. It is designed to introduce students to major tools used in the study of social policy, primarily the sub-fields of implementation, analysis, and theory. Students will gain a critical understanding of how to apply key theoretical concepts and methodological approaches to questions related to social policy, and discern the relative strengths and limitations of different approaches. They will also learn how areas of social policy intersect and change over time. (Students taking this course are expected to have a basic understanding of social science research methods and theory.) For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

SOC 790. Independent Study-PhD1-6 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring, SummerPrerequisite(s): Consent of graduate advisor.

- TA 577. Women in American Theatre and Drama - WR 3 Units
Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered
Description: The lack of gender parity in American theatre was in the spotlight in the Spring of 2017, when Paula Vogel and Lynn Nottage, two veteran, Pulitzer-Prize winning playwrights, finally received Broadway debuts. The title of Michael Paulson's New York Times piece on this momentous event in American theatre history asks a crucial question pursued by this course: "Two Female Playwrights Arrive on Broadway. What Took So Long?" Paulson points out a glaring discrepancy between the gender demographics of Broadway spectators and the gender identities of the authors produced on Broadway. Roughly 67% of Broadway audiences are female; yet, Vogel's Indecent and Nottage's Sweat were the only new plays by women in a Broadway season that included eight new plays by men. Paulson also notes that the presence of two new plays by women in the 2016-17 Broadway season signals that some strides have been made since the 2013-14 Broadway season, which featured no new plays by women.

WGST 500. Senior Seminar in Women's, Gender and Sexuality Studies:Social Sciences - CUE, WR*3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Occasionally OfferedPrerequisite(s): Senior standing or consent of instructor.

Description: This course introduces students to the interdisciplinary study of gender through the lens of feminist scholarship. It examines how feminism, as an academic field, has contributed to the development of research across disciplines by asking new questions, reevaluating standards of evidence, and broadening the scope of inquiry to include diverse perspectives. Students will explore how the framing of social issues and research topics influences the production of knowledge. Emphasis will be placed on analytical frameworks for understanding how institutions and cultural norms shape human experiences. Students will build critical thinking skills and gain tools for examining complex social systems.

Note: Approved for the Arts and Sciences upper-level requirement in written communication (WR).

Course Attribute(s): CUE - This course fulfills the Culminating Undergraduate Experience (CUE) requirement for certain degree programs. CUE courses are advanced-level courses intended for majors with at least 90 earned credits/senior-level status.

WGST 504. Community Engaged Research Methods3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Description: This course will examine the principles and methods of community-engaged research practices from a transdisciplinary gender studies framework and with two goals in mind. First, we will examine what it means to do community engaged scholarship in some branches of the social sciences and humanities through a) a brief survey of key canonical and experimental readings in histories, theories, ethics, and practices of community engaged scholarship, and b) a few models presented by other UL community engaged scholars whose work provides useful lessons learned. Second, the course will provide both an overview of key qualitative methods used in community engaged scholarship and hands-on opportunities for you to participate in, on a small scale, meaningful engaged research with a community partner (Muhammad Ali Center's Education Department). Together, this learning the literature and learning-by-doing are designed to help you imagine what it might be like for you to work in this tradition.

Note: Cross-listed with WGST 604.

Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

For class offerings for a specific term, refer to the Schedule of Classes (<http://htmlaccess.louisville.edu/classSchedule/setupSearchClassSchedule.cfm>)

WGST 508. Queer Performance3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered

Description: What defines queer performance? Is it rooted in identity, expression, or both? How have artists used performance to explore and challenge conventional ideas about gender, sexuality, and identity? This course considers the historical, aesthetic, and cultural dimensions of performance often labeled as "queer", attending to where it is staged, how it is received, and who produces it. We will examine the work of performers whose practices engage with, question, or expand social norms related to gender and identity. These artists may complicate traditional expectations, offering alternative ways of understanding how identities are expressed and interpreted in performance. In addition to exploring a range of performance styles and practitioners sometimes described as lesbian, gay, trans, or queer we will also consider the broader social, political, and institutional contexts in which these performances occur. Students will reflect on what it means to watch and interpret these performances.

Note: Cross-listed with WGST 608 and HUM 608.

WGST 509. Women and Medicine3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered

Description: In this course we will focus on women and medicine in the United States from the early 19th century to the 21st century. We will be concerned with women as patients, caretakers, and practitioners, and the sexual and racial politics of health care.

WGST 511. Transnational Feminism3 Units*Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring

Description: Transnational Feminism in Theory and Praxis is both an introduction to transnational feminism and a methods class. Using a mix of recent and older texts, we will examine how scholars in our field of Women's, Gender, and Sexuality Studies (WGST) innovatively link research questions with methods, sources, and interlocutors. In the process, we will reflect on the relationship between what we value as knowledge, and how we pursue and construct knowledge: in other words, the relationship between feminist epistemology and methodology. With an eye towards praxis - the theoretically informed application of knowledge - we will ask ourselves, for whom do we research?

WGST 525. Art and Trauma3 Units*Prerequisite(s): ARTH 270 and ARTH 325, or permission of instructor.

Description: Representations of Trauma in the Visual Arts is an advanced exploratory seminar examining the changing relationships between trauma and its representation in the twentieth century. Beginning with the Holocaust, the course charts a trajectory from this most profound of collective traumas, to the refinement of clinical definitions of trauma (e.g., PTSD) in the wake of the Vietnam War, the development of trauma studies in the humanities in the 1990s, to the recent "pictorial turn" within scholarship on trauma. This historical framework will be brought to bear upon the dynamics of how trauma and visibility have been approached by scientists, scholars, and artists. Each week's reading and viewing materials will offer students an example of historical or clinical account of trauma, a secondary or applied analysis, and its artist's original work that responds to the particular traumatic event under consideration. In this regard, students will be encouraged to negotiate the discursive relationships between history, theory, and practice.

WGST 604. Community Engaged Research Methods3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Fall Only

Description: This course will examine the principles and methods of community-engaged research practices from a transdisciplinary gender studies framework and with two goals in mind. First, we will examine what it means to do community engaged scholarship in some branches of the social sciences and humanities through a) a brief survey of key canonical and experimental readings in histories, theories, ethics, and practices of community engaged scholarship, and b) a few models presented by other UL community engaged scholars whose work provides useful lessons learned. Second, the course will provide both an overview of key qualitative methods used in community engaged scholarship and hands-on opportunities for you to participate in, on a small scale, meaningful engaged research with a community partner (Muhammad Ali Center's Education Department). Together, this learning the literature and learning-by-doing are designed to help you imagine what it might be like for you to work in this tradition.

Note: Cross-listed with WGST 504.

Course Attribute(s): CBL - This course includes Community-Based Learning (CBL). Students will engage in a community experience or project with an external partner in order to enhance understanding and application of academic content.

WGST 608. Queer Performance3 Units

Term Typically Offered: Occasionally Offered

Description: What defines queer performance? Is it rooted in identity, expression, or both? How have artists used performance to explore and challenge conventional ideas about gender, sexuality, and identity? This course considers the historical, aesthetic, and cultural dimensions of performance often labeled as "queer", attending to where it is staged, how it is received, and who produces it. We will examine the work of performers whose practices engage with, question, or expand social norms related to gender and identity. These artists may complicate traditional expectations, offering alternative ways of understanding how identities are expressed and interpreted in performance. In addition to exploring a range of performance styles and practitioners sometimes described as lesbian, gay, trans, or queer we will also consider the broader social, political, and institutional contexts in which these performances occur. Students will reflect on what it means to watch and interpret these performances.

Note: Cross-listed with WGST 608 and HUM 608.

Term Typically Offered: Fall, Spring

Description: This course explores the historical experiences of African American women with a focus on their agency and decision-making related to reproductive health and family life. Students will examine how African American women have navigated important choices about if, when, how, where, and with whom to have children, within various social and historical contexts. Drawing on interdisciplinary scholarship, including the work of Loretta Ross, the course presents a framework for understanding these decisions in relation to health care, community life, and family structures. Topics include the reproductive experiences of enslaved women, the development of medical practices, public health initiatives, community advocacy, maternal health in institutional settings, and the use of reproductive technology.

Note: Cross-listed with WGST 542.
